The girl who must support herself should learn at the very start not to go into business with the idea of doing the least amount of work possible for her salary, but with the determination to do the work allotted to her thoroughly, no matter how long it takes and to be always ready for more. This is the spirit which wins out in the end.

Another little word on this subject. The more a girl dislikes her line of work the more conscientious she should be about doing it thoroughly.

It is easy to do work well and to give overtime to it when the work is congenial and enjoyable, but when a girl longs to shirk at her business and finds it unpleasant, that is just the time when she needs to buckle down to real labor. The mere exertion of forcing herself to accomplish her duties well and thoroughly will eventually make the work more interesting and therefore more pleasant.

Unique Gold Coin.

A unique gold coin has just been purchased by the trustees of the British Museum with the assistance of some private subscribers. It is the only known example of the gold coinage of the Anglo-Saxon King Offa (A.D. 757-796), the most celebrated of all the Mercian princes, the friend of Charlemagne and the recipient of many presents from that emperor.

The coin is remarkable not only on account of its uniqueness and of the fact that it is the earliest gold coin that can be definitely ascribed to any English king, but also because, although it was struck by a Christian king, it bears a Mohammedan inscription in Arabic. At the time of the issuing of the coin the Arabic dinar fromed a large part of the gold currency of Europe and it is believed that it was for this reason that Offa caused an exact imitation of an existing Arabic coin to be made for his own use.

The coin is in a very fine state of preservation. The existence of this specimen has been known since 1841. It was obtained in Rome by the late Duc de Blacas, but from 1841 till 1907 nothing was known of its whereabouts.

Ridged Nails.

The little emery boards should be used daily to remove any roughened edges from the nails, and it is advisable to use these every day instead of the steel file. Where the nails are scaly and ridged it shows an excess of acid in the blood. Those afflicted with rheumatism often find their nails ridged as they grow and the ends will break off in fine scales. Some treatment for the disease itself should be used, and, in addition, a small piece of wash leather, dipped into powdered pumice stone, will make the nails fairly smooth, but there should also be used a little thick gelatin. Dip each nail in this at night, wrap the fingers separately in old linen and let it remain all night. Dip each into warm water next morning. This helps greatly in preventing and curing the scaliness.

Simple Nail Powder.

A good nail powder is made of a quarter ounce of talcum powder, boric acid and starch, also powdered very fine. Add a few drops of carmine tincture. Mix the powders and add the tincture. Pass the whole through a fine sieve three times, forcing out all lumps. Coat the nails with a very small bit, rubbing it in well with the fingers; then use the buffer lightly. If too much is applied it should be rinsed off, the nails carefully wiped dry and then the buffer used, finishing by rubbing the nails of one hand on the palm of the other, a natural polisher.

Too Much Manicuring.

When the finger nails are constantly breaking and seem soft and brittle there is either something wrong in the general health or they are improperly cared for. Many women in the effort to have nice nails scrub and file and polish all the health out of them, making them frail and too thin. Usually too much manicuring does the harm, so it is just as well to let them alone once in awhile, permitting them to thicken and harden, so they will stand the ordinary wear and tear of daily use.

White Spots on Nails.

When white spots appear on the nails they show a bruised condition, although the cause may not be recalled, and they also denote a highly nervous condition of the system. Melt a half ounce of myrrh and refined pitch and spread over the nails at night, wearing glove fingers. In the morning apply olive oil to remove this, and use almond meal in place of soap for the hands.

THE NEW COLOR THEORY

MONTREAL ARTIST CREATES A SENSATION IN HIS CRAFT.

Michel Jacobs Has Hit Upon a Color System In His Painting Which May Be Revolutionary In Its Effect on the Art—He Can Combine Red and Green to Secure a Brilliant Yellow.

Mr. Michel Jacobs, the exhibitor of two important pictures at this year's Royal Canadian Academy, is a native of Montreal, who has recently returned to his birthplace, and who is not only an artist of unusual promise, but the discoverer of a color theory which is as novel as it promises to be revolutionary in methods of painting.

This discovery is partly explained by the fact that for many years, Mr. Jacobs was a mechanical engineer, during most of which time he was also an art student. When the time came, after the death of his mother, when he could give his entire time to study the embryo artist packed his belongings and with $200 started for Paris.

There be began a new chapter in his life, studied hard at Julien's and the Beaux Arts as well as under Paul Laurens. It was about two years ago that science came to the aid of Art, and Mr. Jacobs began to question the usual accepted for mula of color pigments, which declares blue, red, and yellow to be the primary colors, and the complementary color of any one of these to be the mixture of the other two.

Instead of accepting this, the scientific artist began to experiment for his own use in painting with the primary colors of the spectrum, which are known to be red, green, and violet, the secondary colors being blue, yellow, and purple. This theory of light rays may be applied to the use of pigments, Mr. Jacobs claimed.

MR. MICHEL JACOBS.

"But," arises the natural query, "how is it possible to combine red and green pigments to produce yellow, for instance?"

Mr. Jacobs' answer is that according to the scientific laws of rays of light it is possible to combine red with green to produce a brilliant yellow. When he is painting a yellow object in a white light, he breaks into it with green and red. To produce a brilliant blue, green and violet rays must be combined.

To reproduce nature, a picture must be painted according to the laws of the spectrum, is Mr. Jacobs' verdict, after testing his theory, elaborating it, and proving it. The colors must be kept separate after the manner of the pointetelle school, of course. Also it must be understood that spectrum laws apply to color seen in sunlight, only as other lights have not the same proportion of colored rays.

Mr. Jacobs' later work is the best exponent of his own theory. His portrait of Israel Zangwill exhibited this year at the R. C. A. has transparency of shadow, clear color and is a fine characterization of the personality so widely known through his writings.

Among other portraits which the artist has done while abroad are a double one of Madame Pavlowa and Monsieur Mordkin, one of the famous pianist, Madame Carveno, from the dim background of which peer the faces of the great composers she interprets — Katherini Goodson, the English pianist, Prof. Carp, of Mannheim, and Mischa Elman.

In landscape is a field as yet almost untouched by Mr. Jacobs, but in decoration, in its largest sense of "composing" the color scheme and arrangement of a room, this artist has had considerable experience, one of the most noted achievements being a drawing room in a German castle. Grey was the background, so to speak, the tone of floor and walls, all the color being concentrated in the decorative panels of birds and flowers, given in the vivid color and manner of the post impressionist, the design of the panels being repeated in the furniture covers, for which it was specially manufactured. There is nothing either dull or timid about the "tout ensemble" of this creation by Mr. Jacobs, and to untrained eyes it might seem crude, but it is in line with the refreshingly vivid feeling of the best of the new school.—M. L. A. F. in Toronto Star Weekly.

Hard to Decide.

"What are you pondering about, Marie?"

"My husband and myself are dividing the furniture pending a divorce."

"Well?"

"If you were I, would you rather have an icebox and six dining room chairs than an old style piano with a chipped leg?"

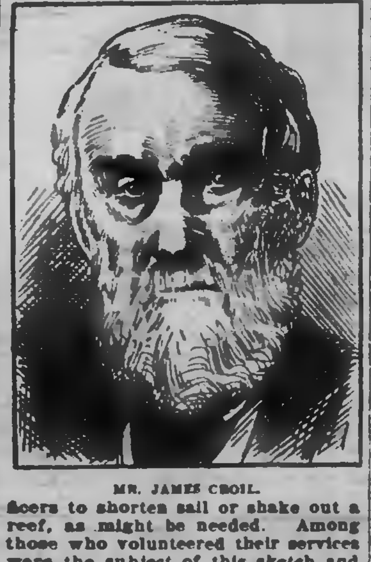
EX-EDITOR OF PRESBYTERIAN RECORD FINISHES VOLUME

Mr. James Croil Has Had an Active Career as Journalist And Historian of the Presbyterian Church—He Came From Scotland to Canada in 1811.

Mr. James Croil, the well-known author and ex-editor of The Presbyterian Record, recently celebrated his ninety-second birthday, after a lifetime devoted to literature and active work in many places. Mr. Croil was born in Glasgow in 1821, and educated at the New Academy, Edinburgh; the Grange School, Sunderland, and Glasgow University. After an apprenticeship of two years to farming in East Lothian, then, as now, the garden of Scotland, he sailed for New York in the emigrant ship "Clyde," and reached his destination after a fine voyage of forty days, to find the thermometer indicating 106 degrees in the shade.

Thence to Montreal, which occupied four days by steamer and stage, and the seventeen miles of railway from St. John's, on Lake Champlain, to Laprairie, at that time the only passenger railway in Canada, opened for traffic in 1837. That was in 1841, when he came to visit friends and spy out the land.

His second journey, in 1844, occupied forty-two days, and was relieved from monotony by a mutiny of the crew in mid-ocean, which continued until the pilot took charge of the ship off Sandy Hook. Such of the cabin passengers as chose, joined the cook, the carpenter and the ship's officers to shorten sail or shake out a reef, as might be needed. Among those who volunteered their services were the subject of this sketch and his life-long friend, Robert Graham, who was so long associated with The Montreal Star.



MR. JAMES CROIL.

In 1845 Mr. Croil purchased the old Crysler Farm in the Township of Williamsburg, to which he gave the name of Archerfield, in remembrance of the beautiful property of that name in East Lothian, dear to him in the days of his apprenticeship. The farm occupied about 500 acres of land fronting on the St. Lawrence, nearly one-half of which was as yet primeval forest. Here Mr. Croil soon learned that farming in Canada was very different from that in East Lothian, and that he must serve a second apprenticeship, but it did not take long to convince him that his lot had been cast in a pleasant place, and that the inhabitants of Dundas County, taken as a whole, were as fine a people as one could wish to meet, and that he had much to learn from his exemplary neighbors.

In those days they had neither reaping nor thrashing machines, and it goes without saying that the women had no sewing machines. The grain was reaped by scythe, sickle or cradle. The thrashing floor in the great old barn resembled that of Ornan, the Jebusite, close upon three thousand years ago.

For twenty-five years in all, Mr. Croil occupied the old Crysler farm. In 1865 he was appointed General Agent of the Presbyterian Church of Canada, in connection with the Church of Scotland, and in 1870 bade farewell to Archerfield, to the County of Dundas, and to a host of friends, and took up his residence in Montreal.

Croil's "Dundas," published in 1861, contains a concise sketch of Canadian history, and more particularly of the County of Dundas, ending with a full account of the visit of the Prince of Wales to Canada in 1860. The address presented to the prince by Dundas County was written by Mr. Croil, and by him placed in the hands of His Royal Highness at Ottawa. Mr. Croil has in his possession three letters from His late Majesty King Edward, all couched in gracious terms. Of "Croil's Dundas" two thousand copies were printed.

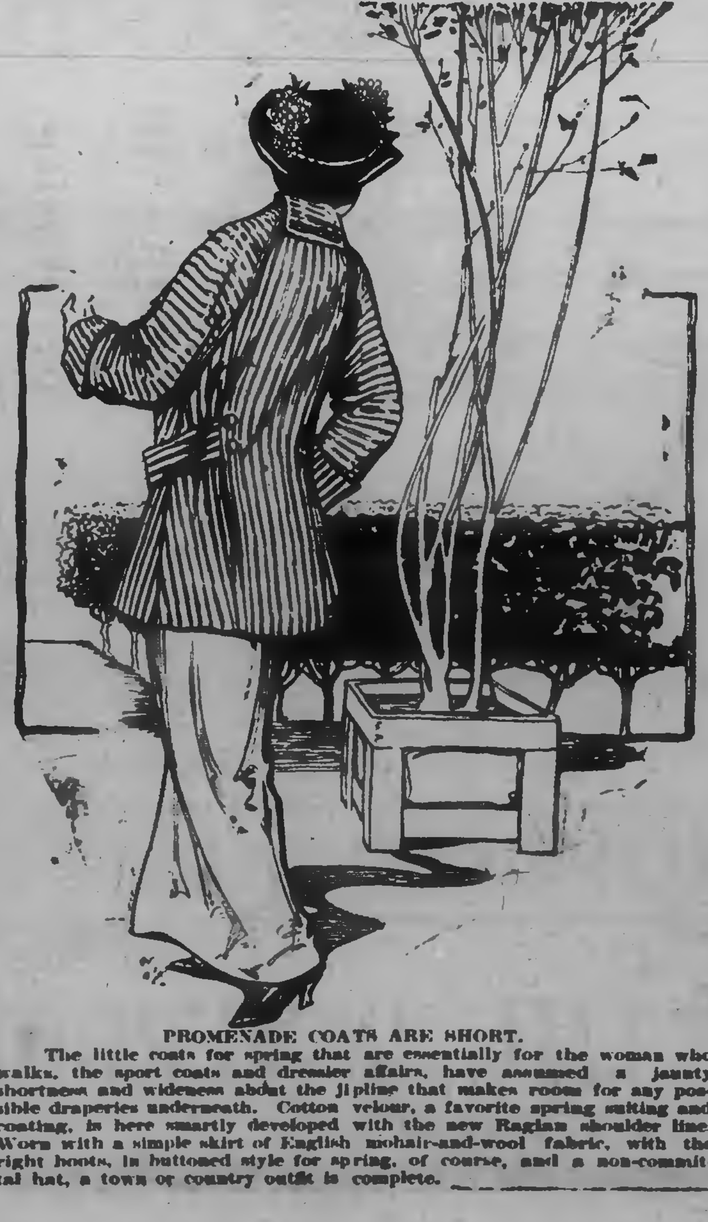
Among Mr. Croil's other publications are the following: Historical and Statistical Report of the Kirk in Canada, Montreal, 1867; Life of Alexander Mathison, D.D., Montreal, 1870; Story of the Kirk in the Maritime Provinces, Montreal, 1875; The Mission Problem, Toronto, 1883; The Noble Army of Martyrs, Philadelphia, 1893; Steam Navigation, Toronto, 1898; Genesis of Churches in the United States, Newfoundland and Canada, Montreal, 1907; History of St. Paul's Church, Montreal, 1910; A Souvenir, Montreal, 1910; Gleanings from the Nineteenth Century, Montreal, 1913.

Mr. Croil was secretary of the Church's Temporalities Fund and of the Ministers' Widows' and Orphans' Fund; he was also for many years, editor of The Presbyterian and of The Presbyterian Record. Mr. Croil has been also an extensive traveler in Europe, America, Russia and Japan.

Cinder in the Eye.

A railroad engineer who gets a cinder in his eye never rubs it; he rubs the eye that has no cinder in it. This starts the tears to flow in both eyes and probably washes out the cinder.

THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION



PROMENADE COATS ARE SHORT.

The little coats for spring that are essentially for the woman who walks, the sport coats and dressier affairs, have assumed a jaunty shortness and wideness about the hipline that makes room for any possible draperies underneath. Cotton velour, a favorite spring suiting and coating, is here smartly developed with the new Raglan shoulder line. Worn with a simple skirt of English mohair-and-wool fabric, with the right boots, in buttoned style for spring, of course, and a non-committal hat, a town or country outfit is complete.

Woman's World

Artistic Triumph For Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

Of all the designs submitted for the memorial in honor of the heroes of the Titanic wreck, that of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney was adjudged the best and she was given the commission. Mrs. Whitney will now proceed with the work of preparing the statue. It is anticipated that it will be erected in Potomac park, Washington. Congress is expected to set aside a plot of ground there on which it may be put up.

The sketch, which was submitted in an invitation competition with seven other sculptors, shows the heroic figure of a man standing, with arms outstretched and head thrown back, as though eager for sacrifice. "Sacrifice" is, in fact, the title that Mrs. Whitney gave to the figure. From a distance the figure takes the form of a cross.

The sum of $45,000 has been secured through the efforts of the woman's Titanic memorial committee, which includes hundreds of women prominent throughout the country.

Mrs. Whitney, who was Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, began her art work very modestly, and at first never exhibited it under her name. Little by little, as if encouraged by favorable criticisms, she became more and more ambitious, entered public competitions and won prizes at exhibitions.

Last spring in Paris a marble fountain of hers received the honor of a special installation in the salon. In the design three more than life sized men held up the broad bowl from which the water gushed, and in addition to the real water there were palms and a grass inclosure to add to the parklike effect. This fountain was for a courtyard in a Washington building.

In the Architectural league exhibition of 1908 Mrs. Whitney, in association with Grosvenor Atterbury, architect, and Hugo Ballin, painter, won the special prize for a work combining the three arts. Mrs. Whitney's contribution to the design was a fountain.

Another piece of work of Mrs. Whitney familiar to New Yorkers is the great sculptural figures in the Hotel Belmont, the caryatids that support the ceiling in the entrance hall.

She is also associated prominently in the group that is designing the sculptural embellishments for the San Francisco fair. Her fountain, called "El Dorado," is to stand in the court of honor at the exposition.

Her studio on West Eighth street, New York, near the Macdougal alley studios, is being enlarged and improved in anticipation of her return to this country, supposedly about April 1. She and Mr. Whitney are now abroad.

A Stab at It.

"'Hic jacet,'" quoted Miss Pechis as they strolled through the cemetery—"what does that mean on all these old tombstones?"

"Why—er—you see," began Bluffer, "that's an abbreviation for 'hickory jacket,' that is to say, 'hickory coffin.' That's the kind they used in old times, see?"

Willing, but Not Accomplished.

Mistress (to cook)—Now, Bridget, I'm going to give a party. I sincerely hope you will make yourself generally useful.

Bridget (much flattered) — Shure, mum. Oi'll do my best. But (confidentially) Oi'm so sorry Oi can't dance, mum.

To Be Out Again.

Cholly—Yaas; she was out when I called, but I hope for bettah luck next time.

Miss Pepprey—How ungallant of you! You should wish her the good luck.

Appropriate.

"He has started publishing a monthly paper for barbers, you know."

Indeed! I suppose it's very appropriately illustrated with cuts."

"Do you prefer city life?" asked the dandelion politely.

"Well, I am down on the farm," replied the thistle.

ILLUSION.

Did you ever sort o' hanker
  For a lazy loafing spell
Far away from mart or office
  Where the people buy and sell,
Just to be as free and easy
  As a bird upon the wing
And not have a bit of bother
  With a single blessed thing?

Nothing on your mind or conscience,
  Just a calm, untroubled blank,
With no thoughts about the morrow
  Or your balance at the bank,
Just in garments built for comfort,
  Without collar, pin or tie,
In an old and easy hammock
  To observe the clouds go by?

No alarm clock sounding warning
  Of the day of work ahead,
No complaining should you fancy
  Half the morn to lie in bed,
No one coming with his troubles
  In your patient ear to tell,
Not a sound but nature's music
  And the welcome dinner bell?

Not the faintest dull suggestion
  Of the turmoil and the strife
In the world you left behind you,
  Just the simple, quiet life;
No contentions and no clamor,
  There at no one's beck and call
In the land of noon and summer
  Nothing doing; that is all?

Hazardous Occupation.

"I suppose you are a veteran of the war?"

"No; I never smelled powder."

"Then how did you lose your arm, may I ask?"

"Working at my trade, madam."

"Round heavy machinery, I presume?"

"No; I had to entertain the women who were waiting for an appointment with the doctor."

"And how did that cause the injury?"

"Can't you see they talked an arm off?"

Showed the Effect.

"I don't know what I am going to do with those children," said the lady bookworm. "They are getting so impudent and unruly that there is no living with them."

"I thought you would hear from them when I saw them going through those French novels the other day," said the sympathetic caterpillar.

Ought to Be.

"This is a ground floor proposition."

"Sure of that?"

"Oh, yes."

"What is it?"

"Cement for basements."

Feminine Instinct.

"What day had I better pay my taxes?" she asked.

"Doesn't make any difference."

"Isn't there any bargain day?"

Expressed It.

RECLAIMED LANDS.

The long, flat lands out reach, field after field,
  Low-lying at the hem
Of snarling seas that beat against the shield
  Of dykes that shelter them.

No more the landward-lifting waves will drown
  These shores with storm and tide;
The guardian earth they cannot battle down;
  The sea is shut outside.

I hear the voices of the days long gone
  Clamour and call to me,
O love, the shelter of your arms alone
  Shuts out the wolfish sea!

Better not go to the Yukon gold fields to hunt your fortune, was the hint dropped in a recent lecture by Prof. Coleman.

The individual miners have made their pile and got out, leaving the ground to huge corporations, according to the professor. One company, he described, has piped water for 60 miles to the scene of its operations in gravel pits. The yield is as small as $2.50 worth of gold to a ton of material treated. Besides this hydraulic method of getting the gold there are the dredges which eat their way up even very small streams dredging up the bottom and extracting the ore as they go.

This message shocked the ears of Chief Marshall in the small hours of a morning recently. It was a long distance call from Shelburne, and it was the voice of an excited woman.

But it was even worse than the trained mind of the chief could have imagined.

DESERTED METLACATLA

BRITISH COLUMBIA TOWN WAS ONCE A BUSY CENTRE.

It's Palmy Days Date Back to the Time When Father Duncan Led the Indians From Savagery Into the Ways of Peace and Built Them a Church—Then Dissension Entered In and They Left.

Less than a hundred years ago the Indians up around the Arctic Circle were killing each other for food. We have occasional glimpses of this ceremony to-day on the films of the moving picture machines. The weird, ungainly dances, the more weird noises, the war whoops and gaudy ornaments. Then the sombre feasts around a great crackling fire, says Margaret Bell in Toronto Globe.

Into this scene of barbarism came a young man of simple habits and kindly disposition. Father Duncan they learned to call him. Father Duncan had great faith in an all-pervading Omnipotence, and went about showing that faith. He learned to speak their tongue, he watched them at their bow and arrow practice. And soon they ceased to kill their fellows and roast them over the camp fires.

Father Duncan was becoming established. He lived in a small log hut, and tilled a bit of land at the back of it. And the great, hulking fellows would come silently along, and watch the white-faced man working under the Arctic skies.

Small wonder that they learned to look upon him as a sort of god. His principles were not warlike, he was just in all his dealings, as the great god of all the Indians was supposed to be.

And soon they began to forget any god but the one he represented. And they thrived, under the new dispensation, their squaws gave them new Indians, and their workings in leather found a market in the country to the south of them.

They even worshipped in the hut of Father Duncan, who had no creed but the creed of honesty and conscientious work.

But he was not popular with the authorities of the orthodox Church. They did not agree with his practical views on religion. Their religion had a creed, a theory, which placed their Deity on high and regarded Him from afar.

And so they banded together and decided that Father Duncan must leave. He was not of their faith, and he was influencing the Indians to believe in his faith. True, they had never succeeded in changing the faith of the Indians, but they were determined that no one else should.

The good Father heard of the bickerings and felt the spirit of unrest which swept over the people. So he moved away from his little hut and bit of land, away across the boundary into British Columbia.

At Metlacatla he established what is known to-day as The Holy City. It stands on the seashore, just across from Prince Rupert, the western terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific.

His followers went with him to the new country and prepared to establish for themselves a new home more comfortable than they had ever known.

They built a pretty little church, built it with their own hard, brown hands. They cut down the fragrant cedar trees, trimmed them, and built their church from the native wood. There was a great celebration when it was finished, and never was white man prouder of any achievement than these uncouth red men of their first church.

The Metlacatla Indians became known for their industry, and their painstaking earnestness in furthering their industries. And more: the tribes who used to live on each other became the least warlike.

But ill-luck seemed to shadow the kind Father. The beautiful church, of which he was so proud, was burned to the ground through jealousy.

For there were constant bickerings amongst the white-faced people. Bickerings as to the religion established by this stranger; bickerings about the industry he had established among the Indians.

The good Father was blind and deaf to the bickerings for awhile. He rebuilt his church and went quietly about his work. At last, however, he became tired of the controversies of opinion. He longed for a quiet spot where he could live as he wished. So he decided to leave the Holy City he had established. He went back to establish his religion and home in the Alaska which had driven him out before. Of the twelve hundred followers he had in Metlacatla, over eight hundred went with him.

But they left many reminders. Wonderful carvings cut in great cedar trees. These are the family totems. They took large trees, anywhere from ten to fifty feet high, and carved upon them grotesque birds, bears, fishes, and animals of all sorts. Each carved figure represented something—part of their faith in nature, or a tribute to their deity. The white man cannot appreciate the totems of the Indians.

The most remarkable one stands on the seashore, where a neglected road now leads up from the landing to the village of Metlacatla. This is made of granite. One might call it a monument. It represents a mother holding her child in her lap. Rising from the head of the figure like a high hat, the monument extends some six feet, terminating in a square top, six or eight inches in diameter.

At the bottom is inscribed some strange epitaph, no one knows what. But the Indians know the meaning of it. They say that the monument was erected in memory of a white woman who dwelt amongst them, and died in their midst.

Metlacatla to-day is a lonely spot. Great, stolid men sit on empty boxes in the shops, smoking their long pipes and talking of the days that were.

Hobnobbing With the Great.

Mr. Oscar Browning is proud of the fact that during a long life he has made the acquaintance of more distinguished men and women than any Englishman living. It is an amiable idiosyncrasy of his to hobnob with the great, and then share his impressions with the public.

For more than sixty years Eton and King's College, Cambridge, have occupied Mr. Browning's life, but he has traveled extensively over Europe and dropped in on many foreign notabilities. He was on speaking terms with most of the great ones of the Victorian era, and as a society chronicler he would be hard to beat. He takes a great interest in the rising generation, and was the first university don to institute informal gatherings with the object of getting into touch with the undergraduates. For more than thirty-five years his Sunday evening gatherings in his rooms at King's College have been a feature of Cambridge life.

Pension Totalled $210,000.

A record in state pensions is established in the case of Viscount Cross, former Cabinet Minister, whose death occurred recently. He drew a pension of $10,000 yearly for twenty-one years, his total of $210,000 in pension money having been approached only by C. P. Villiers who established the former record of $150,000 at his death in 1898.

There are now only three former ministers drawing pensions, Lord George Hamilton, who receives $10,000 a year, Henry Chaplin, whose pension is $6,000 yearly, and Lord Balfour of Burleigh, who also received $6,000.

These pensions are drawn under an act of Parliament which provides that a former member of Cabinet who has no means to maintain his dignity as an ex-minister may apply for state aid.

Commission System Pays.

The report of the city comptroller and city chamberlain of St. John, N.B., for 1913, under commission government, shows a surplus of nearly $105,000 on the year's operations. Of this half will be applied to the reduction of the assessment for 1914. Assets are shown as $2,500,000 over liabilities. The comptroller, Adam P. MacIntyre, says in his report: "The city's financial position last year was certainly a very satisfactory one, compared with the majority of other cities in Canada."

The city's debts amount to $3,137,450.

NOTHING TO WORRY OVER

Ontario Not Likely to Suffer From Severe Earthquakes.

Ontario's recent earthquake has raised more than a little diquiet in the breasts of timid ones whose knowledge of such things is based upon stories of the fall of Pompeii and the St. Pierre and Messina disasters.

While earthquakes may occur at any time, there is little likelihood of any serious damage from quakes in this part of the world, according to Professor Coleman of the Toronto University.

Ontario and the Great Lake region is situated in what is known to the geologists as the palaeozoic zone. That is in the region where the rock formations are shale, lime stone, sand stone, etc. These are very ancient.

There is another vast expanse of rock known to the geologists as "archaean," which extends from the north side of the St. Lawrence river, east and west, covering some 2,000,000 square miles. This in the vulgar tongue, is called the Laurentian area.

These two formations meet in a "fault plane" in the western and southern section of Quebec, and in the eastern part of Ontario. For this reason there is a prevalency of earthquakes in that district. These formations, from some causes, many of which are unknown to the geologist, slip or adjust themselves to the pressure and conditions. The meeting place of these formations is called a "fault," which means, of course, a crack or fissure.

Just in the vicinity of Quebec there is a very pronounced fissure, and earthquakes are more frequent there on account of the adjustments that take place from time to time. These adjustments are for the most part perpendicular, but they are sometimes horizontal, as in the case of the earthquake in California.

"There have been no serious or destructive earthquakes in Canada in modern time," said Professor Coleman the other day. "There have been no volcanic eruptions here in modern historic times. The theory is that Labrador and all that district where the archaean rocks exist, was at one time covered with ice, and that it was thickest in that portion of Labrador and extending south to the St. Lawrence and through Quebec. The ice covered palaeozoic formation further south did not bear the same burden as the archaean rocks across the north side of the St. Lawrence River and rose to a less extent. The district has been disturbed by smaller quakes or shifts from time to time, and this is on account of the adjustments that take place in the rock formations. They may be ever so slight, and the influence depends upon their nature."

February seems to be a favorite month for Canadian earthquakes, for it was on the 5th of that month, in 1663, that the worst seismic shake ever recorded in Canada took place. Lalemont, a Jesuit, thus records it:

"It began with a great roaring sound heard through the whole extent of Canada. Bells sounded of themselves; beams and joists cracked; the logs of the palisade at Quebec danced about, and many inhabitants were nauseated by the rocking of the earth.

"Trees struck against one another, and leaped on each other with such noise and confusion that the Indians said the whole forest was drunk. A number of men in a boat near Tadousac stared aghast at a large hill which sank into the water before their eyes. And Mother Marie de l'Incarnation tells of a man who ran all night to escape a crack in the earth which opened behind him as he fled. Spectres ran rampant in the forest."

Tangible evidence was not wanting to prove, by geological signs, that a severe convulsion of nature took place at that time, and although the silent records are not so eloquent as the flamboyant language of the Jesuit historian they provide confirmation.

Canadian Lynx Killed.

A Canadian lynx, the first seen in Western Ontario peninsula for many years, was killed about three miles east of Ridgetown on the Orford town line. A young man has been setting traps, and on visiting the trap the other morning found some large animal had been caught, but had escaped. Procuring another trap, he set it in the same place, and the next morning found the lynx. A club soon dispatched the animal, which measured over three feet.

"MY KIDNEYS HURT ME ALL THE TIME"

Gin Pills Cured Them. Free Sample Box Leads to Cure.

Only those who have been tortured with Kidney Trouble can appreciate how Mr. Trumper suffered. Being a railroad man, he was called upon to do all kinds of heavy work. The constant strain of lifting, weakened the kidneys.

I received the sample box of Gin Pills and was greatly benefitted by them. My kidneys were in such bad condition I could not lift or stoop without pain. In fact, they pained me nearly all the time. I have taken three boxes of Gin Pills, working all the time at heavy work on the railroad and did not lose a day.

Only Four Nets Savel.

The fishermen at Point Edward and along the shore of Lake Huron were hard hit by the big lake storm in November last. Out of all the nets possessed by the harvesters of the deep, only four remain after the tempest. These are all that were salvaged in the district extending from the mouth of the St. Clair river to Goderich. For the last three months the fishermen have been busy night and day repairing nets, boats, etc., damaged by the storm.

Twenty years ago on the First of March next, a well-known resident of this city took out at age 28 a 10 pay 20 year endowment policy for $1,000, No. 43860, in the Sun Life of Canada.

The premium he paid on the participating plan was $69.30
The premium he would have on the non-par plan is........................ 62.25

Extra paid for profits yearly for ten years. $7.05

He received in cash at the end of 20 years, $1,279.25, that is, the $70.50 extra that he paid for profits yielded him $279.25, almost 400 per cent.

Would you not like something like that?

Or, he could draw out $736.45 in cash, which is $43.45 more than all he paid in, and receive a fully paid-up participating policy for life.

You can never obtain such results as these on the non-participating plan unless you die and die early, so that the price will not become too high.

For particulars in your case call or 'phone the Sun Life office, Crown Chambers Building.

DRYSDALE, ONT., June 15th. 1913.

"I am a general storekeeper at the above address and, on account of the great good I have experienced from using "Fruit-a-tives", I recommend them strongly to my customers. They were a great boon to me, I can tell you, for about two years ago, I was laid up in bed with vomiting and a most terrific pain at the base of my skull. This pain nearly drove me mad. Doctors feared it would turn to Inflammation of the Brain, but I took "Fruit-a-tives" steadily until I was cured. I have gained fifteen pounds since taking "Fruit-a-tives" and I verily believe they saved me from a disastrous illness".

OLD CAPE COLONY

Stories of Days When Slavery Was the Rule in South Africa.

Mr. P. Evans Lewin, writing in United Empire, on "Old Cape Colony," gives some striking pictures of the state of affairs in the old days. He says that a Swede named Andreas Sparrman gave a lively account of the state of South Africa towards the close of the 18th century. He said the days of slavery were then in full swing. At one house he met a scolding housewife who was served by a slave girl with a log of wood chained to her foot, which she had to drag after her wherever she went. At another house he was much distressed by the shrieks of two slaves named January and February, who for some offence more or less trifling were being well lashed by their owner. At yet another abode—not exactly of bliss—he and his host slept with five loaded guns within easy reach and with doors strongly barred, for fear of an attack by the slaves, who, he was told, sometimes ran amok at nights and murdered their masters.

Slavery in Cape Colony was a particularly vicious system, because, with the exception of the Malays, the majority of the slaves had been seized from the surrounding tribes, and the disabilities under which they suffered were probably as great as in any other country governed by Europeans. In this respect, however, the Dutch in Cape Colony were probably neither better nor worse than the British in the West Indies, the Americans in the Southern Colonies, or the French in Mauritius. They must be judged by the standards of the time, and those standards, as we know, were none too exacting. It was not until December, 1834, partly owing to the exertions of the poet Pringle, that the Hottentot and Malay slaves of Cape Colony, numbering nearly 36,000, were emancipated, or rather "apprenticed" to their masters for four years, after which term they received their freedom. Of the one and a quarter million pounds voted in compensation to the Cape farmers, only a small proportion found its way into the pockets of those chiefly interested, the remainder (as is so often the case) being absorbed by greedy speculators, who bought up the claims of the farmers at very low figures, "high finance" and philanthropy being generally associated in this manner.

This grievance had much to do with the Great Trek, and directly led to the occupation of the Transvaal and the penetration of the interior. Sparrman further relates that on one night when returning from Cape Town be had what he believed to be a narrow escape. He missed the road and, coming to a house, he was first attacked by a pack of dogs who were employed to warn off intruders, and later by a troop of slaves who rushed out threatening the traveler in broken Malay and Portuguese. The appearance of these fellows and the knowledge that their owners would be safely locked within, behind bars and bolts, so frightened the naturalist that he spurred his horse from the scene and let the animal find its own way back. Many atrocities were committed by slaves and slaveowners. Mrs. Trotter, in her admirable book on old Cape Colony, relates how the farmers of Mowbray, a suburb of Cape Town, recall the brutal murder of a whole family—one baby alone being saved by its nurse, who hid in the large brick oven. The murderers were caught, and their heads afterwards exposed in the horrible fashion of the colony.

Criminal law in the time of the old Dutch Company rule was a fearful and wonderful thing. All the brutality of mediaeval Europe seems to have been transported to African soil, and in their dealings with the Hottentots the Dutch seem to have practiced neither justice nor mercy. The old slave codes permitted impalement, breaking the limbs on a wheel, and slow strangulation.

BOWSER SEES BLACK CONSPIRACY

With Mrs. B. Doing Her Best to Destroy Home and Happiness—Nothing Left but to Consult His Lawyer—Mrs. B.'s Sensational Acknowledgments.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.]

MRS. BOWSER was looking out the window as Mr. Bowser dropped off the car. There was a certain hitch to his legs and a certain hump to his shoulders which meant mischief. He kicked the gate open and kicked it shut, and there was a stony glare in his eyes as he unlocked the front door.

"Are you ill, dear?" queried Mrs. Bowser.

"Ill?" he growled. "The wonder is that I am not in my grave!"

Have you got one of your old fashioned headaches?"

"Old fashioned bosh! I suppose hash is ready, but I don't want any. You can go along and eat by yourself!"

"Shan't I send for the doctor?"

"Send for nothing and nobody!" he shouted as he passed on to the sitting room and sat down on the lounge.

He Threatens to Leave Home.

Mrs. Bowser knew that it was useless to persist, and she went to her dinner alone. When she had finished and returned Mr. Bowser was standing before the fireplace, with his arm on the mantel. He looked at her for thirty seconds as a lion looks at his prey and then said:

"Woman, things have got to go different around this house or I leave it!"

"What's the matter now?" she asked.

"Ten thousand things are the matter! Who took a sledgehammer and broke that pane of glass in the front window?"

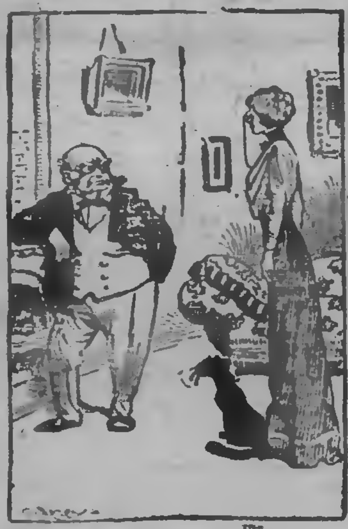
"Why, you cracked it the day you were hanging a picture and fell off the stepladder."

"Never! Never hung a picture or fell off the stepladder in my life. In order to spite me some one has deliberately destroyed a pane of glass that cost $28! Who has been tearing our fence down since I left the house this morning?"

"Tearing the fence down?"

"I said tearing the fence down, Mrs. Bowser. You probably spent half the day pulling at it and encouraging a mob of boys to create $100 damages."

"How foolish of you, Mr. Bowser! If you are ill let me make you some toast and tea or send for the doctor."



"AS A LION LOOKS AT HIS PREY."

Sheds Light on His Grouch.

"Here is the gas bill," he said as he took it from the mantel and waved it around his head. "A gas bill for $3 for the last month!"

"Yes. It came today," she replied.

"It came today, did it? Came today! Three dollars for last month! Mrs. Bowser, you couldn't think of any other way to yank the last dollar I had on earth out of my wallet, and so you deliberately turn on the gas every day for a week or two and let it go to waste!"

"I'm sorry the bill is so high," she quietly replied. "But I couldn't help it. It is a dollar lower than it was last month."

"You left two burners going at full blast all one night."

"Never! Never!"

"Then a burglar got in."

"That's nonsense. You sat up one night to finish a pirate story."

"Mrs. Bowser, it is absolutely criminal to bring such a charge against a man who toils from daylight to darkness to make a living for his family."

"What's the matter with the carpet? I see you looking at it."

"Moths, Mrs. Bowser!" he whispered, with tragic gesture. "They have grown fat and lazy feeding on my carpets. See that hole, and that, and that?"

"There isn't a moth in this house, and I defy you to find one," she spiritedly replied. "This carpet is beginning to wear, but I've no money to buy a new one."

Putting Mrs. B. In Her Place.

"Don't talk back to me, Mrs. Bowser. When I say a thing is so, that ends it."

Mrs. Bowser walked over and sat down by a back window and picked up a newspaper. Something had gone wrong with Mr. Bowser at the office, or his stomach or liver was upset.

"And look at this mirror!" he went on, as he wheeled around and drummed on it with his knuckles. "Here's a glass that cost me $75, and because you thought I wasn't going to the poorhouse fast enough you stand off with a club and whack and pound it and smash and break and ruin it!"

Mr. Bowser paid only $30 for that glass, because it had a damaged spot down in one corner—the spot he was now pointing at with arm outstretched. He knew it, and Mrs. Bowser knew that he knew it, and so she maintained silence.

Discovers More Outrages.

"And look at this furniture! Is there a chair in this room that isn't kneesprung and lopsided? Who called in a tramp from the street and gave him 50 cents to take a crowbar and pound my favorite armchair to pieces?"

Mrs. Bowser preserved a discreet silence, and Mr. Bowser walked up and down with a tramp, tramp, and it was several minutes before he could find any other excuse for opening his mouth. All of a sudden the clock stopped. It was an eight day clock and a pet of his, and nobody had ever been allowed to wind it but him.

"And there goes the clock!" he yelled. "There being nothing else left to break and destroy, some one has bored a hole in this clock with an auger or baked it in a hot oven! Woman, do you hear me—the clock has stopped!"

"It has run down," she replied.

"But why—why has it run down?"

"Because you didn't wind it."

"Oh, I didn't! Didn't wind it up, eh? It hasn't been thrown into the back yard, kicked down cellar or tossed up stairs? Mrs. Bowser, look at me!"

Decides to Send For His Lawyer.

"I am going to my room! I must not be disturbed! Early in the morning I will send for my lawyer to arrange about the alimony, and you can probably take the 2 o'clock train for your mother's! Woman, go out and get a fence rail and use it to smash doors and windows and furniture, and thus make a clean wreck before you go! Good night to you; good night!"

"Just wait a moment, please," called Mrs. Bowser.

"Well, madam?"

"You might as well know the worst. Two clothespins are missing!"

He flushed up.

"And a handle is loose on one of the kitchen knives!"

He went pale.

"And the cook has broken the handle off a teacup!"

"Woman!"

"And I think the rats are eating up the coal!"

"You—you"—

"And I found a trousers button down cellar today!"

Mr. Bowser tried his best, but it wouldn't work—he couldn't reply.

"And—and," continued Mrs. Bowser, "I broke the eye out of a darning needle this afternoon! I am as sorry as I can be and stand ready to"—

But she was alone!

A Thoughtful Wife.

A woman who had gone to a hospital to be operated upon wrote two postcards.

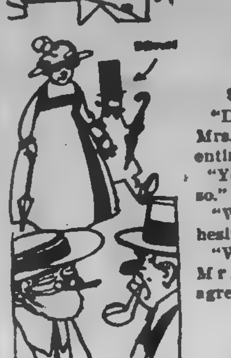
"Please send which ever one is appropriate afterward," she told the nurse.

These were the cards:

My Dear Husband—I have had the operation and am doing nicely. Will be at home in a week or two.

My Dear Husband—I have had the operation and am sorry to tell you that I did not survive.

—New York Post.



Sufficient.

"Do Mr. and Mrs. Brown agree entirely?"

"Yes, I guess so."

"Why do you hesitate?"

"Well, anyway, Mr. Brown agrees."

Always Near.

"We would like you to go on our personally conducted tours," said the ticket agent.

"Don't care about it," replied the meek little man behind the mountain of baggage.

"But wouldn't you like to know that some one was always keeping an eye on you?"

"Oh, don't worry about that. My wife is going along."

TWO POLICE OFFICERS SHOT IN FIGHT WITH ESCAPING ROBBERS

One is Dead and the Other Will Die---Butcher Shop Was Robbed and Men Made off in a Sleigh

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, March 11.—The police are hunting all over the city and suburbs for four burglars who early this morning shot and killed Constable Bourdon and fatally wounded Constable Guyon, who tried to stop them from escaping after robbing a butcher shop at St. Laurent.

The robbers were in a sleigh.

Bourdon was shot in the throat and abdomen, dying shortly afterwards in the hospital.

Guyon was shot just above the heart, and cannot recover.

Montreal, March 11.—Later—The police have arrested three men on suspicion of being concerned in the shoting of Constables Bourdon and Guyon last night. These three all somewhat intoxicated, came to the foreman of the road department on St. Agathe st, and asked for work. While hanging around they were heard talking about the shooting affray. The police say one of them was certainly concerned in it. The sleigh which took the murderers from the scene has been found with the woodwork and upholstering bloodstained. A button found in the sleigh, was from the coat of one of the prisoners.

CLEAN UP OR QUIT PRAYING

Prayers of People at Variance With Neighbors Not Answered.

PRAYER LIKE LETTER.

Evangelist Pugsley at Park Street Baptist Church.

"Either clean up or quit praying. Get right with your neighbor. God still hears and answers prayer, but conditions must be met. The success of the Christian life depends on prayer."

These sentences are taken from a helpful address, given last night at Park street Baptist church, by Evangelist Pugsley.

He said 'God does not answer the prayers of people whose lives are not clean and who are at variance with their neighbors. He likened prayer to a letter in the mail. First, it must be pure in thought; second, it must be plainly addressed; third, it must be properly addressed; fourth, it must have a stamp.

If we have iniquity in our hearts, God will not hear us. Our prayers must be in the name of Jesus; they must be of faith believing and they must have the stamp of the Holy Spirit.

The church quartette assisted in the singing and Mr. G. W. Mulligan gave a sacred solo. The meetings will be continued every evening.

PUBLIC MEETING ON MONDAY MARCH 30

The public meeting at the Grand Opera House, at which Hon. Robt. Rogers, Hon. A. Meighen, Mr. J. H. Burnham and others will speak, is announced to be held on Monday, March 30th.

ST. JOHN'S WOMEN'S AUXILIARY

Gratifying Reports Are Presented—Mrs. Cartwright Gives Address

St. John's Women's Auxiliary annual meeting was held yesterday afternoon in the school room, when the reports presented showed a most gratifying progress during the past season. The president, Mrs. J. C. Davidson, presided. Representatives from the Girls' Auxiliary and the Junior Auxiliary were also present, and presented their reports. Mrs. Cartwright, president of the W. A. in the Diocese of Toronto, gave a very helpful address on the various works of the Women's Auxiliary. The speaker was accorded a vote of thanks, not only for the address, but for her kindness in coming to this city.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Mrs. J. C. Davidson.

First Vice-President—Mrs. Peter Campbell.

Second Vice-President — Miss Mencke.

Secretary—Mrs. R. J. Devey.

Treasurer—Mrs. Aylmer.

Secretary-Treasurers were elected as follows:

Literature—Mrs. Palmer.

Dorcas—Mrs. Common.

Leaflet—Miss Watt.

United Thankoffering—Mrs. Mulholland.

Extra cent a day—Mrs. Dean.

Babies' Branch—Mrs. N. C. Mills.

Mrs. (Dr.) Cameron was elected President of the Junior Branch.

DISTRICT MEETINGS.

The district meetings of St. Andrew's church will meet to-night at 8 o'clock as follows:—

No. 1—Mr. Richardson, 313 Frederick avenue.

No. 2—Mr. A. Moore, 260 Aylmer street.

No. 3, 4 and 7—Mrs. Kerr, 586 Gilmour street.

AN AWFUL TRAGEDY IN LINDSAY HOME

Drunken Father Causes His Own and His Daughter's Death When He Starts Blaze, in Attempting to Light His Pipe---Two Other Children May be Fatally Burned

Lindsay, Ont., March 11.—John Madison, a hack driver, and little daughter Mary, under two years old, were fatally burned in their home on James street last night, between nine and ten o'clock.

Madison came home drunk at nine o'clock and while lying on a pile of rags upstairs, tried to light his pipe. Loose paper or drapery caught fire and in spite of all efforts of Mrs. Madison, the husband and four little children were soon enveloped in flames.

The frantic mother carried two children down stairs, while a daughter rescued another. A neighbor carried out Madison, who died at the hospital at four o'clock.

Little Mary died at seven-thirty and little Jack and Willie Madison are so badly burned that little hope is held out for their recovery.

The funerals of the dead were held this afternoon at two o'clock.

ESTIMATES OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT CUT DOWN NO CONVENTION TRIP

No Increase Recommended for the Fire Chief or the Firemen

TO ADD ONE MAN

Last night the Fire, Water and Light Com 'ttee cut down the estimates of $23,829 for the Fire Department to $17,250, which is an increase of $750 over the appropriation of last year. One of the items eliminated was an appropriation of $200 for representation at the Convention of the International Fire Chiefs at Orleans.

The committee did not recommend that the salary of the Fire Chief be increased. His salary is $1,400.

Add Two Firemen.

After a long discussion Ald. Stratton and Anderson moved that two men be added to the department, dating from July 1st.

Mayor Buller said he would not pass the appropriation if the resolution carried.

Later His Worship moved an amendment that no increase be made. The vote was tied on both the amendment and motion. Then Ald. Stratton and Ald. Duffus moved that one man be added, and the motion carried with Ald. Saunders and the Mayor registering negative votes.

No change was made in the salaries of the firemen.

FEARS EXPRESSED THAT KARLUK HAS BEEN LOST

Crew, However, Would Be In No Grave Danger Even If Ship Were Destroyed, Says Stefansson In Despatches Tabled In Commons—Rewards Offered to Natives

OTTAWA, March 11.—The opinion seems to be growing that the Stefansson's ship, the Karluk, has been crushed by ice and has been lost. The correspondence which the naval service department has received from the explorer was tabled in the Commons yesterday and it contains two statements which increase the doubts regarding her safety.

Stefansson says: "Most of the strongest whalers that have ever come to the Beaufort sea have been crushed by ice. It seems, therefore, to depend more upon the character of the ice the vessel encounters than upon the vessel's own construction, whether she survives a season in the ice."

Another statement is that the Karluk "is not so strong as other vessels." Stefansson considers that "her men are in no grave danger." He thinks that if the vessel was crushed the crew would be able to find their way ashore.

"Ultimate prospects of success still good," he says further. "Believe Karluk on Polar drift unless already reported to you. Rewards have been offered the natives for any information concerning Karluk."

Stefansson adds that a relief expedition would be worse than useless, but he asks the Department to notify all circumpolar countries to instruct the natives that shipwrecked men may arrive from the Polar sea.

In a letter to the Department, written from Point Barrow, Alaska, under date of Oct. 24, Stefansson reports that when he left the Karluk she was in sound condition, and had come through the summer ice without the slightest mishap. She was provisioned for three years. There were on board altogether twenty-five persons, including the crew, five Eskimos and six scientific members of the expedition.

MR. D. BRADSHAW IS TRANSFERRED

Mr. D. Bradshaw, of the Royal Bank, received notice to-day that he had been transferred to the branch of the same bank at Sudbury. In all probability he will leave on Friday.

"Brad" came here nearly two years ago, and first won popularity when he broke into the sporting columns with the local intermediates of 1913. During the summer he managed the Bankers' baseball team in the Mercantile League and figured again with the Intermediates this season. To him is due no small amount of the credit for the team's good showing this season.

Mr. Bradshaw also made many friends personally and as well as leaving a niche in the local sporting circles, a vacancy in social circles will also be experienced by his much regretted departure.

ONLY FRINGE OF HUGE GRAFT HAS BEEN TOUCHED

Question of Prosecutions in Trent Canal Scandal Depends on the Minister—Warnings Came to Local Department From Ottawa

OTTAWA, March 11—What will be done regarding the Trent Valley Canal scandal is in the absence of the Minister of Railways and Canals mere conjecture. "It is certain, of course, that there will be a clean out of the gang that have been employed on the canal, for they were all into it," said Mr. Burnham, M.P. for Peterboro, last night. But whether there will be prosecutions depends on the minister. He is known to feel the matter keenly and he is in no mood for half measures.

Only the fringe of the huge graft that was going on has been touched. Immense sums have disappeared and have found their way into the campaign and other funds of the Liberal party, it is believed.

Mr. Burnham states that he found collusion at the Ottawa end while he was himself attempting to probe the affair. No sooner had he sought for any information at the department here than McClellan was warned by telephone.

Mr. Burnham cited the interesting case of a young fellow who was employe on the canal. Meeting him one day with his dinner pail and walking with a swinging gait, he said to Mr. Burnham, "Thank God, I am now earning an honest living. We were all in it, but I'm glad I'm out of it. We had all degenerated."

The affair has caused exceptional interest in Ottawa. It is something people can understand better than the millions that were swallowed up needlessly by N.T.R. contractors.

INTERESTING MEETING OF THE GEORGE ST. W.M.S.

St. Patrick's Day "At Home" to be Held Next Tuesday.

FOR MEMORIAL FUND.

The Missionary Auxiliary of George street church met in the regular monthly meeting on Tuesday afternoon with the President, Mrs. Kendry, in the chair.

After singing, "I love to tell the Story," Mrs. Campbell led in earnest prayer, in which all were lifted heavenward. Mrs. Moore, the district organizer, from Charlotte street Auxiliary, read the second chapter of Ephesians.

It was ordered that a letter of sympathy be sent to Mrs. Mansell.

The president announced that the auxiliary will have charge of the Wednesday evening prayer meeting March 11th, when lantern slides on missionary views of the work in China will be explained by Mr. Peever.

Arrangements were made for a St. Patrick's Day "At Home," to be held at the residence of Mrs. Kendry, 754 Water street, on Tuesday, March 17th, from 4 to 6.30, when a collection will be taken in aid of the Memorial Fund, for the late Mrs. Platt, who was for years president of the Bay of Quinte Branch. It is expected that $600 will be raised by the branch, which will go toward a ward in the new Chentu Hospital in China.

Mrs. Peever with Mrs. Armstrong as alternate, was chosen delegate to the branch meeting to be held in Trenton the 2nd Tuesday in June. After singing the hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name," the president led in prayer. Mrs. Allison led the reading of Scripture passages on "Knowledge." Envelopes for the Easter thank offering were distributed.

Mrs. Armstrong leader of the study class, then took charge of the program on the annual report and told of the beginning of the Woman's Misionary Society thirty-three years ago and its growth. She urged the members to study mission work in order "to build Christian character in its highest sense." She then called on different members of the society who in turn gave very interesting bits of information regarding the work of the society in China, in Japan, in Quebec among the French, and the North-west among the Indians, and especially in the Crosby Home for girls, among the Austrians of Alberta, the orientals of British Columbia, and the Italians of Toronto.

This exercise was most interesting and the large number attending felt that they had learned something of the annual report.

After singing the doxology dainty refreshments were served by the study class and a social half hour was spent.

CALL FROM SPRINGVILLE TO REV. GEO. CRAW SUSTAINED BY PETERBORO PRESBYTERY

Appeal of Omemee Congregation is Returned — Present Arrangement Must Stand or Mount Pleasant Church Must be Closed

The Presbytery of Peterboro assembled in Knox Church yesterday morning at 9 a.m. for its regular March meeting. The session was opened by Rev. Mr. Keith, in the absence of the Moderator, Rev. Mr. Brown, of Warsaw. Representatives were present from the 28 or 30 charges in the Presbytery. Reports from the various departments of Church work were received, that of Mr. Richard Lees, convenor of Social Service and Evangelism, being exceptionally good. The committee on Standing Committees made its report through Rev. Mr. Keith, convenor, and the following nominations were accepted:

Committee on Foreign Missions—Convenor, Rev. Mr. Goodwill and Elder, Elder from Omemee, Rev. G. A. Brown and Elder.

Committee on Home Missions, Augmentation and French Evangelization—Rev. Wm. Johnston, convenor, and Elder, Minister of Springville and Elder, Rev. Mr. Skene, Rev. Mr. Ross, of Pontypool, and Elder.

Committee on Sabbath Schools and Y. P. Societies—Rev. W. D. McDonald and Elder, Rev. A. K. McLeod and Elder, Rev. Mr. Lindsay and Elder.

Committee on Supervision of Students—Rev. Wm. Beattie and Elder, Rev. Mr. Stewart and Elder, Rev. Mr. Alp and Elder.

Committee on Social Service and Evangelism—Mr. Richard Lees, convenor, Rev. R. Pogue, Mr. H. Shurter, Rev. Mr. McConnachie and Elder.

Committee on Systematic Giving—Rev. Jas. Rollins, convenor; Mr. Harrison, Rev. Mr. Keith, Rev. Mr. Brown, of Warsaw, and Elder.

Committee on Aged and Infirm Ministers, Widows and Orphans—Rev. S. D. McCullough, convenor; and Elder, Rev. Mr. Ross, of Baltimore, and Elder.

Committee on Statistics—Rev. D. A. Thomson, and Elder, Minister for Norwood and Elder, Rev. Mr. McCorkindale and Elder.

Springville's Call.

A call was presented from Springville and Lakevale to Rev. Mr. Geo. Craw, and this was sustained, and forwarded to the Barrie Presbytery.

The appeal from Omemee congregation against the present arrangement of Mount Pleasant Omemee and Bethany, as a charge was considered and the question was sent back to the congregations to be accepted or else the alternative of Mount Pleasant Church being closed, the other two to exist as a pastoral charge.

The following were appointed commissioners to the General Assembly.

Rev. G. A. Brown, of Campbellford; Rev. Wm. Johnston, Rev. H. J. Keith, and Rev. Mr. McCorkindale, of Lakefield, ministers; Elders from Centreville and Grafton, with Mr. H. Shurter, Elder from Knox Church, and Mr. Hayden, of St. Paul's, Port Hope.

MUST EXERCISE SOME COMMON SENSE AND SOME SELF CONTROL

Panacea Not to be Found in Universal Repression Says Mr. J. H. Burnham in Discussion on Broder's Anti-Cigarette Bill

General interest has been shown in regard to the bill of Mr. A. Broder, M.P., Dundas, who moved in the House for the prohibition of cigarettes in Canada. The resolution was discussed on Monday, and at the suggestion of the Premier the matter was referred to a committee of fifteen. Hansard gives Mr. Broder's resolution as follows:

That, in the opinion of this House, it is expedient to provide that no person, by himself, his agent or otherwise, shall manufacture, sell or give away any cigarettes, cigarette papers or wrappers, or any substitute therefor, or shall be in any way concerned in such manufacture, sale or distribution, or authorize or permit the same; that no cigarettes, cigarette papers or wrappers shall be imported into Canada or entered for consumption therein, and that all cigarettes, cigarette papers or wrappers intended as such shall be subject to seizure by any officer of Customs or Inland Revenue, and that they, with the packages in which they are contained, shall be disposed of under regulations made by the Governor in Council; that penalties shall be imposed for the contravention of this Act, and the prosecution for any such penalty or punishment may be brought and prosecuted under the provisions of part XV of the Criminal Code relating to summary conviction.

In following Mr. Broder, the member for West Peterboro said:

Does the mover of this resolution include pipe smoking in his resolution? From a word or two which he dropped during the course of his remarks, I fancy that he does. He says it is hard for the mother to chasten the children when the father sits in the corner smoking—not necessarily cigarettes. Whilst of course, everybody agrees that the excessive use of cigarettes, like the excessive use of anything, may result in grave injury. I do not know that we are prepared to go as far as the words "or any substitute therefor" in the fourth line of the resolution. I have looked up the various authorities on the subject, and I find that the word "substitute" in this case certainly does not mean that what is used in the place and stead of the cigarette shall be in the form of a cigarette. It may be a pipe, and if these words refer to the pipe, then this is a very serious resolution. I do not think the people of this country are prepared to abolish the pipe. In speaking about it to the hon. gentleman himself, I asked him, as I did not wish to take him by surprise, what he thought about it. Well, he said, if it means that, let it all go. He does not smoke himself, so he does not care, but I say that a great many people in this country are not injured by smoking; they enjoy their pipe, and would be greatly injured if they did not have it. Whilst it is a well-known fact that no athletic trainer will continue to train any one who smokes cigarettes, because of their effect upon the heart, the same thing does not follow with regard to the pipe. Of course, the trouble in all these things is to find a point at which to stop. You will observe, Mr. Speaker, that the Ten Commandments have gone by the board. The hon. gentleman does not refer to them; he does not think that the ten or even the eleven commandments are sufficient. For myself, I am inclined to think that the eleven commandments are enough. Whilst the Chinese and the Japanese, who have somewhat similar methods of enforcing their ideas, may proceed to administer five or six thousand blows with a bamboo for every infraction of an edict, are we to say that the whole principle of moral suasion should be abandoned in Canada because the moral ground in which the good seed is sown is so sterile that it is no longer fit and proper soil for the cultivation of good principles? Are we to have no other recourse but to put offenders in prison, hammer them, punish them or confine them? Is it no longer possible to show them the evil of their ways and to beseech them to be men, that they may exert that self-control which alone makes a man? or are they simply going about as trees walking, are they to be clothed in the garments of men, but not clothed and in their right minds. We are going to work up in this country, unfortunately, it seems to me, a lot of weak-kneed individuals, people who must be led around by the ear, or else they will not do what is right. I have the utmost contempt for the silly boy or girl who must be fed with a spoon or out of a bottle until probably he or she is twenty-one years of age. That kind of rot ought to be done away with, and if it is necessary to re-introduce the methods of our friend King Solomon, we will introduce them. But it cannot be said that all of the good women who are urging on the hon. gentleman who is the mover of this resolution, have exercised, in the matter of dress, an example of the self-control which we should have wished for; and I have no hesitation in saying that if they would reform themselves in that particular they would do as much good as ever they will do by asking us to give up our pipe and tobacco. These things can be carried too far. Mind you, I must not be construed as speaking in favor of the cigarette. I am well aware that it has done immense damage, and that possibly it may have to be repressed just as opium smoking in China has had to be repressed. At the same time we must not think that the panacea is to be found in universal repression; we must exercise some common sense and some self-control if we are to evolve into the highest type of manhood.

THE MEANING OF THE SCANDAL.

"WHEN, O Cateline, do you mean to cease abusing our patience? How long is that madness of yours is still to mock us? When is there to be an end of that unbridled audacity of yours, swaggering about as it does now?" Thus did Cicero begin his first attack on Cateline, an attack which succeeded in breaking up the conspiracy and caused Cicero to be hailed as the saviour of his country. From what did he try to save Rome? He exerted all the powers of his unrivalled eloquence to rid Rome of jobbers feeding at the public trough, to drive out corruption from the public life of the Eternal City.

He endeavored to arouse the old public spirit, when politics were conducted by men zealous for the public good and careful of public honour. If he did not succeed in making Roman political life as good as it was in the brave days of old, he at least furnished an example and thwarted for the time being the evil days that soon fell on the City of Seven Hills. But those days are long gone by, yet here in Peterborough, more than twenty centuries later, we find a condition of affairs in the conduct of politics bearing the stamp of Cateline.

Well might we say to the Liberal party, to members of that party in this very city, how long will you continue to insult public honour? How long will you continue to support party by every foul means when fair methods seem inadequate or impossible? How long will party ends be followed rather than party's real purpose, the science of government?

What does the Trent Valley Canal report show? It shows that some men holding public positions of trust and others of influence and standing, had no regard for public honour, no thought of public interest, no care for the consequences of wrong-doing.

No doubt there are many innocent names involved in this scandal, but the evidence shows that some have defrauded the Canadian people in a most shameless and audacious manner in an attempt to secure the election of their candidates. It shows that businessmen connived at dishonest methods to secure the payment of accounts, that there was a well understood agreement between the leaders of the Liberal party here and canal officials that election funds were to be raised by defrauding the government.

Why should we single out individual cases? In yesterday's paper appeared the long, shocking list of evil deeds. Every reader can see for himself who the guilty individuals are, what they did, the liquor they bought and presumably drank, the pleasure jaunts on the Bessie Butler, the meals paid for which they did not eat, but why enumerate?

Where is the Cicero who will save Canadian national life from such degrading spectacles? Is Peterborough to harbor a party organized from its leaders down on principles as shameless as ever characterized the methods of the conspirator Cateline? Surely, Liberalism has yet some vestige of the old public spirit that will cause its honest men to unite with all good citizens who regard "That chastity of honour which felt a stain like a wound," as the one standard for both private and public life.

The scandal means that unless every good citizen, Liberal as well as Conservative, unites to keep out of public life all those concerned in demanding election funds from the Trent Canal, political life is hopelessly depraved. If the Liberal party in Peterborough were worthy of being a party they would support the Conservative Government in clearing away the shame of this scandal. Be it said to the everlasting credit of this city and of all those of both parties who refused to countenance such things that some time before the evidence of guilt became public they were able to free themselves from the ring of grafters masquerading in the guise of honest men in the election of Mr. Burnham. If Peterborough is to be free of such atrocities it must withhold its support from those whose methods are branded with the sin of Cateline.

$18,000 FOR A BALL TWIRLER.

THE BOSTON Americans have signed Tris Speaker for two years at a reported salary of $18,000 a year. The salary is larger than is paid to any principal or president of a Canadian University, of which we have knowledge. It is larger than the stipend received by any ecclesiastical dignitary that we know of. The salaries of Federal Cabinet Ministers, Provincial Premiers, members of the House of Commons, are all much smaller. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as leader of the Opposition, receives $7,000 a year, while the Prime Minister receives $12,000. Members of the United States House of Representatives, including all their perquisites, seldom receive more than $10,000 a year. United States Senators, Federal judges, Canadian judges receive salaries much smaller and there are few professional men whose salaries or incomes equal that paid this star of the diamond.

The salary shows to what degree of organization and perfection professionalism has brought one of the best of out door sports. It has made it a business, demanding a long apprenticeship of hard training, of the mind as well as of the muscles. Nine-inning games are frequently played without a single error, and crowds of from ten to fifteen thousand people have assembled to watch matches. The quality of baseball, or skill of its players has unquestionably been raised, but is this result a cause for particular gratification?

In the old Roman days. Marius joined in the sports with the young men when he was over seventy years of age. The contests on the Field of Mars were as eagerly contested as any sport to-day and drew as large a proportion of people as ever watched the finals of a World's series. But they did not pursue manly exercise for its own sake. Rather did they seek to develop powerful men for public service, in legion, profession or Senate. Not till wealth, corruption and private ambition began to undermine public virtue were gladiators and athletes trained to make a pastime a business. The contests were better fought, skill was developed and thousands of weaklings bet their sestertii on the contests in the ampitheatre, when they themselves should have been training to meet Vandal and Teuton knocking on the outposts of the Empire.

In modern baseball there are thousands of interested spectators who are poor specimens of physical strength, poor examples of mentality. The spur that a keen baseball contest ought to give to youth, ends in an ignorant and heated discussion of the fine points of the game. Of what value to the nation is all this highly trained skill in baseball or other kinds of sport, if it fails to bring into healthy action the future men of the country? Professionalism makes for skill in sport and at the same time gives rise to the alarming question that perhaps our youthful democracy is in the first days of its decline.

POLICE WOMEN IN PRACTICE.

ON THE FIRST day of the waitresses' strike in Chicago the police women succeeded in arresting several female disturbers of the peace, but on subsequent days their efforts were unavailing, and regular policemen were called on to clear the streets. In London at a Labour party meeting lady ushers were on hand because suffragettes were said to be intending a disturbance. The suffragettes tackled the lady ushers and vanquished them. Then came the policemen, used to rough work and hustled male and female disturbers out of the hall. The point here is that where real constabulary duty is to be done the policeman is the one to do it. Perhaps such duty does not belong to the province of a policewoman, but, at any rate, there are some things they cannot and should not be required to do.

SOME ADVICE WORTHY OF NOTE.

AT THE SOCIAL Service Congress held in Ottawa the other day, Premier Borden gave some excellent advice to those seeking reform legislation. He pointed out the futility of calling for, or enacting, legislation which is in advance of public opinion. The danger of all reform, particularly in a new democratic country like Canada, is that evil will come from legislation, which is in advance of its time. History is replete with examples showing a good law passed before its time is as bad or worse than the tolerance of present evils. Take the English Commonwealth of Cromwell for example. Electoral reform, social reform, religious reform were anticipated by two centuries, because, when Cromwell died, his reforms were annulled and that long period elapsed before the public conscience demanded the reforms Cromwell desired to be permanent. The Reform Bill of 1832 was a lasting reform because the public mind had been educated to its need. Cromwell's reforms hardly endured beyond his death because there was no public support behind it. A good reform measure must have public sentiment behind it else it comes to nought.

Did Not Go Into Details.
G. A. McDonald's Anecdotage.

Throughout Eastern Ontario and beyond, Rev. Father Dowdall, of Eganville, is admired by all for his magnificent presence, respected for the vigor of his mind and the strength of his big frame, and loved by those of every class and creed for his kind heart and his humorous head. He is over six feet in height and broad in ample proportion and there is humor and wit to every inch of him. One Sunday, when greeting his parishioners before church, he was asked by one farmer from near Eganville to pray for rain as the drought in the section was threatening ruin to the crops there. He promised to make the necessary petition in church that day. A few moments after he greeted another parishioner from the other end of his parish, and this man complained that in the low-lying land of his district the crops would be ruined unless the rain ceased and the sun shone and the drying winds blew. This second man also asked that Father Dowdall pray for a ceasing of the rain. And Father Dowdall promised he would do so at that morning's service. Later the two farmers happened to meet and each learned from the other of the contrary promises made by the big priest. "How can he fulfill both promises?" they asked. Even their reverence for the day and their duty scarcely prevented the two men from smiling at each other across the church when Father Dowdall began to offer up prayers for this good thing and that, but the smiles were repressed by admiration when he calmly petitioned for rain where it was needed and dry for the sections where that was best. After the service he said, to one of the men, "Now, see here, Sheehan, I did not go into details because the Lord knows the particulars better than you or I or Pat Bulger."

PLAIN SPEECH
By Walt Mason

Old Ebenzer Jimpson Jinks takes pride in saying what he thinks. "I do not mince my words," says he, "but speak my mind out, bold and free; and if I do not like a gent, I make it plainly evident; I air my views to beat the band, and people know just where I stand." He takes a foolish pride, methinks, does Ebenezer Jimpson Jinks, in being rude and rough of speech, but few regard him as a peach. He keeps his neighbors hot and sore, and they denounce him as a bore. "We'd pay the freight," they often said, "if he would only move away!" And people dodge him on the street; they hate to hear old Jinks repeat "his honest views" on this and that, which views are spoken through his hat. When he steps up to join the crowd, you'd think a cold and clammy shroud had fallen on that bunch of men, who all disperse, to meet again when there's no Jinks to give the blues expounding "his straightforward views." If you would have a grist of friends you'll bear in mind that friendship ends, and cordial feeling slinks behind, when you begin to "speak your mind."

Birthdays Note

WEDNESDAY, MARCH ELEVENTH

This is the fifty-second birthday of Dr. S. W. Dyde, principal of Robertson College, Edmonton. Though the head of a Presbyterian institution, he is carrying on his work to-day in close co-operation with the principal of Alberta College, a Methodist foundation. Indeed he and Dr. Riddell, the head of the latter college, are giving an effective illustration at Edmonton of what co-operation can accomplish, for lectures are delivered in common by the faculties of both colleges and the students that, as Dr. Dyde expresses it, it is mingle together so indiscriminately, difficult to tell the sheep from the goats. Principal Dyde was born in Ottawa and before going to Edmonton was for many years professor of mental philosophy at Queen's University, Kingston.

Tarzan of the Apes

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS.

Copyright by the Frank A. Munsey Co.

It would be cruelly wicked to leave poor Esmeralda here alone. Come—let us try to sleep a little."

• • • • • • •

From the time Tarzan left the tribe of great anthropoids in which he had been raised it was torn by continual strife and discord. Terkoz proved a cruel and capricious king, so that, one by one, many of the older and weaker apes, upon whom he was particularly prone to vent his brutish nature, took their families and sought the quiet and safety of the far interior.

But at last those who remained were driven to desperation by the continued truculence of Terkoz, and it so happened that one of them recalled the parting admonition of Tarzan:

"If you have a chief who is cruel, do not as the other apes do and attempt, any one of you, to pit yourself against him alone. But, instead, let two or three or four of you attack him together. Then no chief will dare to be other than he should be, for four of you can kill any chief."

And the ape who recalled this wise counsel repeated it to several of his fellows, so that when Terkoz returned to the tribe that day he found a warm reception awaiting him.

There were no formalities. As Terkoz reached the group five huge, hairy beasts sprang upon him.

At heart he was an arrant coward, which is the way with bullies among apes as well as among men, so he did not remain to fight and die, but tore himself away from them as quickly as he could and fled into the sheltering boughs of the forest.

Two more attempts he made to rejoin the tribe, but on each occasion he was set upon and driven away. At last he gave it up and turned, foaming with rage and hatred, into the jungle.

It was in this state of mind that the horrible manlike beast, swinging from tree to tree, came suddenly upon two women in the jungle.

He was right above them when he discovered them. The first intimation Jane Porter had of his presence was when the great hairy body dropped to the earth beside her and she saw the awful face and the snarling, hideous mouth thrust within a foot of her.

One piercing scream escaped her lips as the brute's hand clutched her arm. Then she was dragged toward those awful fangs which yawned at her throat. But ere they touched that fair skin another mood claimed the anthropoid.

The tribe had kept his women. He must find others to replace them. This hairless white ape would be the first of his new household.

He threw her roughly across his broad shoulders and leaped back into the trees, bearing Jane Porter away toward a fate a thousand times worse than death.

Esmeralda's scream had mingled with that of Jane Porter; then, as was Esmeralda's manner under stress of emergency which required presence of mind, she swooned.

The scream that brought Clayton and the two older men stumbling through the undergrowth led Tarzan of the apes straight to where Esmeralda lay, but it was not Esmeralda in whom his interest centered.

For a moment he scrutinized the ground below and the trees above until the ape that was in him by virtue of training and environment, combined with the intelligence that was his by right of birth, told his woodcraft the whole story as plainly as though he had seen the thing happen with his own eyes.

Instantly he was gone again into the swaying trees, following the high flung spoor which no other human eye could have detected, much less translated.

Almost silently the ape man sped on in the track of Terkoz and his prey, but the sound of his approach reached the ears of the fleeing beast and spurred it on to greater speed.

Three miles were covered before Tarzan overtook them, and then Terkoz, seeing that further flight was futile, dropped to the ground in a small open glade that he might turn and fight for his prize or be free to escape unhampered if he saw that the pursuer was more than a match for him.

He still grasped Jane Porter in one great arm as Tarzan bounded like a leopard into the arena which nature had provided for this primeval-like battle.

When Terkoz saw that it was Tarzan who pursued him he jumped to the conclusion that this was Tarzan's woman since they were of the same kind—white and hairless—and so he rejoiced at this opportunity for double revenge upon his hated enemy.

To Jane Porter the apparition of this godlike man was as wine to sick nerves.

From the description which Clayton and her father and Mr. Philander had given her she knew that it must be the same wonderful creature who had saved them, and she saw in him only a protector and a friend.

But as Terkoz pushed her roughly aside to meet Tarzan's charge and she saw the great proportions of the ape and the mighty muscles and the fierce fangs her heart quailed. How could any animal vanquish such a mighty antagonist?

Like two charging bulls they came together and like two wolves sought each other's throat. Against the long canines of the ape was pitted the thin blade of the man's knife.

Jane Porter—her lithe form flattened against the trunk of a great tree, her hands tight pressed against her rising and falling bosom and her eyes wide with mingled horror, fascination, fear and admiration—watched the primordial ape battle with the primeval man for possession of a woman—for her.

As the great muscles of the man's back and shoulders knotted beneath the tension of his efforts and the huge biceps and forearm held at bay those mighty tusks the veil of centuries of civilization and culture was swept from the blurred vision of the Baltimore girl. When the thin knife drank deep a dozen times of Terkoz's heart's blood and the great carcass rolled lifeless upon the ground it was a primeval woman who sprang forward with outstretched arms toward the primeval man who had fought for her and won her.

And Tarzan?

Theo Pleaded Guilty.

TORONTO, March 11. — It took only about five minutes for Judge Morgan to dispose of the case of Francis C. Wright, alias Frank Dutton, alias Theo the God, charged with inducing Harriet Sharpe, 70, whom he married, to transfer certain valuable securities to him. The prisoner pleaded guilty on the advice of T. C. Robinette, who appeared in his behalf, and the judge remanded him for sentence.

Mr. Robinette stated that the prisoner was quite willing to have the property returned to the plaintiff, and that already proceedings had been instituted in New York to have the marriage annulled. Sentence will be pronounced at the end of the sessions.

IRON BOUNTIES URGED; WILL BE CONSIDERED

No Statement From Government Until Budget Is Brought Down

OTTAWA, March 11.—Iron bounties were the chief subject of debate in the Commons yesterday, when J. J. Carrick (Con., Thunder Bay and Rainy River) urged the Government to make provision for aid for the iron and steel industry which, he said, suffered from the fact that Canada's vast quantities of low grade ore required an expenditure of 65c. to $1.10 a ton more than the high grade ores of the U. S. With the exception of W. M. German (Welland), the Liberal speakers opposed the proposal. Mr. Carrick was supported by several Conservative members.

Hon. W. T. White declined to make any definite statement in anticipation of the budget, but reminded the House that protection for pig iron would require a general readjustment of the tariff.

Mr. Carrick, in opening, said that Canada had imported iron and steel last year to the extent of $141,000,000, or about 25 per cent. of our entire consumption. We have been keeping the blast furnaces of the United States working overtime, while the iron and steel industry of Canada was permitted to sink into a languishing and deplorable condition.

Similar conditions existed at Midland, Deseronto, Parry Sound and Londonderry, while the big works at Sydney, C.B., were only running about one-third of their capacity.

Mr. Carrick favored a bounty upon iron made from Canadian ore, say, to the extent of two cents per unit, which in the case of ore running fifty per cent. would mean a bounty of about one dollar per ton. With such a concession from the Government, he undertook to bring about an investment of $10,000,000 in iron and steel manufacturing in Canada.

Dr. Clark (Red Deer) denounced bounties as economically absurd. Bounties paid to any one line of industry was unjust to other lines of industry and to the consumers. He could not for the life of him see how giving a bounty to a manufacturer would produce orders. It might give him money out of which to pay dividends, and thereby give a temporary value to his watered stock, but it could not get him customers.

If it were right to bonus the iron and steel business, why not bonus the growing of wheat and the raising of cattle? The whole protectionist fabric, the doctor declared to be a tissue of absurdities, and the sooner Canada got away from it the better. In any event, with our finances in their present condition, the iron and steel manufacturers could hardly expect to get any more money from the Treasury. Too many people wanted bread just now wores than iron.

W. H. Bennett (E. Simcoe) favored stiffer protection rather than the reintroduction of the bounty system. At present our agricultural implement manufacturers were allowed to import all iron used in making implements practically free of duty. So long as these manufacturers enjoyed a protective tariff, he believed, they should be compelled to buy their iron in Canada.

Mr. Carvell (Carlton, N.B.) said that when an industry was bonused by the Government there was bound to be over-capitalization, wasteful management and watered stock. He did not believe that the people of the country should be taxed to help out some Ontario blast furnaces which had been badly located or managed inefficiently.

W. M. German (Welland) however took issue with Mr. Carvell. Though opposed generally to the bounty system, Mr. German favored some Government aid to the iron and steel industry.

Mr. Arthur (Parry Sound) dwelt upon the great importance of the iron industry and urged the necessity for proper encouragement by way of tariff and bounty.

Finance Minister White pointed out that bounties had been paid upon pig iron produced from Canadian ore from 1883 to 1911 and yet last year only about 300,000 tons of Canadian ore had been produced, valued at about $600,000. The Canadian ores were low grade and refractory and unless some improved processes were resorted to for smelting low grade ores the proposed bounty would have to be paid indefinitely.

The Minister said he would carefully consider the suggestions made, both as to increasing the duties on pig iron and as to granting a bounty upon iron smelted from Canadian ore.

Made in Canada - Saving Duty Charges

Last season we inspected all the leading clothing Houses of Canada, also Society Brand of Chicago, in search of new clothing that would interest our customers. We were particularly impressed with Society Brand Clothing for young men. We introduced Society Brand Clothing to the young men of Peterboro, and its merits were speedily recognized. This season we again present Society Brand Clothing, but under more favorable circumstances. A contingent of American Society Brand designers and tailors arrived in Canada; huge bales of English woollens were here in readiness, and Society Brand Clothing, with all its style, splendid tailoring and beautiful finish, improved by the use of English materials, and the price, less the cost of duty, is here for the fitting out of the particular, well-groomed young man. The preference this season is grey and brown, leaning towards the rougher weaves, and these are shown in splendid variety. Come in and see them. Whether you buy now or later, matters not to us. But we are anxious to have you know the character and quality of these Society Brand Clothes.

H. LeBrun & Co.

There was some demand for a higher duty upon pig iron. The duty at present was $2.50 per ton. He would not venture to say whether this was too high or too low, but if it was increased, says $1 per ton, that would mean a seven per cent. increase upon their raw material for the manufactures of agricultural implements, the automobile manufacturers and many other manufacturers. It was difficult to change the duty on a basic raw material like pig iron without a general revision of the tariff.

As to bounties Mr. White said they were not, in his opinion, either good or bad in the abstract. Certainly in the case of iron and steel they had helped to found and helped to develop some magnificent enterprises.

Tidal Wave in Madagascar.

PARIS, March 11.—The Minister of the Colonies last night received a cable despatch from the Governor-General of Madagascar saying that a cyclone and tidal wave devastated the northwest region of the island March 2. Sixteen persons were killed and a number of vessels sunk at their moorings, including the schooners Marsouin and Jeanne d'Arc. Hundreds of buildings also were destroyed or seriously damaged.

Liberals Take General Exception to Government Policy

TORONTO, March 11.—The Legislature spent yesterday afternoon and evening in a protracted debate on the budget in which several members participated.

At a late hour in the evening session the Opposition brought in the following amendment to the Government motion to adopt the budget of the year:

"This House disapproves of and protests against (1) the presentation to the House by the Provincial Treasurer of financial statements which do not fairly set forth the real character of the financial transactions of the Government; (2) the extravagant and wasteful expenditure of public money by the Government, as illustrated by the expenditure on the Government House, when education and agriculture are in great need of further funds; (3) the vicious system of raising money on the cerdit of the province for particular purposes authorized by the Legislature, and then applying these trust funds to other purposes."

The budget debate in the Legislature was taken up in the afternoon by James Torrance of North Perth. He centred his remarks about the immigration problems of the province. No better class of new-comers had reached Ontario than those of last year, he said, and if the same policy were pursued during the coming year there could be little complaint.

W. E. N. Sinclair (South Ontario) followed with an attack upon the expenditure on the new Government House. It was a mountain of folly and the price had been increasing slowly to an enormous climax. Actually the total assessment of a county would appear small beside the sum involved in this policy. Money had also been spent on statute revision which would have brought a far greater return if applied to agriculture.

A. T. Scholfield (Guelph) pointed out that in the industries with which he was connected there was a dearth of workmen in the summer months. Factories in Guelph had been known to close down for this reason. He would advise that the attention of the Federal Government be directed to some system by which all the public works in the cities might be carried on in the winter months.

Thomas Marshall (Lib., Monck) criticized the Government for not having all the educational department changes discussed on the floor of the House. Further, teachers were not given enough latitude in the teaching of their classes.

The evening session resolved itself largely into a discussion among the northern members as to the attention their constituencies were receiving from the Government.

Z. Mageau (Lib., Sturgeon Falls) said that while the big things of the country were being kept sight of, the fact that a host of school children in his riding were kept home from school through bad roads, had not occurred to the Minister of Lands.

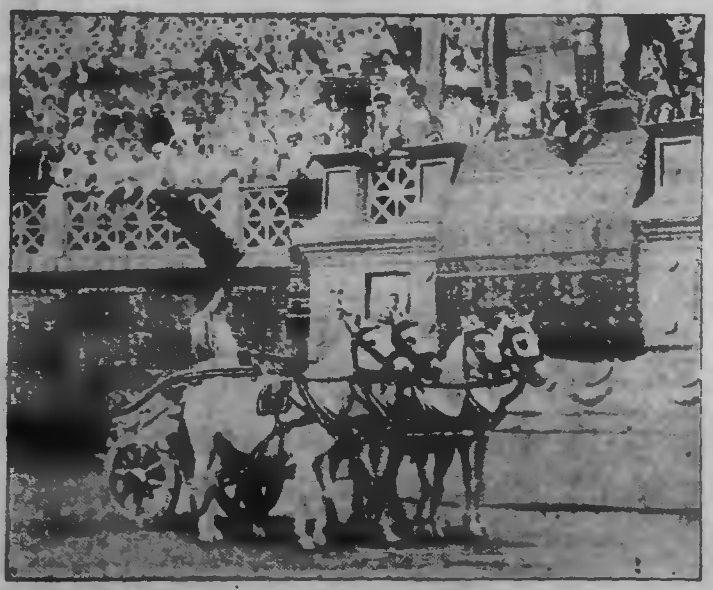
"The people I represent are loyal and should get as much attention as others," said Mr. Mageau, "but the system of patronage is to blame."

Charles McCrea (Sudbury) advised the Government to revise the names in the north country. The appellations of numerous lakes and sections were overlapping.

Col. T. R. Atkins (Norfolk) followed up with a criticism of the Government's policy, and moved his amendment of censure.

To discover whether Ontario possesses radium in any considerable quantity, and to reserve to the Government the right of its disposal, the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, laid a bill before the Legislature yesterday, providing a reward of $25,000 to the man who makes the first strike.

The bill goes further and gives to the Government the right to purchase private lands containing radium and to regulate the sale and use of the mineral.



Scene from "Kleine's" big reel photoplay, "Quo Vadis," which takes 2¼ hours to run, and which will be presented at "The Grand" for the first time next Thursday, March 13th, Matinee and Evening. The prices will be 10c., 15c., and 25c.

GOOD PICTURES AT THE ROYAL THEATRE

The big attraction at the Royal Theatre the fore part of this week is Mrs. Fiske in her great success, "Thess of Durberville," an exceedingly fine five reel drama. The programme also includes a four reel film entitled "The Wheel of Destruction," depicting an overland auto race. This picture is surely a thriller and is easily the best of its kind ever thrown on local canvas. The Royal is being well attended by ladies and children, which demonstrates the fact that Manager Clayton is giving the class of show in demand—that is interesting and instructive pictures.

THE MARKET

The market this week displays no great change from the reports of last week. Hens are beginning to do better work, and the result will no doubt be a decrease in the price of eggs. At present they are selling from 25 to 32 cents. The stores are selling at 25.

ECLIPSE OF THE MOON TO-NIGHT

Luminary Will Enter Shadow of Earth at 9.41.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—There will be an almost total eclipse of the moon to-night visible from all points in Western Europe, North and South America, and Western Africa. Astronomers at the naval observatory here prepared last night to make special observations during the eclipse, for while the moon is darkened, unusually accurate work may be accomplished. Fainter stars than are normally observed for purposes of observations are more easily seen during an eclipse, it was said, and they are of great importance in correcting the lunar tables. As yet astronomers have found it impossible to compute from theory, tables which agree exactly with the positions observed in the sky.

The moon is due to enter the shadow about 9.41 o'clock to-night; it should reach the middle of the eclipse about 11.12 o'clock and leave the shadow at 12.44 a.m. Thursday.

Reduce the high cost of living

Do you know that buying soap in cakes is wasting from 25¢ to 40¢ on every dollar? N.P. SOAP, the best soap you ever used, costs 15¢ a bar. It weighs more than four 5¢ cakes of ordinary soap, and more than five cakes of some brands.

BUY IT, WEIGH IT, TRY IT.

Lake Fishing Commences.

PORT STANLEY, March 11.—Cutting their way foot by foot through the ice between the piers, the fishing tugs, Francis H. Stanley and John R. Moore, pushed out of the harbor into Lake Erie and cast the fish nets of the season Monday.

The channel had frozen to a considerable depth, and some difficulty was experienced in making a passage through which the vessels could pass.

Redmond To Hurry Home.

MONTREAL, March 11. - Giving as his reasons for declining to attend the annual banquet here of the St. Patrick's Society on the 17th, that he has to hurry home on account of the present situation, William K. Redmond, M.P., brother of the Irish Nationalist leader, has telegraphed Hon. C. J. Doherty that he cannot accept the Montreal invitation.

He'd Better Have Waited.

STEVESTON, B.C., March 11.—Terrified by the possibility of missing the New Westminster-bound tram car and having an hour to wait for another a Japanese Monday morning over-exerted in running to the car, collapsed as he sank into a seat. The body was taken to Vancouver and left at the morgue, where an inquest will be held by Coroner Jeffs.

Condemns Bi-lingual Schools.

OTTAWA, March 11. — "The bi-lingual schools are financially a burden, educationally a detriment, and politically a danger to the separate school system," says Rev. Father O'Gorman, a prominent Roman Catholic priest, in a statement issued yesterday.

ST. PAUL'S WON SENIOR CHURCH LEAGUE HONORS

St. Andrews Had Lead of One Goal at Half Time

FINAL SCORE 3-2

In one of the best games seen in the Church League this year St. Paul's septet annexed the Church League silverware last evening at Brock street, when they defeated the fast St. Andrew's aggregation 3—2. St. Andrew's had considerably the best of the play during the first half and left the ice at 30 minutes leading with one counter. Coming back strong in the second half the boys from St. Paul's tied the score and forged ahead a minute before the final whistle blew. Len Dobson was satisfactory as referee.

The teams:

St. Andrew's—Goal, H. Lees; defence, Curry and Gibson; rover, Paton; centre, Minorgan; wings, B. Lees, Harper.

St. Paul's—Goal, McBride; defence, McCrimmon and Panter; rover, Turner; centre, S. Taylor; wings, Hall and Loucks.

HARDWAREMEN WON.

The Peterborough Hardware seven administered a 3—1 trimming to the Farm and Dairy septet last evening at Brock street rink. Len Dobson refereed.

BASEBALL

The last of the London Canadian League hold-outs has forwarded his signed contract in the person of Eddie Linneborn, the speedy second baseman of the Tecumsehs. Manager Reisling has perhaps the largest roster in the Canadian League.

"Chubby" Coose, who on his showing in the games at Riverside Park, rightly deserved the title of "the most valuable player for the Red Sox," wants London to pay him more money for his services this season.

Edmund Lamy, the famous American professional skating champion, and holder of many world's records on the ice, is now a member of the London Canadian League team for 1914, according to the latest bulletin, issued by Secretary Farrell, of the National Association. Lamy was purchased by Manager Reisling from the Charleston (W. Va.) club, where he starred last season.

Lamy is a speed merchant not only on skates, but on bases, or any place else on the diamond. He is an outfielder, and can do 100 yards in 10 seconds flat. He is just breaking into one of the most promising youngsters in the game to-day.

CURLING

The big Spiel at the Curling Rink is gradually coming to a close. Last night one of the semi-finals was run off and the other will be played to-night. The result of last night's curling was:

Primary—
Stubbs, 17, Dr. Wightman, 9.
Foot, 6, McCracken, 10.
Consolation—
A. Moore, 9, H. Rose, 12.
D. Campbell, 12, Geo. Stevenson, 7.
R. Neill, 11, S. Clegg, 6.

The draw for to-night in the Primary brings Taylor and Wightman together in the semi-final, and the winner will go into the finals with McCracken. The draw in the Consolation:

Stubbs vs. Campbell.
Lang vs. Rose.
Waddell vs. Neill.

PETERBORO BOYS ON CHAMPIONS

Harold Clancy and Hugh Burritt, two former local boys and who played here for the Old Boys in the recent benefit game here, were on the line-up of the Dominion Bank team which defeated the Union Bank last night in the Toronto Bank League, and thereby annexed the championship.

The score was 7-3, of which Burritt scored 3 and Clancy 2.

TECHNICAL POINT RAISE.

Laurier Endeavors To Head Off the Senate Increase.

OTTAWA, March 12. — Premier Borden's first step yesterday to increase the number of western Senators in accordance with the results of the 1911 census, was the signal for a constitutional struggle involving Parliament's right to give two new Senatorships to Manitoba. Sir Wilfrid Laurier raised the point that unlike the autonomy bills for Saskatchewan and Alberta, that of Manitoba made no provision for an increase. The Premier insisted that the enlargement of Manitoba gave Parliament the right to increase the number of Senators.

The discussion arose upon a resolution offered by the Prime Minister, increasing the representation of Manitoba in the Senate from four to six, Mr. Borden explained that by the act of 1912 enlarging the boundaries of Manitoba; it was provided that the province should be entitled to two additional Senators.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that such increase could not be made without the assent of the Imperial Parliament. When Manitoba was created, her Senatorial representation was fixed under the B.N.A. Act at four, without any provision for an increase in the future. This Parliament had therefore exhausted its powers in the case of Manitoba.

From this view the Prime Minister vigorously dissented. He contended that Parliament had power to increase the representation of a province when its boundaries were enlarged, as in the case of Manitoba, and quoted from the B.N.A. Act as amended in 1886 in support of his contention.

Judge Doherty, A. K. Maclean and Mr. German of Welland debated the subject at some length, and then Mr. Maclean (South York) opened a broadside attack on the Senate which he declared needed reforming rather than enlarging.

After some further discussions, in which Mr. Aikens (Brandon) and Hon. Charles Marcil participated, Mr. Borden's resolution was adopted, and the bill founded upon it was introduced and read the first time. Like procedure was followed in the case of Saskatchewan and Alberta. The increase in British Columbia's representation was not taken up.

PICTURE IS MUTILATED

LONDON, March 11.—A militant suffragette inflicted severe damage yesterday on the famous Velesquez picture known as the "Rokeby Venus," which is hung in the National Gallery, Trafalgar square. The picture was purchased for $225,000 in 1906, and presented to the nation. The woman entered the gallery and attacked the picture with a sharp knife, making six or seven bad cuts across it.

The perpetrator of the outrage was the notorious militant suffragette, Mrs. May Richardson, who has been sentenced to several terms of imprisonment since the beginning of the woman's suffrage militant movement. It was she who was arrested at Bristol on July 4 last for dropping a scroll of paper on the knees of King George as he was driving through the city. After she had served three months' imprisonment, she was arrested again in November on suspicion of burning a house at Hampton, but immediately started a hunger strike and was released a few weeks later in a serious condition of health.

The National Gallery was temporarily closed by the authorities after the outrage.

Goderich Wants Breakwater.

GODERICH, March 11. — Mayor Reid has been advised that Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works, will hear the harbor deputation from Goderich to-morrow, and the party leaves for Ottawa to-day.

Although the estimates brought down a few weeks ago contained $120,000 for harbor work here, it was for construction already begun and previously provided for, and the delegates will urge upon the Cabinet that at least the whole southwest outside breakwater be completed this year.

Hotel Was a Fire Trap.

ST. LOUIS, March 11.—Fire Chief Swingley said yesterday that six or seven months ago he warned the management of the Missouri Athletic Club that the club building was not safe for sleeping quarters. It had been converted into a hotel by dividing the upper floors into rooms for sleeping purposes.

The death list now is fixed at 31.

Britain's Latest Warship.

LONDON, March 11.—Two 3-inch guns for attacking air craft, and which are said to be capable of sending projectiles to a height of more than 10,000 feet at the rate of twelve or fifteen a minute, are among the novel features of the new superdreadnought battleship Iron Duke, which went into commission yesterday.

Paris is to have a childrens' court to be presided over by M. Flory, one of the most prominent judges in France.

3 IN ONE OILS
CLEANS, POLISHES
PREVENTS RUST

3-in-One is a light, pure oil compound that never gums. 3-in-One lubricates perfectly sewing machines, typewriters, bicycles, locks, clocks, guns, lawnmowers—everything that ever needs oiling in your home or office. No grease. No acid. A little 3-in-One on a soft cloth cleans and polishes perfectly all veneered or varnished furniture and woodwork. Sprinkled on a yard of black cheesecloth it makes an ideal Dustless Dusting Cloth.

3-in-One absolutely prevents rust on gun barrels, auto fixtures, bath room fixtures, gas ranges, everything metal, indoors or out, in any climate. It sinks into the unseen metal pores and forms a protecting "overcoat" which stays on.

Free—3-in-One—Free. Write today for generous free bottle and the 3-in-One Dictionary of hundreds of uses.

3-in-One is sold in all good stores in 3-size bottles: 10c (1 oz.), 25c (3 oz.), 50c (8 oz., ½ pint). Also in new patented Handy Oil Can, 25c (3½ oz.).

"McLaughlin-Buick"
Synonym for "VALUE"

VALUE in a motor car—true value—should be two-fold.
Seek value in the purchase-price; and value in the cost of up-keep.
In both respects, McLaughlin-Buicks challenge comparison.

Ever since the first McLaughlin-Buick was built, there has been constant effort to improve—to refine—to perfect, both in mechanism and in design.

The culmination of McLaughlin-Buick success, as represented by the 1914 models, is worthy the serious attention of any intending purchaser.

Along with every time-tried feature that has distinguished the McLaughlin-Buick models of former years, will be found such new improvements as can be depended upon to increase the power efficiency and decrease the fuel consumption.

The new Six-Cylinder model, with its record of 19½ miles on one gallon of gasoline, bears striking testimony to the success of the McLaughlin-Buick motor. All the models amply prove our claim of "greater mileage per gallon of fuel."

From the Roadster, that sells at $1,250, to the 7-passenger "Six," that sells at $2,780, they are all destined to further establish the name "McLaughlin-Buick" as a synonym for "value."

CAMPAIGN PROMISED.

Black Knights To Begin Educational Propaganda at Guelph.

GUELPH, March 11.—The Grand Black Chapter, Royal Black Knights of Ireland, opened its annual session in Tovell's Hall yesterday afternoon. Grand Master Ed. Lankin, of Toronto, presided. The Black Chapter will conclude by noon to-day, and the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario West will convene in the afternoon at the city hall. Fred Dane, of Toronto, is grand master.

T. W. Fox, county master, anticipates an attendance of 700 to 800 at the grand lodge this year, an increase over the number at Windsor last year.

Grand Registrar Fennell, in his report, said that the membership was 4,128, an increase of 648 for the year. Eight new preceptories were organized during the year, one at Porcupine, two at Toronto and one at Selwood, Sudbury, Guelph and Hornby.

Referring to Guelph, the grand registrar said that advantage would be taken to make Guelph the centre of a Protestant educational campaign.

BOARD OF WORKS MEMBERS HAVE WARM TIME TRYING TO DECIDE ON ESTIMATES

Appropriation is Finally Placed at $29,250, an Increase of $750 Over Last Year--- Rate Will Have to be Increased

The Board of Works had the eclipse of the moon beaten a dozen different ways last night. Ald. Duncan's select coterie sat down shortly after eight o'clock, and some of the members never turned a hair till Little Ben in the City Clerk's office was about to announce the hour of eleven. Others did.

There was a good old-fashioned heart to heart talk on things in general, but particularly on what the estimates for the department should be.

The original estimates were something like $33,700. Mayor Buller thought at least $5,000 could be extracted without any person suffering. Other members of the committee thought different, and a dead lock ensued.

Permanent Work.

Money for road repairs was the chief argument. Mayor Buller explained that in the west and south-western parts of the city it was not advantageous to spend money on the streets, because permanent work had yet to be done. He outlined a programme which will have to be carried out sooner or later. That is surface drainage for the western and south-western part of the city. For instance, he pointed out Romaine Street had been neglected, yet it was not good policy to spend money on this street, until the trunk sewer was completed. He was willing to spend money, but he wanted to spend it judiciously.

Ald. Green took the stand that the money would be spent judiciously by doing the work now. They could spend twice $30,000 and still spend the money judiciously. Ald. Green felt that certain streets were badly in need of repair. Some were dangerous; they were in a shameful condition.

Thus the conflict went on, with all the members with a word to say.

Finally, Ald. Johnston and Saunders moved that the estimates be placed at $28,500.

Ald. Green and Anderson moved that the amount be $30,000.

The vote was a tie. Ald. Stratton said it was foolishness to keep the estimates below what was required.

He moved for $29,999, and then tried $29,990, without success. Somebody moved a motion to adjourn. A stranger might have thought the committee was passing on a million dollar item.

Then Ald. Johnston wanted to know why the committee could not go ahead. "We're here chewing the rag"—

"You're doing your share of it," interrupted Ald. Duncan. Ald. Anderson and Green moved a new motion that $29,500 be provided, but there was nothing doing. Ald. Green tried again and said $29,250. This motion was seconded by Ald. Saunders and carried.

Fireworks.

"You kept wiggling away till you got it busted," remarked Ald. Johnston, whereupon Ald. Green jumped to his feet to take exception to Ald. Johnston's statements.

"What's the matter with you," inquired Ald. Johnston. He said he was just as much interested in the city and it's interests as Ald. Green, who as a new-comer must not think that those who did not agree with him did not know beans. Ald. Johnston held he had a right to his opinion.

Mayor Buller sided with Ald. Johnston and added that Ald. Green was not the whole cheese, and did not know everything. He himself had had to face defeat, and he had done so cheerfully.

"What about the deputation at the Council Chamber?" asked Ald. Stratton. He added that His Worship had been considerably rattled.

"I told you a few facts," answered the Mayor. "It didn't hurt you, did it?" Ald. Stratton said "No."

Thus the estimates for the year will be $29,250. The appropriation last year was $28,500.

Raise in Rate.

According to statements made by Ald. Anderson, chairman of the Finance Committee, a rate of 25 mills is not possible this year.

TWO FIRES AT SAME TIME

A Lighted Cigarette and Combustion Gave Brigade a Busy Time

The firemen had a very busy session for a few minutes this morning. At ten-thirty, a 'phone message acquainted them with the fact that a small fire had originated in the basement of Yeotes' cigar store. It appears that a lighted cigarette had been dropped through the grating and it set fire to some papers and other waste materials, which were strewn on the basement floor. The chief sent the ladder truck with a few chemicals and the blaze was soon extinguished.

While this section of the brigade was at work a fire caused by spontaneous combustion, broke out at Robinson's Livery, and this blaze necessitated the attention of the remainder of the brigade. A couple of pails of water put things to right.

SHADOW FROCKS ARE UNDER BAN

Chicago, March 12.—"Shadow" gowns, extreme low-neck dresses and other objectionable costume features will be forbidden at all dances given in South Chicago, according to the plans of Morgan Collins, captain of the police of that district, who last evening gave the new costume censor, Sergeant Robert Prendergast, instructions in this line of work. "A costume censor has been a long-felt want in South Chicago," said Captain Collins. "At some of the recent masquerade balls given in the last month many of the costumes worn by the women bordered on indecency."

EYE WITNESS TELLS OF FIRE AT MADISON HOME

Sanitary Inspector Should Have Reported the Conditions in the house

Lindsay Warder.

Mr. W. Stevens, of the R. Neill boot and shoe store, who lives on James Street, was one of the first to reach the scene of the Madison fire last night. He worked hard and endeavored to save the life of "Friday" Madison, who would have been burnt to a cinder had not he been carried downstairs by Mr. Stevens.

To a Warder reporter this morning Mr. Stevens said: "I was returning home and was on the G.T.R. tracks when I was met by Albert Gage who yelled out that Madison's house was on fire. I ran across the tracks and to the bungalow in short time, and noticed that the smoke was puffing out of the window upstairs, a small aperture a little over a foot square. As I approached the house I saw that Dr. Clarke and his driver were there, he having been calling on professional business in the neighborhood. He had just arrived. I heard a noise in the house and heard Mrs. Madison say, 'All the rest are down, but Jack's still upstairs.' I went into the house and found my way up the narrow-winding stairs through the the pitch darkness. The smoke was something fierce, while the odor was not very pleasant. I had to light a match in order to find out where 'Friday' was lying, and having spied him I blew the match out and lifted him up.

He had no clothes on except a short shirt, and I found it a difficult matter to get him down stairs, as he was heavy and unconscious. Several times he slipped out of my arms, but I finally secured a good hold on him and dragged him down stairs, and out into the open where he could get some fresh air. Dr. Clarke and others put some rags under him and over him to keep him from freezing, but as he was still unconscious, under the doctor's directions, we carried him back into the house again, where he would be more comfortable. The firemen and Chief Bell were soon on hand and had the fire out in short order. I don't know how the fire started, but I heard Dollie, the eldest daughter, say that the grandmother was lighting her pipe when in some manner the paper on the roof caught fire. I was never in such a house in all my life. It was in an awful condition, and the wonder is that the Children's Aid Society or the Sanitary Health Inspector did not report on the case long ago. I understand the five were sleeping in one bed—and such a bed. It was simply an old set of springs covered with all kinds of coats, etc., and an old blanket. The loft upstairs was thick with clothes of all descriptions, which smouldered and made a lot of smoke."

FORCES ALONG BORDER ARE BEING INCREASED

Anxiety of Texans Lest Mexicans Should Enter United States in Case of Sudden Developments Results in Speedy Mobilization of Forces at Entry Ports.

WASHINGTON, March [illegible]spatch of two additional regments of American infantry to Eagle Pass and Laredo, Texas, to allay fears of raids by Mexicans, and the appearance here of Gen. Felix Diaz and friends, with a new plan to solve the Mexican problem, were the chief developments yesterday in the Mexican situation.

The troops were ordered to the border at the request of Senator Sheppard and Representative Gardner. The latter told the President there was a good deal of cash in the border banks and Americans wanted to be protected against any sudden raid or invasion which might result from sensational overnight developments at any time in the Mexican situation. Mr. Gardner also said much cattle had disappeared lately and residents believed Mexicans were responsible.

Gen. Diaz and his friends here said they were not yet prepared to announce their purposes, but would do so in a statement to-day. Members of the party included Pedro Del Villar, who was before the Senate foreign relations committee last week and was reported to have asked support for a counter-revolutionary movement. The Mexicans denied yesterday that they were seeking support or sanction for any revolutionary movement, saying their idea chiefly was a campaign of information about Mexico, and to acquaint Washington with the personality of Gen. Diaz, so that his part in subsequent events in Mexico might be judged from a study at close range.

Just what their plans are for the restoration of peace, whether by armed revolution or peace proposals, was not divulged, but it was learned that they are seeking the elimination of Gen. Huerta, and are not allied in any way with the constitutionalists.

Yesterday's orders for the despatch of two more regiments to Texas will result in the assembly in that state of nearly 10,000 troops, more by 3,000 than the entire regular army which Gen. Shafter led into Cuba.

Carranza Will Be Cautious.

EL PASO, Texas, March 12.—The effort of Gen. Carranza to prevent unjust confiscation of property in rebel territory in Mexico, particularly that of foreigners, will take the form of a commission to review the evidence on which seizures already have been made and to investigate before others are made in the future.

The commission, it is said, will sit at Juarez after the arrival of Carranza, probably about ten days hence. It is believed by those who have talked with Carranza that it will assure the justice of confiscations based on enmity to the constitutionalist cause as in the Terrazas' estates, and of such seizures as the gambling privileges at Juarez, taken over by Gen. Villa.

THE JAGSHIP OF THE TRENT

Hurrah for the Bessie Butler,
  Hurrah for her gallant crew,
As spick and span a little craft
  As ever the Grit flag flew.
Whenever the "boys" got thirsty,
  And all their money was spent,
They boarded the Bessie Butler,
  The Jagship of the Trent.

The cargo she took was precious,
  And they stowed it all below,
Rum and whiskey and lager,
  Right down in the hold would go;
And never was crew so handy,
  With never a thought of care,
And the tools they carried were corkscrews,
  And each man had a pair.

There was gin for the gallant captain,
  And beer for the Bo'sun bold;
They spliced the main brace every hour
  When the weather was hot or cold;
They sang and played the piano
  From eve until break of day,
And the theme of the song was Stratton,
  And the chorus was Laurier.

Hurrah for the Bessie Butler,
  The boat so smart and trim,
Loaded with beer and vittals,
  She did great work for "Jim."
She did her duty nobly,
  Wherever she was sent,
The good old Bessie Butler,
  The jag-ship of the Trent.

NO FIXED RATE FOR CITY LABOR

Wages Have to be Graded According to the Ability and Class of Work Done --- Labor Council Want Minimum of 25c

Wm. Stevens, secretary of the Trades and Labor Council, wrote the Board of Works last night, asking that a minimum wage of 25 cents per hour be fixed for the city.

The committee was not in favor of making a change. It was pointed out that there are cases where men are given work which is enough to give them a living. Otherwise they would be cases of charity. Again some men were worth more money than others and wages were paid accordingly.

The minimum is $1.75.

Speaking of the men on the sidewalks, Ald. Green said, if they were good men, pay them more money. They should be paid what they were worth. He believed there were men in the employ of the city who were worth double what others were worth.

Ald. Duncan explained that the city had to grade the men according to their ability.

Mayor Buller said this had been explained to the Labor Council at a former meeting and that the explanation had been satisfactory.

G.T.R. Freight Train Comes to Grief at Sturgeon Creek

While a heavily laden Grand Trunk freight was passing Sturgeon Creek, near Omemee, while en route from Lindsay to Peterborough, about four-thirty this morning, the thirteenth car from the engine jumped the track and the remaining eight cars and caboose did likewise. Just what the cause was no one knows, but it is thought that a broken wheel did the trick. The fact that the van remained upright saved the men in it from injury.

The engine brought the crew and the first twelve cars to this city, and the Lindsay Auxiliary and its crew were sent for. It was found impossible to have the track cleared before the morning trains were due, so the old line via Millbrook was pressed into service. The track was cleared before noon.

ADVANCEMENT IS MADE IRRESPECTIVE OF PARTY

In Reply to Demand For Civil Service Examinations, Etc., In the Ontario Administration, Hon. Mr. Hearst Points Out That Number of Offices Are Too Limited to Make Scheme a Practicable One.

TORONTO, March 12.—Patronage vs. a commission system in the civil service formed the subject of a debate in the Legislature yesterday when Dr. McQueen (Lib., N. Wentworth) presented a motion declaring that the patronage system was inimical to the highest efficiency in the administration of provincial affairs.

Dr. McQueen (Lib., Wentworth), in the course of his speech, declared that asylum superintendents had been chosen without any consideration of their qualifications and placed over the heads of men who could have taught them all they knew. Many of these in Ontario did not even have executive ability.

In Great Britain, he said, the reversion to a commission was doing wonderfully well, both by open competition and fearless scrutiny of applicants. Under a commission the relief of the Minister from routine duty, and the selection of men on their merits improved the general effect of the civil service on the country, and gave a new viewpoint to the new-comers, who otherwise might feel that advancement came through political affiliation.

Hon. Mr. Hearst, in reply, said that of the appointment of asylum officials he knew little, but who would deny that the general management had improved? The argument of the Opposition was academic; it fell down in practical application. The new idea was not fitted to Ontario because of the limited number of offices and the varied character of the appointments.

Mr. Hearst said that the bulk of the men occupying positions in the civil service in Toronto were of Liberal tendencies and friends to the Opposition. There was not a case of the spoils system, and he was bound to say that they had always gained efficient service.

He moved an amendment congratulating the Government on the excellence of its administration in the matter of civil service.

W. N. Sinclair (South Ontario) said the amendment only meant that a large number of the civil servants in office under the late Government were still in office under the present Government, but the Government could not say that recent appointments had been made on the basis of independence or merit.

T. Marshall (Monck) said the removal of the patronage system would rid both parties of an incubus that would trouble them all their lives, because it was usually the rule that members lost the support of those who wanted jobs and did not get them.

A. H. Musgrove (North Huron) mentioned the cases of the two deputy Ministers now in the service of the Ottawa Government who had been recruited from the Provincial Departments as evidence of the capability of the service as a whole.

He quoted instances in the Department of Education to show that Liberals and Conservatives were equally favored, and in some cases Liberals were given preference.

On a division the Government amendment was upheld.

Resuming the debate on the budget, Allan Studholme (Hamilton) undertook a lengthy criticism of the Government's immigration policy, which lasted until 5 o'clock.

The debate will adjourn to-day with Hon. W. H. Hearst speaking for the Government.

Mr. Rowell will be the last speaker for the Opposition.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT.

EVERY LITTLE WHILE there crops up in some municipality, an agitation to substitute the English municipal system by what is called the Elective Commission form of Municipal Government.

Citizens became dissatisfied with the Council form of Municipal Government. Without seeking the real reason for their dissatisfaction they say:—If the Commission is an efficient method of managing the Hydro-Electric project, why is it not the best form for managing municipalities ? They do not stop to consider whether there is any analogy between the two. They point to the fact, that Commission Government has been an unqualified success in many cities in the United States without considering the difference between the two systems of national govt. that prevail in Canada and the United States. The two most notable examples in the American Republic are found in Galveston, Texas and Des Moines, Iowa. Previous to the institution of Commission Government in these two cities, they had endured perhaps the most inefficient system of municipal control that ever prevailed in that country. Commission Government reformed abuses there in a most effective manner. Why would it not be a good system in many Candiadian municipalities ?

In the first place, the entire American system of Government lends itself to the adoption of Commission Government in the fact that practically all offices from pound-keeper to President are elective. Public School Inspectors, Medical Health Officers, County Clerks, Mayors and Councillors, Meat Inspectors, Representatives to State Legislatures, State Judges, are only some of the officers whose positions depend on an appeal to the electorate.

Thus it happens that the ballot at elections is of an unusual size and length. So much so, that the ordinary voter is quite unable to go through the list and vote for the men whom he thinks best fitted for the various positions, but simply votes for the party slate, the result being that in municipal affairs, the party machine controls the situation, often to the great detriment of the municipality.

To overcome the bad results of machine politics in municipal affairs, to secure a short ballot together with responsibility of officers and continuity of policy, the Commission form of Municipal Government has been adopted in about one hundred cities in the United States.

The Canadian form of government is quite different. There is no long ballot to get rid of; as most officers are appointed, there is responsibility to the proper authorities. The influence of party politics in municipal affairs is not so strong that one party dominates the situation. The institution of a Board of Control secures the advantages derived from such a system as directs the Hydro-Electric. In regard to continuity of policy, the Commission form of Government has no advantage over the municipal system that prevails in Ontario, for the incoming council is obliged to follow, where the old council left off, and the appeal of an elective commission to the popular will, often results in an entirely new personnel.

The Canadian Courier of March 7th, published an article which appeared to show that Commission Government is now successfully in operation in various western cities, but, judging from the article, these cities are not governed by a Commission but by an elected council and Commission, the latter resembling the ordinary Board of Control. The Canadian Municipal Journal of February, published an article, showing that Commission Government, which had been adopted in St. John, New Brunswick, about one year ago, was a distinct failure, and instead of effecting economies, $50,000 were added to the annual appropriations.

Details of places in which Commission Government has been a failure are rather difficult to obtain. In most cases a very bad administration has aroused the people and caused them to set up an elective Commission, which at first ably directed the affairs of the municipality. Lack of public interest in the work of the Commission soon followed. The Commissioners were elected as a matter of course. In time, not the best men were elected; the management became inefficient, the people dissatisfied, and a return to the old form of Elected Council was the result. Pure democracy is never really popular. The majority of people do not care to investigate the dry details of the questions arising in municipal politics, and, the most important reason for discarding the council in Canadian municipal government, is the same reason that has led to the failure of commission government in the city of St. John, and in other places.

Turning to Great Britain, the English system of Mayor and Council furnishes numerous examples of the tried efficiency of that system, not only in directing ordinary municipal business, but also in controlling large public utilities. Cities like Glasgow, and Birmingham owning street car systems, gas systems, telephone systems, manage them profitably under the English form of municipal government.

The truth is the efficiency of any administration, whether it be Elective Commission or a Council, depends entirely on the men in office. The form has little to do with good or bad management. The system prevailing in Ontario is not perfect, but the history of commission government, together with the lack of causes in Canada identical with those in the American Union, that gave it birth, lead to the conclusion that there has yet to be evolved a system superior to that prevailing in Ontario.

THE FARMERS' IMPLEMENTS.

THE DUTIES on agricultural implements coming into Canada run from 7 per cent. to 20 per cent. No one has ever contended on either side of politics that 17 per cent. is more than a fair tariff of revenue. Yet the western members of the Opposition demand that agricultural implements should be placed on the FREE list. No one will deny that agricultural implements should be under as light a duty as possible, but if there is to be no revenue tariff and no tariff at all, then how will Canada carry on her government and public works ? The truth is, that the demand from the west is absurd. It is free trade run mad or it is a mere party dodge. They might as well ask that no taxes of any kind should be collected. It is just as sensible. Agricultural implements no longer need protection, but they must pay their share of a revenue tariff. Who will dispute that ?

CONSERVATIVE MEETING MARCH 30.

THE LOCAL Conservative Association decided to invite Hon. Robt. Rogers, Minister of Public Works, a clever and interesting speaker, and Hon. Arthur Meighen, "the ablest debater in the House of Commons," to their meeting on March 30th, and notified Mr. Burnham, M.P., to that effect. Word has been received that the invitation has been accepted and the public will look forward to an entertaining evening. The issues of the day will be fully treated. Mayor Buller has consented to preside. The Opera House has already been engaged.

MAY IT TEACH A LESSON.

AN M.P., says that the T.V.C. revelations will do much good, as they have impressed the members with the absolute necessity of promptly rescuing Canadian life from its apparently hopeless condition. Graft, instead of being the exception, has met with so little disapproval by electors at the polls that it has become rife and other and severer measures will have to be taken to protect the public service. It is freely admitted that unless a firmer hand is shown by the public Canada is in danger of drifting into moral ruin. As in all other matters the trouble is due to the actions of designing men, with little or no conscience.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER and his supporters are greatly disturbed over the proposal to add more territory to Manitoba, and thus increase the Senate representation from that Province. They should not take it so hard, for the Senate will be friendly to the present administration long before Sir Wilfrid and his crowd again assume power.

Hard For Some Travellers.

Montreal Gazette.

Clothing and prints travellers from Eastern Canada are to be taxed $50 a week while doing business in Vancouver, B.C., according to a decision of the finance committee of the City Council. The aldermen of the western city must be strong believers in high protection and outrageous taxation.

A Wretched Pun on Razors.

Toronto News.

The safety first movement is all right, but no one can wean us away from the good old Wade and Butcher.

They go the Way of the World.

St. Catherines Standard.

Buffalo within a short time has lost two noted newspaper proprietors, men who made a big success of the newspaper business, Mr. Matthews, proprietor of The Express, and now Edward H. Butler, proprietor of The News.

The Lure of the West.

Calgary Herald.

Farmers from Eastern Canada have started on their annual western home-seeking trek. The lure of the west seems to be just as potent as ever.

By Ticket Only.

New York Post.

Mrs. Lovelace had a new maid, not long over from Scandinavia. She was not quick to learn, but what she did learn, fixed itself solidly in her blonde head. In particular she was taught to take the visiting cards of Mrs. Lovelace's not infrequent callers.

One day appeared a certain Mrs. Furbelow, a crony and familiar of Mrs. Lovelace, and one not accustomed to the formalities of cards in that house. The new maid refused to let her in. She blocked the door with her substantial bulk and spoke firmly.

"You must give up your ticket first," she said.

A Large Concession.

Hamilton Herald.

The concession to the disaffected Ulster counties which the Asquith government is willing to make is, as anticipated, in the nature of local option. A majority of electors of each county will have the privilege of voting that county out of the operation of the home rule bill for a period of six years. It is a large concession, and if it be rejected by the Unionists the responsibility for whatever troubles may ensue will rest upon them.

Taxation of Church Property.

Calgary Herald.

Winnipeg loses the tax on forty millions of property because churches are exempt from taxation. It doesn't look right to Winnipeg aldermen, and they are talking of making a change. Wonder if it will end in talk there as elsewhere.

J. J. JONES

By Walt Mason

James Jimpson Jones drew fifteen bones each week where he was clerking; and this good soul deserved his roll, for he was fond of working. And every week he used to seek the bank, and there deposit a few iron men—and that, again, was foolishness—or, was it ? The other boys, who sampled joys and pastimes free and airy, made fun of Jones, who saved his bones, and shunned diversions merry. "He never goes to picture shows, or hits the large decanter," they used to say; "the hopeless jay ! He should be canned instanter. He has no whirls with chorus girls, he does not back the ponies; he does not cless at all, alas, with modern macaronis." The boys grew old who once were bold and full of pep and flossy, and worn and frayed asked public aid, dead broke and total-lossy. James Jimpson Jones, who saved his bones, is living in a palace, and he has bucks to throw at ducks, and diamonds on his gallus. In youth he worked and never shirked, though hard was his employment; his life was clean, and now, serene, in age he finds enjoyment.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

KINGAN HARDWARE CO.

Editor of The Review:

Dear Sir,—As the report of Mr. G. H. Ferguson, M.L.A., published in the newspapers, is not only unfair to the Kingan Hardware Co., but as far as the transaction of the Company with the Trent Department are concerned, is biased and misleading, I desire to correct same. All these transactions were ordinary business ones and in respect to which neither the Company nor Mr. McClellan, Mr. Clegg or Mr. Fairen had anything to conceal. There are a great many mistakes in the report in respect to this, but as it would take up too much space to corrrect them all, I will only refer to a few. The explosives were sold to be delivered f.o.b. car at Peterborough and were delivered accordingly. The Kingan Hardware Co. had no magazine nor control of any magazine, and any portion of the explosives not required by the Canal were stored in the City Magazine, and marked in the Company's books as the property of the Government, and the Kingan Co. had not and did not assume any right, claim or control over them, and all shipments made were made at the request of the Government officials—as to the deficiency in one shipment mentioned in the report—this was occasioned by reason of a change in the number of pounds of explosives put up by the manufacturer, which was done without notice to or knowledge of the Company, and in consequence when the Company was asked to ship two tons—80 boxes supposed to contain 50 pounds each were sent but immediately I found that these boxes contained less than 50 pounds each, I notified the Government officials of the fact and the balance remained in the City Magazine for the Government when called for and was designated as the property of the Government. When Mr. Ferguson was here on his investigation I voluntarily offered to show him all invoices, vouchers and entries in the Company's books in connection with the transaction and he had a full opportunity of examining them, which examination, if he had wished to be fair, would hav shown him that the whole transaction was open, fair and above board, and that there was no graft in connection with it, and that the dealings were not conducted as is stated in the report in a remarkable manner or shrouded in a most suspicious atmosphere. If Mr. Ferguson had been as anxious to discover the truth as he was to make political capital out of this investigation, his report would have been a very different one.

THE WORD "FEUDAL."

Editor of The Review:

Dear Mr. Editor,—The word "feudal" in Briton's letter of the 7th inst. caught my eye, and it carried me back to the "good old school days." You remember, Mr. Editor, that we did not always pay strict attention to "teacher's" explanations of the feudal system, but when she said, "Boys, we will take up 'Bloody' Mary this afternoon," we sat up. Didn't the chills chase up our spines. Bloody Mary!! Gee!!!

Mary was a great old girl to think her way the one and only way, wasn't she? Her short suit was toleration all right; she did not even hold a singleton. Did any one voice a view point that differed from Mary's he was thrust into the clear flame of—Mary did reason along those lines, did she not?

And there was Edmund, Bishop Bonner; you remember, Mr. Editor, how the boys would exclaim—"My! Ain't he an awful man for a minister!" He and Mary were like twins as regards toleration. For anyone who held a counter opinion —a real "honest-to-goodness" conviction that was contrary to Edmund's views itwas the red hot lid.

Well, well, but that was long, long ago. Mary and Bonner lived hundreds of years before our time— we have advanced since then. To-day if any one be opposed to our views we do not chop his head off—except metaphorically—or sizzle the flesh off his bones. Of course we don't, we are scared to, for someone would "have the law on us" if we did. Sure they would! So you see, Mr. Editor, what great, great strides we have made in these last few centuries.

Yours truly,
HISTORY.

P.S.—I wonder does the Literary chairman of the Police Commission ever think of his Kipling—"The Female of the Species is more deadly than the male."

Birthdays of Note

THURSDAY, MARCH TWELFTH

His Honor, W. F. A. Boys, formerly county judge of Simcoe, but now living retired in Barrie, celebrates his eighty-first birthday to-day. Though he was born in New York, he is virtually a Canadian for his parents were on their way at the time to take up their residence in this country. Judge Boys who went on the Bench thirty years ago, has long been a prominent citizen of Barrie, serving on various boards and being for some time mayor of the town. His book, "Boys on Coroners" has been one of the leading legal text books for Canadian students for some years.

Stephens Will Run.

MONTREAL, March 12. — Major G. W. Stephens has decided now that he will run for mayor and take a chance on his being disqualified under the residential stipulation. There is little doubt that if his opponent, Mederic Martin, one of the notorious "23" aldermen of the old corrupt regime, loses the fight, Stephens' election will be contested in the courts. The English-speaking ex-harbor board chairman has determined to run this risk.

Tarzan of the Apes

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS.

Copyright by the Frank A. Munsey Co.

He did what no red blooded man needs lessons in doing. He took his woman in his arms and smothered her with kisses.

For a moment Jane Porter lay there with half closed eyes. But as suddenly as the veil had been withdrawn it dropped again, and an outraged conscience suffused her face with its scarlet mantle, and a mortified woman thrust Tarzan of the apes from her and buried her face in her hands.

Tarzan had been surprised when he had found the girl he had learned to love after a vague and abstract manner a willing prisoner in his arms. Now he was surprised that she repulsed him.

He came close to her once more and took hold of her arm. She turned upon him, like a tigress, striking his great breast with her tiny hands.

Tarzan could not understand it.

A moment ago and it had been his intention to hasten Jane Porter back to her people, but that moment was lost. Since then Tarzan of the apes had felt the warm form close pressed to his. The hot, sweet breath against his cheek and mouth had fanned a new flame to life within his breast.

Again he laid his hand upon her arm. Again she repulsed him. And then Tarzan of the apes did just what his first ancestor would have done.

He took his woman in his arms and carried her into the jungle.

Early the following morning the four within the little cabin by the beach were awakened by the booming of a cannon. Clayton was the first to rush out, and there, beyond the harbor's mouth, he saw two vessels lying at anchor.

One was the Arrow and the other a small French cruiser. The sides of the latter were crowded with men gazing shoreward, and it was evident to Clayton, as to the others, who had now joined him, that the gun which they had heard had been fired to attract their attention if they still remained at the cabin.

By means of a bonfire the attention of the cruiser was gained, and a boat was lowered and dispatched toward the beach.

As it was drawn up a young officer stepped out. He was met by Clayton.

"M. Clayton, I presume," he asked.

"Thank heaven, you have come!" was Clayton's reply. "And it may be that it is not too late even now."

"What do you mean, monsieur?" asked the officer.

Clayton told of the abduction of Jane Porter and the need of armed men to aid in the search for her.

"Mon Dieu!" exclaimed the officer.

Among the officers in the last boats to put off from the cruiser was the commander of the vessel, and when he had heard the story of Jane Porter's abduction he generously called for volunteers to accompany Professor Porter and Clayton in their search.

Not an officer or a man of those brave Frenchmen who did not quickly beg leave to be one of the expedition.

The commander selected twenty men and two officers, Lieutenant d'Arnot and Lieutenant Charpentier. A boat was dispatched to the cruiser for provisions, ammunition and carbines. The men were already armed with revolvers.

Then, to Clayton's inquiries, as to how they had happened to anchor offshore and fire a signal gun, the commander, Captain Dufranne, explained that they had overhauled the Arrow and had boarded her.

The sight that met the Frenchmen's eyes as they clambered over the ship's side was appalling.

A dozen dead and dying men rolled hither and thither upon the pitching deck, the living intermingled with the dead. Two of the corpses appeared to have been partially devoured as though by wolves.

The prize crew soon had the vessel under proper sail and the living members of the ill starred company carried below to their hammocks.

The dead were wrapped in tarpaulins and lashed on deck to be identified by their comrades before being consigned to the deep.

None of the living were conscious when the Frenchmen reached the Arrow's deck. It did not take the French officer long to learn what had caused the terrible condition aboard, for when water and brandy were sought to restore the men it was found that not only was there none of either, but not a vestige of food of any description.

When restoratives had been applied several of the men regained consciousness, and then the whole story was told.

With no one on board who understood navigation after they left the African coast, discussions soon arose as to their whereabouts, and as several days' sailing did not raise land they bore off to the north, fearing that the high north winds that had prevailed had driven them south of the southern extremity of Africa.

They kept on a north-northeasterly course for two days, when they were overtaken by a calm which lasted for nearly a week. Their water was gone, and in another day they would be without food.

Conditions changed rapidly from bad to worse. One man went mad and leaped overboard. Soon another opened his veins and drank his own blood.

Two days before they had been picked up by the cruiser they had become too weak to handle the vessel, and that same day three men died. On the following morning it was seen that one of the corpses had been partially devoured.

All that day the men lay glaring at each other like beasts of prey, and the following morning two of the corpses lay almost entirely stripped of flesh. And then the cruiser had come.

When those who could had recovered the entire story had been told to the French commander, but the men were too ignorant to be able to tell him at just what point on the coast the professor and his party had been marooned, so the cruiser had steamed slowly along within sight of land, firing occasional signal guns and scanning every inch of the beach with glasses. The preceding night had brought them off the very beach where lay the little camp they sought.

By the time the two parties had narrated their several adventures the cruiser's boat had returned with supplies and arms for the expedition.

Within a few minutes the little body of sailors and the two French officers, together with Professor Porter and Clayton, set off upon their quest into the untracked jungle.

CHAPTER XV.

Heredity.

WHEN Jane Porter realized that she was being borne away a captive by the strange forest creature who had rescued her from the clutches of the ape she struggled desperately to escape.

Presently she gave up the futile effort and lay quietly, looking through half closed lids at the face of the man who strode easily through the tangled undergrowth with her.

It was a perfect type of the strongly masculine, unmarred by dissipation or degrading passions. One thing the girl had noticed particularly when she had seen Tarzan rushing upon Terkoz—the vivid scarlet band upon his forehead, from above the left eye to the scalp, but now as she scanned his features she noticed that it was gone and only a thin white line marked the spot where it had been.

As she lay more quietly in his arms Tarzan slightly relaxed his grip upon her.

Once he looked down into her eyes and smiled. The girl had to close her own to shut out the vision of that handsome, winning face.

Presently Tarzan took to the trees, and Jane Porter, wondering that she felt no fear, began to realize that in many respects she had never felt more secure in her whole life than now as she lay in the arms of this wild creature.

When with closed eyes she commenced to speculate upon the future and terrifying fears were conjured by a vivid imagination she had but to raise her lids and look upon that face so close to hers to dissipate the last remnant of apprehension.

On and on they went through what seemed a solid mass of verdure, yet ever there appeared to open before this forest god a passage as by magic which closed behind them as they passed.

As Tarzan moved steadily onward his mind was occupied with many strange and new thoughts. Here was a problem the like of which he had never encountered, and he felt rather than reasoned that he must meet it as a man and not as an ape. It was the order of the jungle for the male to take his mate by force. But could Tarzan be guided by the laws of the beasts? Was not Tarzan a man? But how did men do? He was puzzled. He did not know.

He wished that he might ask the girl, and then it came to him that she had already answered him in the futile struggle she had made to escape and to repulse him.

TORONTO WOMAN WELL AGAIN

Freed From Bearing Down Pains, Backache and Pain in Side by Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Toronto, Ont.—"Last October, I wrote to you for advice as I was completely run down, had bearing down sensation in the lower part of bowels, backache, and pain in the side. I also suffered terribly from gas. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am now entirely free from pain in back and bowels and am stronger in every way. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound highly to all expectant mothers."—Mrs. E. WANDBY, 92 Logan Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

Consider Well This Advice.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for nearly forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

REFORM DRESS

Society Women of France Start Reactionary Movement.

PARIS, March 11.—The Patriotic League of French Women has taken the initiative in a campaign against indecency in dress. A manifesto was issued yesterday to society women, signed by Vicomtesse de Velard, Marquise de Montaigu, Marquise de J'Aigne, Mme. Delacourt, Marquise de Moustiers, Comtesse de Villele, and Duchess de Maille, and is in response to injunctions recently read by some bishops and Cardinal Amette on women to league together and abolish the use of garments which are contrary to decency. "We ask," says the manifesto, "all elegant and young women who set the tone in France not only not to yield to but combine courageously against the present tendency by precept and example. What they do other women of more modest condition who have their eyes fixed upon them will do in their turn. Let us also not forget that we must have a care for the reputation which France has hitherto borne for elegance and taste. All who desire to join the movement are requested to register their names at the offices of the league, with a view to bringing pressure to bear on the principal couturiers and big establishments.

The secretary of the league, a good-looking woman in a black dress, with which not even the most rabid reformer could have found fault, explained the situation thus: "Fashion has gone beyond all bounds. We intend to react. The youngest and prettiest leaguers are to head the movement, and we shall force the chief fashion establishments to confine their ideas within more decent limits, so that a woman who desires to be modest need not find herself compelled to be indecent."

INDIAN RIVER

Indian River, March 12.—Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Blezard and family have returned home after a year's residence in Mission, B.C.

Mr. J. R. Hope received another bird from the ruins of the Ottawa Winter Fair. This makes three fowl returned out of eight sent to the exhibition. Two of the birds sent were very valuable.

Miss Mary Fife is home from Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Kidd of Warsaw, visited relatives in the village last week.

Cost of Strikes.

A special report has been issued by the Department of Labor containing particulars concerning strikes and lockouts that occurred in Canada during the period 1901-1912. The report shows that strikes taking place during those twelve years have numbered 1,319, an average of 110 annually. There were 319,980 employes concerned.

The time losses in strikes during the twelve years reach nearly nine million working days and would represent, it is suggested, at $2.50 a day, an annual loss to the workers of about $1,900,000, or a total estimated loss for the twelve years of between twenty-two and twenty-three million dollars.

Found Honey Mine.

Martin Rucker, former C. P. R. agent at Tilbury, Ont., and now located at Jeanette Station, in Tilbury East, discovered a honey mine on his Tilbury East home. Noticing bees flying around the corner of the house on warm days, he started to investigate, and found between the ceiling of the first floor and the flooring of the second storey of the house a bees' nest that contained 1,000 pounds of honey.

MANY ATTEND FUNERAL.

Supporters and Opponents of Sir George Ross Unite In Last Honors.

TORONTO, March 11—A varied assemblage of former political colleagues, supporters and admirers, many opponents, not a few former pupils, and a host of good friends of the late Sir George W. Ross gathered at 3 Elmsley place yesterday to pay their last respects to the memory of the Liberal leader.

The service at the house, 3 Elmsley road, was eloquently simple. Three ministers performed it, Rev. Dr. Milligan, Rev. Prof. Law and Rev. Dr. Harper Cooper of Old St. Andrew's Church. Dr. Milligan paid tribute in an unusual way—he did not laud and expand upon the dead man's goodness; he told the story of his life as he knew it.

The Governor-General was represented by his honorary aide, Sir Henry Pellatt. The Lieutenant-Governor was present on behalf of the province. Hon. Dr. Pyne represented the Ontario administration, and Senator Bostock represented the Senate. Hon. G. P. Graham the Liberal party at Ottawa, and N. W. Rowell, K.C., the Ontario Opposition. Among the many others present were: Sir Alan Aylesworth, President Falconer, Senator J. F. Kerr and Senator Jaffray, Prof. Mavor, Rev. Dr. George Grant, and Rev. Dr. Carman.

Senate Pays Tribute.

OTTAWA, March 11.—The Senate yesterday afternoon, on motion of Senator Lougheed, adjourned out of respect to the late Sir George Ross. On the assembly of the Upper House, Senator Lougheed paid a feeling tribute to the departed statesman.

MARRYING FOREIGNERS.

Canadian Girls Will Do Well to Consult the Law.

Canada is becoming a cosmopolitan sort of a country, containing large numbers of foreigners, and intermarriage is by no means unknown among us. Nor is to be considered objectionable from many points of view, says The Family Herald.

But the utmost care should be exercised at the time of marriage to ensure the pact's holding good in other countries. For in these days of travel it is not enough to rank as married in Canada only, and single elsewhere.

A Frenchman, for instance, must, under the Code of France, have the full consent of his parents if under twenty-five years of age. Otherwise his marriage, wherever and however solemnised, is null and void according to French law. No one could help a woman in any redress, whose husband, married without parental consent, deserted her to return to his own country.

If the foreigner is a German, and the marriage takes place under British laws, it is valid in Germany, "so far as the form is concerned," to quote a German consular document on the subject. But it is well to remember that in some parts of Germany a male German has to observe certain conditions, and if he ignores them, the marriage may involve legal disadvantages. It should also be borne in mind that a German who is under twenty-one years of age requires the consent of his parents.

Considering the large number of Italians residing in this country, it is necessary for a Canadian girl, who meditates marrying a subject of King Victor Emmanuel, to insist that her prospective husband shall conform to the laws of his country.

First of all, the banns of marriage must be published at his place of birth or domicile in Italy, and at the Italian consulate in whose district she and her sweetheart reside. If her lover is under twenty-five years of age, she must see to it that he obtains the consent of his parents or guardians, otherwise the marriage is not legal in Italy. It is essential that the marriage be registered at the husband's place of birth or domicile. The Italian consulate will undertake the registration.

As regards Spaniards who wish to marry Canadian girls, if they are under twenty-four years of age, they must first obtain the consent of their parents. Without this consent the marriage is not legal. Nor is it valid unless the registrar's certificate has been registered in the nearest Spanish consulate.

The marriage of a Canadian girl and a Russian is hedged by serious perils. Let those of our countrywomen who have accepted proposals of marriage from the subjects of the Czar remember that a civil marriage is not valid in Russia. A religious ceremony is absolutely essential, whether the bridegroom belongs to the Orthodox or any other church in Russia.

Before a Russian can get married he has to give to the priest a certificate obtained from a recruiting office.

A recent Act of the English Parliament seeks to protect British subjects who want to marry foreigners, whether at home or abroad. If they are residing in the United Kingdom, and want to marry in a foreign country, they must give notice of the marriage to the superintendent registrar of marriages, but if their domicile is in a foreign or overseas country, like Canada, notice must be given to the marriage officer for the time being under the Foreign Marriage Act, 1892.

Certificates from either of these officials must be secured, showing that there are no impediments to the marriage. There are penalties if a certificate has been obtained under false pretences.

Cases have already occurred of ill results from hastily, or ignorantly constructed marriages in the Dominions. It is best in every instance to secure the very best legal advice before entering into marriage contracts with foreigners, if only for the protection of posterity.

HON. MR. HANNA EXPLAINS.

Gives Reply to Charges of Company Affiliation—Evanturel Resigns.

TORONTO, March 11.—The Evanturel episode is closed. The member from Prescott has folded his tent and slipped away from the Ontario Legislature. Contrary to general expectations, he did not appear in the House yesterday afternoon, and the crowds which filled the gallery went away disappointed.

The whole affair was over in two minutes by the clock. "I have to inform the House that I am in receipt of the resignation of the member from Prescott," said the speaker in a matter-of-fact tone as he opened the session.

In rising to speak on a point of privilege afterwards, Hon. W. J. Hanna referred to statements that he was under retainer from the Standard Oil Co.

"Ten years ago this month, if my memory serves me right," began Mr. Hanna, "I made a statement in this House, a statement similar to the one that I find it my duty to repeat to-day. Never at any time did I or my firm, or anyone connected with me, receive directly or indirectly one dollar or one cent from the Standard Oil Co. in any way."

Hon. Mr. Hanna then went on to say that the Imperial Oil Co. of Sarnia, for which he had been solicitor since 1897, was a purely Canadian concern which he had served before he ever entered politics. It had never had any matter of any sort brought before the Ontario Government, nor did it conflict in any way with the Government. No assessment law had affected it to the extent of even a cent, because it did not produce but only refined and sold oil.

DISCUSSION OF TARIFF; DUTY ON IMPLEMENTS

In Replying to Resolution Introduced Before Budget Announcements as a "No Confidence" Motion, Premier Borden Says Removal of the Duty Would Place Canadian Markets at Mercy of the U.S. Trust.

OTTAWA, March 12—A resolution demanding free agricultural implements introduced by the Opposition in advance of the budget as a "no confidence" motion, was voted down in the House this morning, after a long one-sided debate in which only Premier Borden and Solicitor-General Meighen spoke for the Government. The Premier, in addition to advising the Liberals to wait for the budget, expressed his opinion that the effect of such a move would be to make Canada a slaughter market for the U. S. manufacturer.

In going into supply Mr. Knowles (Lib., Moose Jaw) moved an amendment declaring that the time had now arrived when in the inteersts of the farmers, and of the people of Canada generally, the tariff duty upon agricultural implements should be immediately removed.

During the past year this country had exported agricultural implements of the value of $6,152,559. During the same time our total imports amounted to no more than $4,446,867. Surely then when as to any particular item our exports exceeded our imports there no longer existed any necessity for protection.

Mr. Knowles insisted that the Canadian manufacturers sold their implements all over the world in successful competition with the American manufacturer. It was unfair, he said, for the Canadian manufacturer to sell plows, mowers, reapers, etc., to the farmers in Dakota for fifteen to twenty per cent. less than he charged a farmer in Saskatchewan.

The Prime Minister spoke briefly in reply, observing that the member was showing sudden zeal for free trade in agricultural implements. That zeal had never impelled him to make any motion upon going into supply when the Liberals occupied the Treasury benches. Indeed, the Prime Minister recalled that Mr. Knowles and all the western Liberals had cheered enthusiastically for the reciprocity in 1911 which only reduced duties upon agricultural implements by two and one-half per cent.

"I am tempted to say in this connection that reducing the duties does not always bring about the results anticipated. Twenty years ago we had thirty plow companies in Canada; the duty was reduced from thirty-five to twenty per cent., and nearly all of them went out of business. Only a few strong companies survived. Might not the removal of our duty upon agricultural implements result in eliminating all the small factories of this country, leaving only a few mammoth concerns which might or not soon join an international trust?

"However, this is merely by the way. I am not saying whether the Government favors or does not favor this resolution. Our views will be announced to the House at the proper time. For the present it is sufficient to say that the resolution presented at this juncture invites a no confidence vote, and must therefore be voted down by the supporters of the present administration."

Mr. Levi Thompson (Qu'Appelle) quoted from a speech by Hon. Mr. Meighen, where the latter had demonstrated that the duty upon agricultural implements could be substantially reduced without at all departing from the principle of adequate protection for home industries.

Mr. Hugh Guthrie (South Wellington) said that Mr. Borden opposed free agricultural implements upon the ground that the removal of the duties would deliver the Canadian market to the big American trusts. As a matter of fact, Mr. Guthrie said, Canada more than held her own against the United States in the markets of the world.

Dr. Neely (Humboldt) said the Prime Minister took Mr. Knowles to task for discussing a tariff item in advance of the budget speech, but he saw nothing wrong in Mr. Carrick doing the same thing Tuesday. An application by the wealthy manufacturers for higher duties was always seasonable, but the farmer who asked for lower taxation was always out of order.

Dr. Clark (Red Deer) criticized the ground taken by the Prime Minister. Mr. Borden's position, he said, was that free trade meant international trust rule. The conclusion was that we must have perpetual protection for every manufacturer in Canada. In short, the Prime Minister cast aside the basis of the national policy.

Solicitor-General Meighen took the floor after midnight. He announced as hypocritical the present attitude of the Opposition. He asked why the Laurier Government had not stipulated for free trade in agricultural implements when they negotiated the reciprocity treaty; it had been offered to them by President Taft.

He said that individual members in both parties disagreed among themselves as to how much protection might be needed for this or that industry. The Conservative party, however, professed the doctrine of protection and adhered to it, though members of that party might differ as to the necessity of protection for this or that industry or to the amount of protection required. The Liberals were protectionists, differing among themselves as to the amount required but kept up a hypocritical pretense of favoring free trade.

The resolution was put, and defeated on division.

NEWS NOTES FROM OMEMEE

Special Correspondence.

OMEMEE, March 9.—Mr. Albert Jones of Peterboro, was the guest of his Omemee friends over the week-end.

On Wednesday of last week, marriage bells were ringing gaily at the home of Mr. Henry Nugent, the occasion being the union in holly wedlock of his daughter, Miss Edith, to Mr. L. Mahood. Rev. J. F. Chapman was the officiating clergyman. The young couple are quite popular and will reside in Omemee.

MONTREAL MAN SEEKS HIS NIECE

Girl Disappeared the Night His House Was Burned.

MONTREAL, [illegible] —The mysterious disappearance of his niece on the night of March 5, following an equally mysterious fire in his home, led Alfred Gauthier to consult the police yesterday.

An investigation into the fire has been opened by Commissioner Latulippe. Mrs. Gauthier testified that her husband and family were in bed and she was waiting up for her niece, Eugenie Lescom, 23 years old, who early in the evening had gone out with a man whom Mrs. Gauthier knew as "Paul." A few minutes after her departure another man called for her. This man had often taken Eugenie out and on this particular night after being told she was not in, he loitered in the vicinity. About midnight Mrs. Gauthier said she discovered both the rear gallery and the curtains of the front door in flames.

The second young man, Joseph Lauzon, has turned up to say that when he noticed the fire he ran to give the alarm. The girl has not been heard of since.

NOW IS THE TIME TO GATHER IN ALL YOUR PROMISES

Candidates Get Busy and Go After the Party Who at the First of the Contest Promised You a Subscription and Turn It Into Votes.

Did you hear it? Last night at about eight o'clock some of the wide awake energetic workers in the greatest of prize contests discovered the great swarm of votes that they were securing for taking advantage of the great club offer. For the past few weeks Peterborough't most progressive daily newspaper, The Review, has warned the readers that such a great scene would be presented. Now the great problem that is requiring the attention of the most energetic in this part of Ontario is how to capture this great Touring Car. As announced some time ago in The Review it will take good live energetic candidates to make this valuable capture.

8 P. M. Saturday, March 21.

In view of the great interest that the greatest of prize contests is creating the contest department has decided to give the candidates another 10 days in which to cash the remainder of their promises, and up until Saturday evening, March 21, every subscription will have a great vote value, for particulars of each subscription will be seen in the advertisement in another part of this paper.

Votes Not Counted.

On account of the great rush of business in the contest department last night, they were unable to make a count of the thousands of votes that were brought to the office during the day and in the evening but in Friday's issue will be found a correct standing of each candidate who has turned in votes up to Thursday evening. From now on to the end of the contest candidates will have to use the subscription votes if they wish to be placed at the head of the large list of candidates.

Quick Action Required.

Candidates will have to make every moment count this week if they want to come under the wire Saturday evening, March 21, with the largest number of votes to their credit. Every candidate in the great contest is doing good and every one is getting subscriptions and now comes the great question. Who will have the friends that will put forth the proper effort to make them the winner of the grand prize at the end of the great contest? One thing is certain it will be the worker that will be crowned with this great honor. The next few days will tell.

OBITUARY

GORDON BROWNING SOANES

Gordan Browning Soanes, aged 7 months and 5 days, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Soanes, 71 McDonnel street, passed away this morning.

The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

Poaching Is Increasing.

OTTAWA, March 12.—When the Consolidated Fisheries Act was under discussion in committee yesterday morning, G. W. Kyte, of Richmand, held that in connection with prosecutions for poaching, entirely too much power is given fishery guardians. Their privilege of arresting poachers without warrant might be thought be abused, and be a violation of the habeas corpus act. The clause was held over. Departmental officials stated that poaching is increasing tremendously.

KEPHALDOL

The Positive Safe Cure for Headache and Neuralgia.

Sufferers from these torturing ailments will welcome the coming to Canada of the well known European remedy, Dr. Stohr's Kephaldol.

Hitherto the use of most so-called remedies has ben attended with the gravest danger on account of their injurious effect on the heart and other organs. Kephaldol may be taken with absolute safety.

In thousands of cases Kephaldol acts instantaneously—acts where other remedies have proved useless. Yet its use is never attended by any ill after effects. It has been recognized by the medical profession, who have made regular and prolonged trials of it in their clinics, on thousands of patients.

If you would get quick and safe relief from those distressing pains and aches, get a 50c tube of Kephaldol tablets from your druggist today, and never be without a supply. Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour St., Montreal.

NEWS OF APSLEY

Special Correspondence.

APSLEY, March 12.—Our Community was suddenly cast into gloom on Wednesday, March 4, when the sad news was received here that Matilda Bullied, beloved wife of Levi Bullied, has passed away Only a couple of weeks ago their dwelling with all its contents was destroyed by fire and since that time they had been making their home at Mr. T. J. Wilson's Chandos. It was here that death visited their household.

The deceased was a young lady who was highly esteemed and had a large circle of friends. She taught school in this locality for a number of years. She also took an active part in the Church and Sunday School and was a member of the Ladies' Aid Society of this village.

The funeral took place from her late home in Chandos on Friday, March 6, to the Methodist Church, Apsley, where service was held, Rev. J. Prosser officiating. After the closing of the service many of the vast audience moved slowly up the aisle to view the remains, which rested in a casket covered with floral tributes. The pall bearers were: Messrs. A. Wilson, H. Wilson, T. J. Wilson, P. Gilroy, J. Edgar and D. Whitmore.

Deceased had only been married about ten months and was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Bullied, formerly of this locality, now residing in Coe Hill, who, with her sorrowing husband, three sisters and three brothers, are left to mourn her loss.

The remains were laid to rest in the Church of England Cemetery.

We see but dimly through the mists and vapors
Amid these earthly damps,
What seems to us but sad funeral tapers
May be Heaven's distant lamps.

Big Schooner Foundered.

BOSTON, March 12. — A large schooner has gone to the bottom off the tip of Cape Cod, in the opinion of Captain Hanson of the tug Plymouth, who reported on his arrival the presence there of a projecting spar and other wreckage in the path of coastwise shipping. The position is about northeast of Race Point. The revenue cutter Gresham was ordered to investigate.

Octogenarian Hurt.

MITCHELL, March 12.—Mrs. John Robinson, aged 80 years, living alone, slipped, and fell on the ice outside her home and broke her hip so badly that it cannot be set. The accident may prove fatal.

TOWNSHIPS CANNOT AGREE ON DISPUTED BOUNDARY ACCOUNTS

At the North Monaghan Council meeting Mr. D. W. Dumble came before the council and asked them to accept a deed of Cottesmore Avenue, through Mr. T. Hurley's property. Mr. Dumble agrees to give the township a deed of the said street and he also asks the council to grade Cottesmore Avenue and also Western Avenue from Cottesmore Avenue to the Gravel Road.

Mr. Arthur Read came before the council again and asked them to lease to him about twenty feet on the north side of the east end of Lansdowne Street for a period of fifty years on which to erect a boat house. The council after fully discussing the question, decided to take no action in the matter. Mr. John McIntosh came before Council and said that he had had occasion to meet the Cavan Council and he asked them to do something toward improving the road from the Cavan boundary through the swamps and they assured him that they would spend dollar for dollar with North Monaghan. Moved by Mr. Forster, seconded by Mr. Dobbin, that Messrs. Young and Robson be a committee to meet a committee of Cavan township on the boundary road and investigate Mr. McIntosh's request and decide what is best to do with the said road.

Mr. Switzer, on behalf of the Toronto Savings and Loan So., asked Council to grade the ungraded streets on the sugar beet property.

Mr. A. Saunders asked Council to build a new bridge on McKellar St. across the Park Street drain. Mr. Saunders said the old bridge was in very bad condition and the Council assured him that they would look after this matter.

The minutes of the last two meetings were then read. A motion was moved by Mr. Forster and Young that the minutes of the last two meetings be accepted as read.

A communication was received from Mr. G. N. Gordon stating that he had received no reply to his first letter, and also stating that if the Council did not take some action in the matter of Dobbin vs. Monaghan, and reply by the 15th instant, he would have to take legal proceedings against the township. The Council authorized the clerk to publish Mr. Peck's letter in regard to Mr. Gordon's claim.

The letter is as follows:

Re George Dobbin and North Monaghan—

We have made inquiries with reference to this claim, and from information we have received, we consider that the township is not liable in respect of the matter referred to in Mr. Gordon's letter to your clerk.

A motion was moved by Messrs. Young and Robson that no action be taken in regard to the communication from Margaret Gordon, M.D., regarding votes for married women.

Moved by Messrs. Dobbin and Robson that this Council meet Mr. Switzer on the ground regarding the grading of the streets on the sugar beet property. Moved by Messrs. Dobbin and Robson that this township has done an equal amount of work on the township of Smith boundary with township of Smith therefore there should be charged to the Commissioners' account of Road Division No. 1 the total amount of the work done by him. One half of the present time being charged to the township of Smith. Moved by Messrs. Forster and Young that the following accounts be passed and paid:

A. E. Saunders, groceries re charity, $15.54.

Municipal World supplies, .74.

Dr. T. N. Greer, under by-law 671, balance of yearly salary, $90.

The Monaghan Council then met the Smith township council to try and come to terms and settle disputed boundary accounts. The Monaghan Council, however, retired without any arrangement being made Council adjourned.

DEATH LIST MAY REACH 45

ST. LOUIS, March 12.—Work of searching of the ruins of the Missouri Athletic Club for the bodies of the twenty victims of Monday's fire, believed to be in the debris, made slow progress yesterday, and no bodies were recovered. Nine of the ten recovered have been identified. A conservative estimate places the number of dead at 30, although some officers of the club think it may reach 45.

Mail Delivery By Ice-Boats.

CHARLOTTETOWN, March 12.—At 7.15 a.m. ice-boats left Cape Traverse with 53 sacks of mail and two passengers and arrived at 11.15. Six boats left Cape Tormentine at 7.30 with 43 sacks of mail and one passenger and arrived at Cape Traverse at 11.30. The mail special arrived in Charlottetown at 2.15 o'clock.

Constable Arrested.

MONCTON, N.B., March 12.—A. B. Belyea, a local constable was arrested by Officers Gaw and Webb on the charge of attempting to shoot with murderous intent. It is alleged that Belyea entered a Main street boarding-house and threatened to shoot the proprietress, her daughter and a boarder.

TORTURED WITH RHEUMATISM

Could Not Walk, Until "Fruit-a-tives" Completely Cured Him

CHATHAM, ONT., April 3rd. 1913.

"I am a veteran of the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny, volunteering from the Royal Artillery into the Royal Engineers, and served under Lord Roberts during the Indian Mutiny, and am a pensioner of the British Government. Fierce hand-to-hand fighting and continual exposure, left me a great sufferer from Rheumatism, so much so that my legs swelled up, making it impossible for me to walk. My bowels were so constipated that I only had one passage a week until I got to using "Fruit-a-tives". They cured me of both the Rheumatism and Constipation. In my regular employment, I walk thirty miles a day and enjoy perfect health. No more Rheumatism or Constipation. You are at perfect liberty to publish this letter if it will be advantageous to "Fruit-a-tives".

JUNIORS ALSO SUFFER DEFEAT AT LINDSAY

Youngsters Put up Stiff Argument—Score Was 6-4

The local septet which travelled to Lindsay last night and met the L.C.I. septet, the winners of the town league, were contestants in one of the fastest games of hockey seen on Lindsay rink in years. Although the boys were defeated by 6—4, it was by no means a walk over for it was anybody's game up till the last ten minutes. The half-time figures stood 2—2.

Lindsay seven were very heavy and the light forward line of the locals were up against a hard proposition, but their superb condition and nifty stick handling were used to great advantage. The teams lined up as follows:—

Peterborough—Goal, Flowers; defence, Legendre and Phelan; rover, Smith; centre, Butcher; wings, Knapman and Jackson.

Lindsay—Goal, Williamson; defence, Norton and Sandercock; rover, C. Carew; centre, McIlroy; wings, A. Carew and Coombs. Referee, A. Gamble.

A return game will be played at Brock street rink on Friday night and there should be a large number of fans out to see the boys go. Lornie Rose will play left wing and Jackson will rove instead of Smith.

CANADIENS WERE HELD BACK BY BLUE SHIRTS

Torontos Won the N. H. A. Championship by Four Goal Margin

Toronto, March 12.—Serving up their best brand of hockey of the season, Torontos last night won the N.H.A. championship, and thereby qualified to meet Victoria here Saturday night in the first game of the world's championship. The Blue Shirts scored a decisive victory over the Canadiens, as they had clearly the best of the play, and should have won by a larger margin. It was not until the last period the teams were tied, and the slogan was "twenty minutes from the championship." Those twenty minutes, as was expected, played an important part in the deciding of the honors, but none of the 6,000 fans present expected to see such a turnover, especially after the Canadiens opened the last period with two wicked shots right at Holmes. This was their last opportunity, as the Blue Shirts waded in and put the game on ice by scoring three goals, and just to add insult to injury, Vezina's dilatory tactics gave the locals a fourth, thus making the score 6 to 0 for the Torontos, or 6 to 2 on the round.

Torontos will now meet Victorias in the first game Saturday night, and if they repeat their performance of last night, will take some beating.

ORILLIANS TAKE JUNIOR TITLE AGAIN

Champions Had Better of Play and Won 10—3.

Orillia, March 12.—Orillia landed the O.H.A. junior championship here last night by defeating Varsity by the score of 10 to 3. Half-time score was 5 to 1 for Orillia. The locals thus won the round by 6 goals.

Orillia outplayed the college boys in every way and won the championship on their own merit. Orillia's effective back-checking roved too much for the visitors, and the forwards' back-checking and fine work of the Orillia defence kept the Varsity forwards within safe range. Johnstone was not called upon to do the job very often, but was there with the goods and Varsity's three tallies were on scrimmages.

Referee—Dr. Gilfillan, Uxbridge.

McCRACKEN AND TAYLOR IN THE FINALS

L. A. Fortin	A. P. McLean
M. C. Tooley	W. H. Collier
A. W. Archibald	Jas. Skinner
W. McCracken, skip.	W. H. Taylor, skip.

Thus will the two rinks playing the final of the local club 'spiel line-up. W. H. Taylor's rink qualified to enter the final when he put Dr. Wightman's quartette away last night in the semi-final by a score of 12—9. The date for the final has not as yet been announced.

The result of last night's curling in the consolation resulted as follows:—Stubbs 12, Campbell 6; Lang 13, Rose 4; Neill 12, Waddell 8.

SENATORS WANT ARTIE SCHWIND BACK AGAIN

Ottawa, March 12. — Artie Schwind, the sensation of the Canadian League in 1912, may be seen cavorting around the short field at Lansdowne Park this season. Manager Shaughnessy is now angling with the Atlanta, Georgia, club of the Southern League, where Schwind was sent by the Boston Nationals, to secure the speed boy for the Senators again. The great trouble is, Artie is liable to make good in Class A company, which would preclude all chance of him coming up this way. He burnt up the Texas League, a Class B circuit, while playing short for San Antonio last summer, and Stallings brought him back with the intention of turning him over to Buffalo, of the International League. This year Boston, having no place for him, with Rabbitt Maranville looming up as the best shortstop in the National. Schwind was sent to Atlanta, a farm for the Boston braves.

BASEBALL

Manager Yates, of Hamilton, has signed the following: Charlie Dolan, Patsy Dougherty, Harry Corns, Coleman, an outfielder: Catcher Darlingford, and two or three others. Dolan is a brother to Frank Dolan, of the Ottawas.

Catcher Irving Trout, who was with the Petes last season, will go south with the Toronto Maple Leafs. Pitcher Kirley will be with Ed. Holly's Canadian Leaguers.

The Hamilton squad will train at home. The players have been ordered to report there on April 1.

Tommie Smith, who led the National Hockey Association in goal-scoring, may get a trial with the Ottawas. He is a crack ball player. Odie Cleghorn and Art. Ross will again play in the Montreal City League.

Louie Cook will have four ex-Ottawa players on his Ashville team. Cook will play second with Rowe in the outfield. "Sailor" Burke may be traded to him by the Ottawas and Joe McManus is a possibility for his pitching staff.

Kelly Harris will be in the outfield for the Erie team. He claimed to be handicapped by illness last summer.

The Erie players will take their spring training at headquarters. They have been ordered to report there on April 15.

"Doc" Reisling will take charge of the London team within a week or two. He evidently believes in an early start.

If "Lefty" Rogers decides to return to Ottawa he will have to play in the outfield again. Frank Dolan is sure to be found at first base. Rogers refuses to pitch again.

London's infield is already complete. They will have Bierbauer at first, Linneborn second, and a new man at short with Myers for third. Dunlop will be retained by the Cleveland Naps.

President Stevely, of the London Club, has gone on a trip to the Coast. He may round up one or two good players in the West.

Morning games will be scheduled in Ottawa on Victoria Day, King's Birthday, Dominion Day and Civic Holiday. The team will likely be on the road for Labor Day.

There is no chance of Fred Herbert returning to the Ottawas. If he does not make good in the International, the Leafs will shift him to Eddie Holly's Canadian Leaguers. Renfer may possibly be with the Senators again.

"Give me a first class shortstop and three good pitchers, and I'll bring another pennant here," stated Manager Shaughnessy this morning. And it is along these lines the husky, bent-legged pilot is directing his energies."—Ottawa Free Press.

Catcher Ed. Sweeney, who has been negotiating with the Federals, has signed a contract with the New York Americans.

Bill Bradley has at last been named as manager of Brooklyn Feds.

Art. Griggs, last year's first baseman of Montreal, has jumped to the Feds.

Ray Chapman, shortstop of the Cleveland team, fractured his ankle yesterday, and will be out of the game for a while. his will give Dunlop, of last year's London team, a chance.

Dunlop, the London shortstop, now with Cleveland is down south with the Naps, fighting it out with Chapman for a place.

Jim McAvoy, of last year's Berlin squad, is now with Baltimore.

LONDON TO OPEN HERE

Canadian League Schedule Will be Published This Week

The London Club will open the Canadian League season here with the Petes on Thursday, May 14th.

Secretary Carr, who attended the meeting of the Canadian League magnates in Toronto yesterday, secured this change for the local club, along with several other minor changes.

The schedule was adopted and will be given out for publication at the end of the week.

T. J. O'Connor, who with Geo. O'Neill, represented the Erie Club, spoke very highly to Mr. Carr in regord to Manager Blount. Mr. O'Connor says, Blount is very fast on the bases and a good clouter and he is also a good leader.

It was decided to have President Fitzgerald go before the National Commission in an effort to have the Canadian League elevated to Class B, a concession which was recently refused by the National Association.

The President announced that six umpires hadb een signed, two of whom will be released after a two weeks' trial. The arbiters are J. M. Flynn, Buffalo; J. J. Walsh, Wilkesbarre; R. E. Bedford, New York; Henry Riley, Jamestown, N. Y.; Geo. Miller, Kansas City; 'Arlie' Latham, the famous former player-humorist of the New York Giants.

Season tickets will be alotted to the various clubs as follows: Toronto, 100; Erie, London, Hamilton, 50: Brantford, St. Thomas and Peterborough, 40. The daily passes will be limited as follows: Toronto, 50; all others, 25. Sunday ball will be played in Ottawa (Hull) and Erie, when the teams will divide the gate receipts equally.

The guarantee was raised to $50 and $30, while Ottawa will pay $75, as last season.

Women's Coats This Spring Are Radically Different

VERY STRIKING indeed is the difference in outline, especially as to the back of the present sport's coat or wrap, from the coat of yesterday.

The flare of the lower edge, the use of flounces on the more elaborate designs, the Raglan sleeve are the conspicuous changes, incidentally the favor of oddity is distinctively stimulating.

You will find the new separate coat a good friend for spring wear, over a multitude of frocks old or new.

Some distinctive examples are:—

Shepherd Plaid

In large combination check — sports fashion, fancy patch pockets, cut away front, large cuffs. Price.. $10.00

Mixed Tweed Coat

In cut-away front, three-quarters length, fashion. Made with yoke, English Raglan shoulder. Collar and Cuffs outlined with French blue moire silk.

Price.......... $13.50

Honeycomb Cloth

Makes up a stunning coat of three-quarter length. It is loose and sporting looking, while at the same time the rich fabric is very dressy. Lined with shot messeline silk. Price.. .. .. $27.50

Kelly Green Golfine Coat

In a fine Suede Cloth with low belt and conservative shaping collar. Collar and revers trimmed with white chamois cloth, an admirable outdoor coat. Price.... .... $16.50

"QUO VADIS"

The Big "Kleine" Production in 8 Reels to be Shown at "The Grand" To-Morrow.

Imitation is said to be the sincerest flattery. This is quite true but cannot always be appreciated by the public. The George Kleine production of the Cines photo-drama, "Quo Vadis," achieved a remarkable success in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Baltimore and a dozen other cities and inspired a number of unscrupulous parties with the idea of launching a much smaller and insignificant production on the market and banking upon the public credulity, to take advantage of the immense advertising Mr. Kleine's production has received. As a consequence many people who have wished to see the big production have been unsuspectingly drawn in to witness the little one and without thinking have passed judgment. This is one of those unavoidable conditions that arise under our present social and legal status, and works as much harm to the public at large as it does to the producers who invest their fortunes in big enterprises. The real George Kleine production of "Quo Vadis" is presented with eight parts or reels that are divided into three acts and is only played in the larger high class theatres of the country and never at prices less than fifty cents for orchestra seats and twenty-five for balconies. The real "Quo Vadis" will be the attraction at The Grand to-morrow (Friday), matinee and evening. For this engagement special prices of 10c., 15c. and 25c. have been arranged.

A. E. ANSON BRINGING A STRONG CO. HERE

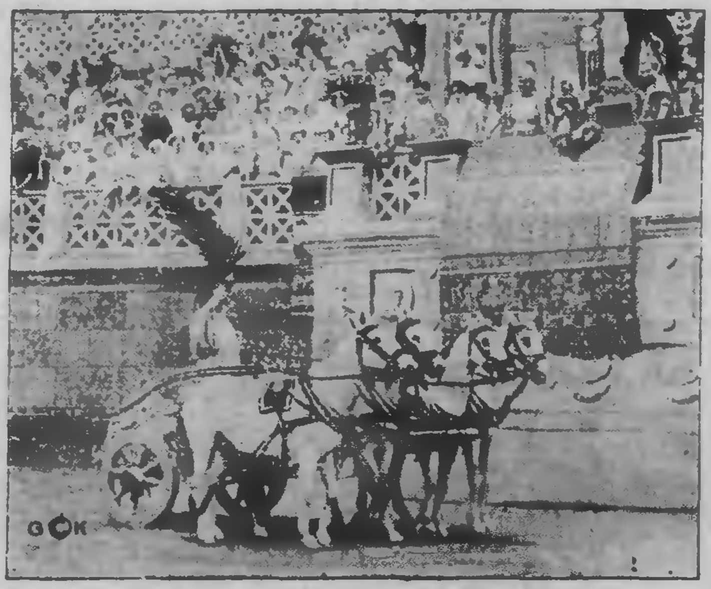
One of England's Big Successes.

"Nobody's Daughter," who makes her bow next week, has aroused considerable interest in theatredom. Little does the subtle title convey as Ellen Terry has said many times, "What's in a name," thus agreeing with the immortal Shakespeare, "the play's the thing." And in this delightful comedy of the English life George Paston shows us how delightfully pathos lends to comedy and how laughter is the redeeming qualities in a drama that raises our emotions to a tension that nothing but a laugh would save us from hysterical screams, perhaps only at the spring revivals in New York do we see the names of so many distinguished actors. Mr. A. E. Anson, who is so well known by his many London successes, has brought with him a cast of exceptional distinction. Every person who remembers the late Sir Henry Irving will recognise in the cast Frank Kemple Cooper, who supported that knighted star for the last eight years of his life. Miss Dierdre Doyle, who has been identified with many London successes, and who created the title role at the command performance of the "Butterfly on the Wheel" at Windsor Castle, comes with Mr. Anson as his chief support. In a large cast in which the following well known players interpret the play, are Miss Moya Mannering, Cyril Biddolph, Essex Dane and Lionel Pape, Harold Debecker. Mr. Anson has brought with him an exact reproduction of the massive production as used at Wyndham Theatre London, England.

The Philadelphia maidens this Lent have deserted Dorcas societies for the tango.

WANTED.

WANTED---Two young men, room or board, modern conveniences, seven minutes' walk from C. G. E. Apply Review Office.



Scene from Kleine's big 8-reel photoplay, "Quo Vadis," which takes 2¼ hours to run, and which will be presented at "The Grand" for the first time to-morrow (Friday) March 13, Matinee and Evening. The prices will be 10c., 15c. and 25c.

NORWOOD NEWS NOTES

Special Correspondence.

NORWOOD, March 12.—The village Council met on Wednesday evening, March 4th, in the Council chamber.

Members present—Reeve B. W. Squire; Councillors, S. Hendren, T. Morrison, W. Portway, and W. E. Pakenham. A deputation of citizent waited on the Council asking a grant for Mrs. Peters. It was pointed out that if the Council made a grant the trust funds from the estate of the late Mrs. Foley could be drawn on to the extent of two dollars to each one that the Council might grant. On motion of Councillors Hendren and Morrison $25 was granted for the first three months. The Reeve was appointed to look after the Foley Estate grant.

Another deputation asked the Council to reconsider the renting of the agricultural grounds for pasture They were referred to the Agricultural Society.

The following accounts were passed: Municipal World, supplies, $2.50; Wm .McMaster, shovelling snow, $1.05; Isaac Puffer, salary, Feb., $20.00; work, 65, $20.65. Committee re Armouries opening, $39.00; J. S. Squire, Clerk of Division Court; fees as per 1913, statutes, $10.00; S. Wildman, snow plowing, $5.95.

The competitions in the local curling rink are drawing to a close. Three of the four rounds for the Union Bank Cup have been played off. Mr. T. E. Finlay's rink winning two rounds and Mr. H. W. Nicholl's rink winning one round.

The fourth round started Tuesday night. Mr. A. B. Greenack won the individual competition defeating Mr. Dean in the final match by only two shots. In this game 14 ends were played and at the second last end it was a tie but Mr. Greenbank secured two shots in the last end thus winning the prize.

The winter which is drawing to a close has been one of unusual advantage to the farmers of this locality. Ever since the first of January scarcely a day has been lost and as a consequence more logs and poles have been hauled into the village than for many years. Mr. Harrison's lumber yards are filled to over flowing and the street for several rods above and below the yards is filled almost to the centre of the road.

The C.P.R. has put a new steel bridge over the crossing at the grist mill. The steel in the former bridge being too light for the heavy rolling stock of the road. The work of changing was commenced one afternoon about 1.30 and when the 4 o'clock Express arrived from the east the road was clear and the express passed over the new structure.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church will hold the last basket social of this winter on Friday evening of this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Buck on the Hastings Road. The social last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Comstock, Daisyworth, was a big success, over a hundred people being present.

Mr. and Mrs. George Spence, of Lakefield, spent the week-end in town, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Greenbank.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Pakenham sympathize with them in the death of their little daughter, Frances.

Mrs. W. J. Andrews of Havelock, was in town last week.

Miss Belle Houson spent Saturday in Peterboro.

Mr. Herb. Stevenson spent Sunday in town.

On Friday evening, the 8th, the teachers, officers and scholars of Miss Annie Birt's class spent a very enjoyable evening at the home of Mr. George Duffield.

During the evening Miss Birt who is leaving for the west was made the recipient of a beautiful Bible as a token of faithful duty to the Sunday School and Church, as also a remembrance of her Norwood friends.

Miss Alethea Duffield read the address while Miss Annie Cook presented the Bible. Miss Birt showed her appreciation of the gift and spoke of the remembrance that would linger with her in her far Western home.

A little later Rev. Mr. Copeland and Rev. Mr. Snider, also Mr. Richardson, Supt. of the Sunday School, gave addresses suitable for the occasion.

The evening was spent in games and a lunch havingb een served all joined hands, and forming a circle, joined in singing Auld Lang Syner, after which all had hearty hand shakes with Mr. and Miss Birt and wished them success and health in their new home.

Mr. J. Stan. Weir, of the Bank of Toronto staff at London, is the guest of his parents here.

Miss B. McKay of Creemore has resumed her position in charge of E. P. Cuffe's millinery parlors.

Miss Myrtle Hess, of Hastings, was the guest of Miss Winnie Rorabeck on Sunday.

Misses M. Laing and L. Buck spent Saturday in Hastings.

Mr. Russel Finlay, formerly of town, is visiting relatives in town.

Miss Josaphine McNichol has returned from visiting friends in Campbellford.

We understand that Mr. Bert Nieble, photographer, intends moving to Havelock in the near future.

Miss Jean Nicol is the guest of Miss Mabel Rehill in Peterboro.

PREMIER TO TAKE LONG REST

Sir James Gives His First Interview Since Illness.

TORONTO, March 12.—Sir James Whitney received representatives of the city newspapers at his home yesterday afternoon, when he made the following statement:

"I find myself very much improved in health during the last few weeks. Now that I am at home, and with the coming of mild spring weather I anticipate a further improvement in my condition.

"As far as any plans are concerned, I do not propose to attend the sittings of the Legislature during the present session, and am taking no part in the proceedings of the House. I propose to take a rather long vacation, during which I shall not take any part in the consideration of public matters, which I am leaving entirely to my colleagues in the Government."

Attempted Suicide.

BOASTED TOO SOON.

Three Deaths Follow Statement That Aeroplanes Are Safer Now.

LONDON, March 12.—In recording the three fatalities to British army aviators within two days, the London newspapers say they make a tragic sequel to the congratulations expressed to the country last week by the Secretary for War, to the fact that no deaths of army aviators had occurred within a year. The Secretary for War attributed this record to the superior safety of British aeroplanes, and declared that flying was now as safe as, or safer than, voyages in submarines.

The recent flying exploits of Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, are the subject of much criticism on the ground that a Cabinet Minister has no right to risk his life in foolhardy exploits.

Captain Clement Allen and Lieut. J. E. Burroughs, of the Army Aviation Corps, were killed yesterday flying over Salisbury Plain. Allen, who was steering, lost control of the machine, which turned over and fell to the earth in sight of a crowd.

Captain Cyril Downer, an army aviator, was killed at Salisbury Plain Tuesday.

LINDSAY IS STIRRED BY REPORTED ELOPEMENT

Well Known Man is Said to Have Departed From the Family Hearth

CAME TO THIS CITY

Rumors of an elopement are rife in Lindsay, and it is said the runaway couple were seen in this city.

It is reported that a well-known resident of Scugogville has forsaken his wife to depart with another married woman, whose home was in an adjoining village.

It has been known for some time past that the man in question had been paying his attentions to the woman, and no surprise was manifested on the part of those familiar with the man's movements, when the report was circulated that the couple had decamped.

ANNUAL BANQUET OF THE TELEPHONY CLUB

The Bell Telephone Officials' Local Staff and Many Guests Meet Together

The annual banquet of the Bell Telephone Club, which was held last night, in the Oriental, was easily one of the most prominent and most heartily enjoyed banquets held in the city for some time. Everything connected with the affair was of the highest order, the repast was gotten up in a way that reflects credit to the Oriental and its staff. The addresses were not only interesting, but were decidedly instructive.

After some fifty-one gentlemen had enjoyed the "spread," the chairman, Mr. A. A. Smith, District Plant Chief of Peterboro, called upon the gathering to sing the National Anthem, in response to the toast of The King. He next introduced the principal speaker of the evening, Mr. O. E. Stanton, District Plant Superintendent of Toronto. Mr. Stanton thanked the members of the local Telephone Club for their kind invitation and also commended them for the masterly way in which they handled their annual function. He then went to the subject of his address.

Co-operation.

Every employee of the Bell Telephone Company is constantly confronted with the word co-operation whether he be a lineman, a plant man, a clerk of a superintendent. It is pressed upon them because it is an essential and not only is it essential to the Bell Telephone Co., but it is essential in every business which its employees some day hope to make a grand success. According to the dictionary, co-operation is the acting jointly with another or others, therefore it is needed in a brotherhood and as the Bell Telephone Co. is a great and influential brotherhood, it is needed and must be had.

The Bell or any other telephone company is a public service and being such it must co-operate with the public, hence there are two kinds of co-operation, the one among the employees individually, and the other between the company and the public. The individual employee of the company should not do his day's work simply for the day's wages, but rather he should have the interest of his company at heart. The desire to "get there" should not possess the workman, on the other hand he should be imbued with the spirit of doing the work properly and promptly.

Criticism.

Any person can criticize. When one is paying for service comes to the office and makes a complaint, the recipient of this complaint should not place the blame on one man or department in a sarcastic manner, for it leaves the stranger with the opinion that the employees are not working together. Then again, the head of an office or department should not be too harsh on the junior, neither should he be a crank, who could never be pleased. He should treat his subordinates with fairness and endeavor to bring from them the best results. If a junior is found to be incompetent for one position, send him to another where in all probability he'll make good, that is if he is willing to learn and ready to work. If he is not, then don't burden the head of another department, but rather ask quietly for his resignation.

Local Conditions Satisfactory.

In speaking of co-operation between the company and the public Mr. Stanton expressed himself as being highly delighted with the present condition of things in this city. He stated that the Bell Telephone never asked what appeared to be an unreasonable request. Their rates corresponded with their class of service, and naturally in this centre, having a very elaborate apparatus, the subscribers will pay more than they will in municipalities where the station and lines are less proficient. In speaking of cases where the company are asked to remove poles the speaker stated himself as more than satisfied with the manner in which they have been treated by the local council, and he thought the happy state of affairs can be attributed to the fact that the company and the council or the Board of Works, as the case may be, always tried to co-operate. Sometimes they are asking permission to erect poles in alley and street, but by that they don't wish to take possession of the streets or alleys, but wish to render the general public a better service.

Removal of Poles.

In conclusion, Mr. Stanton breezed upon the subject socn to be brought up between the company and the council, the removal of certain poles, but he just dwelt upon it long enough to stato that if this proposition was dealt with as well as hte propositions have been in the past, everything would work out to everyone's satisfaction. In the past harmony and co-operation had been first and the speaker closed hoping it would remain as long as there was a telephone, that meant forever.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker for his address, after which short speeches were made by His Worship Mayor Buller, Mr. W. H. Winters, general plant superintendent of Montreal, Mr. A. T. Smith, division superintendent of Toronto; Alderman Johnston, Mr. R. H. Parson, city engineer, Mr. T. J. Tilly, of Lindsay; Aldermen Green, Gordon and Duncan, and Mr. G. O. Cameron, the local manager. The last gentleman's address was very interesting, as he enlightened those present to the extent that the number of local subscribers reached over 2,000, and they hoped 'ere long to make it three thousand. He was pleased to see the Mayor and Aldermen present, despite their great amount of business, for as he remarked, there are two public servants doing 24 hours' work per day. They are the City Council and the Bell Telephone Company.

His Worship Mayor Buller then on behalf of the guests tendered the Telephone Club a vote of thanks for their very delightful banquet, and the singing of "God Save the King" brought the happy function to a close.

FIRE DESTROYS AN HISTORIC CHURCH

Rev. E. A. Langfeldt was in Charge of Parish for Some Time

The historic church at Painswick, in the parish of Innisfil, where Rev. E. A. Langfeldt was rector for some time, was recently destroyed by fire. This church was opened in 1875, and among those present were Sir John A. and Lady Macdonald.

SALVATION

Evangelist Pugsley Gives Stirring Address on This Subject

Evangelist Pugsley is meeting with remarkable success in his special services at Park Street Baptist Church. The meeting each night is largely attended, and interest increases with every service. Last night Mr. Pugsley gave a soul-stirring address on the subject of Salvation. After giving a number of definitions of salvation, found in the Scriptures, he took as his text the declaration of St. Paul as found in Romans, 1, 16: "For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto Salvation to everyone that believeth ; to the Jew first and also to the Greek."

The speaker divided the text into three tenses, past, present and future; deliverance from the past ; grace for the present and assurance for the future. He assured his hearers that if salvation had not done this for them, they had failed in their efforts to reach the mark.

A consecration service followed the regular meeting, and judging from the results, it is felt that the eve of a great revival is at hand.

Mrs. Connors sang a solo, "Where is my wandering boy to-night."

FREIGHT CONDUCTOR IS SHOT BY BANDITS

Gang Were Discovered Stealing From Cars—Two Robbers Are Captured

Canadian Press Despatch

Peroia. Ill., March 13.—Arthur Fisher, a Chicago and North-western freight engineer was shot dead this morning by bandits, who were surprised while stealing freight from a train at Manitou.

A deputy sheriff was also shot through the head, probably fatally, and two train men were wounded. Two robbers were captured.

A FINE OF $100

Herbert Clayton, of the Royal Theatre, was fined $100, in Police Court this morning, for allowing children under the age of fifteen years to enter the theatre without an escort. Considerable evidence was heard and the Magistrate registered a conviction. D. O'Connell appeared for the defendant. Mr. O'Connell remarked that the penalty was rather stiff.

ASKS FOR SEAT ON WATER WAGON

Victim of Drink Habit Takes the Initiative

Papers were put up in the hotels forbidding them to sell Mr. Prosper Vallant intoxicating liquors.

Mr. Vallant himself had these papers put up, so that all men might know that he was on the water wagon, and that he did not want to be asked to drink or get anybody into trouble through mistaken kindness by securing liquor for him.

It was the brave act of a man who fears nothing so much as himself in the upward climb to complete manhood, and every man who is a man will hold up his hand in his very laudable endeavor.

REVIVED IN TIME TO STOP UNDERTAKER

Wife of Retired Physician was Thought to be Dead.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Oil Springs, Ont., March 13.—Mrs. Joseph Campbell, wife of a retired physician, after being apparently dead for five hours, revived just as preparations were being made for the funeral and is still alive, although so weak that she cannot recover.

To everybody in the house she seemed dead and the undertaker was just entering the house when a servant ran out telling him he was not needed.

DIED AFTER ILLNESS OF THREE DAYS

The Late Geo. H Fenwick Was Brother of Local Lady

Detroit, March 13.—After an illness of but three days, George G. Fenwick, a well-known business man, died at his residence on Summit Avenue Wednesday night. He was born in Markham, Ontario, in 1844. Mrs. James Leith Ross, Mrs. Helen Lambert and Miss Jennie Fenwick, all of Toronto, and Mrs. Mary Stovell, of Peterboro, are sisters.

MAY DRIFT ACROSS POLE.

Karluk Likely to Forestall Amundsen Thinks Stefansson.

SEATTLE, Wash., March 13.—A news despatch from Dawson City, Yukon Territory, say E. S. Ironsides, collector of customs at Dawson, has received a letter written at McPherson by a friend who interviewed Vilhjalmar Stefansson, commander of the Canadian Arctic exploration expedition, who was there last month. The letter says Stefansson has gone back to Herschel Island, off the mouth of the Mackenzie river, and intends to start out immediately over the Arctic. Continuing, the letter says:

"Stefansson thinks that the exploring ship Karluk, which was blown from the vicinity of Point Barrow, Alaska, into the Arctic ice field in a blizzard last September, leaving Stefansson and three other scientists ashore, may forestall Captain Roald Amundsen in his coming attempt to drift across the pole."

SCOTT ACT MAY BE TRIED IN COUNTY OF DURHAM

Action is Assured Northumberland Will Also Enlist

Port Hope, March 13.—The temperance workers of Durham county have yesterday decided to enter upon a campaign for the Canada temperance act in the united counties of Northumberland and Durham, provided similar action is taken by the temperance people of Northumberland, with which Durham is united for municipal government. This decision was reached after long and earnest discussion of the subject by the one hundred and fifty delegates in attendance at the annual meeting of the Durham county Temperance Alliance. Nine out of the ten municapilities in the county were represented.

The following resolution was also adopted: "That this convention is in accord with the policy of the Dominion Alliance regarding political action, and charges the executive-elect with the responsibility of making that policy practical in this constituency."

INTERESTING LECTURE ON PROGRESS IN ART

Appreciation of Art by Canadians Has Not Been as Great as it Should—The Importance of Possibilities for Canadian Art Have Not Been Realized

Mr. J. W. Beatty, R.C.A., lectured on the Progress of Art in Canada, to the Peterborough Art Association yesterday evening.

He had a two-fold reason, he said, for coming to this city. He thought it his duty to offer a little amusement in this vale of tears, and also to spread the Gospel of Art throughout the land. Each time I have gone to England, I have come back thinking that this country is the greatest of them all. We have a healthy, robust people, a beautiful country, and what more is needed, were his words. Up to the present time the appreciation of Art by people has not been as great as it should, they have not realized the importance of the possibilities for Canadian Art.

He divided the progress of Art in Canada into four periods. The first began about the middle of the last century about the year 1850. Paul Kane, an Irishman, came to Canada in that year and was the first man of note. Contemporary with him were Creighoff, Jacobi and Fowler. "I often look back," he said, "and imagine what their life must have been." Jacobi had been court painter to the Austrian Crown, yet it must have been an inspiration to him when he journeyed up the St. Lawrence in the early days.

The great fact is that these men had courage to come to this country, to follow on the heels of the pioneers, when there was little appreciation and a small demand for the out put of their genius. The speaker described various exhibitions that were held in the early days. One was held in 1857 in Montreal, at which a gentleman of that city offered a prize of $50. The jury awarded the prize to Fowler, but Fowler maintained that Jacobi's picture was the better. The upshot was that nether artist would accept the prize, so they divided it between them. The story speaks well for the generosity existing between these pioneer artists.

First Association.

In 1872 the first Ontario Art Association was formed, it was made up of Civil Engineers, bakers, tailors, and men of a dozen other trades and professions. They gave little lectures to small audiences, the essential feature being that there was no admission. In order to pay expenses, they hit upon the Art Union plan in 1875, by which each subscriber was to pay $5.00 and was guaranteed a picture. Within the last three years Mr. Beatty purchased five of these pictures for the cheapest of which he paid $65.00, and the frame was worn out.

Mr. Beatty told the story of one artist who had had a chance to sell one of two pictures which he had sent to the exhibition for $10.00. Since the picture was to be sold for $5.00, a bargain was struck at $7.50, but unfortunately an old lady, a subscriber, happened to select the picture that figured in the bargain. To overcome this the numbers of the pictures were interchanged and the other picture, a very large one, was sent to the old lady's house, and was so large that the express man could not get it through the door. The artist got his money for the other picture, what became of the larger picture was not known.

Homer Watson, the speaker related, had denied himself of almost everything, in order to paint his first important picture. He exhibited it at the Montreal Art Association. He was in very needy circumstances, not knowing which way to turn, when the old postmaster, seeing him one day, told him that his reputation was made. The Marquis of Lorne had bought the picture for $300.00, and it now hangs in Windsor Castle.

About this time the second group of painters arose, among whom were Paul Peel, Horatio Walker, John Fraser and Lucius O'Brien. At the same time the evil influence of dealers came into existence. The dealers sought to send the Canadian painters to Europe, where they would not make money enough to come back to Canada, and would be obliged to sell their pictures very cheaply. This was the story of Paul Peel, who died in Paris in abject poverty at the age of 35.

Many painters left this country, among them Horatio Walker. This painter offered his pictures for $25 apiece in Toronto, the same pictures are worth $2,500 now. The Americans never lost sight of the men born in the United States. They are proud of them and this pride was lacking in Canada. Mr. Beatty told how Canadians had been flim-flammed by art dealers for a number of years. Canadians wanted Dutch pictures, French pictures, Spanish pictures, but not Canadian pictures. He knew of a set of pictures for one of which $14,000 was paid and $1,000 would not be paid now for the whole group. He knew of a picture bought for $20 in Holland that was sold for $1,200 in Canada, but Canadians were not the only ones who paid for daubs and spurious pictures. The great French painter, Corot, painted about 1,500 pictures. Within seven years of his death 3,100 Corot pictures passed through the United States customs. The scheme was worked this way. A man would want to buy a Corot, the dealer would write to his factory in France for a copy. Shortly before it was shipped the producer in France would inform the customs officials at New York that a Corot picture was being shipped. When the dealer went to get the picture, he was held up for duty on a picture supposed to be worth $8,000. After a squabble, he would pay the duty and demand a receipt; then he would show this receipt to the prospective buyer, saying he had a genuine Corot, for here was the seal of the United States Government as to its value. He probably paid $300 for the copy.

Want the Home Life.

It was four and a half years since he returned from his last two-year stay in Europe. He came back with a great many pictures, landed in Toronto with $10.00 and within one year he had $2,000 from the sale of his pictures. He had many Dutch subjects still on hand, but Canadians were changing for the better, since the demand was now for pictures dealing with Canadian life.

Mr. Beatty complained of the attitude of the newspapers to Art. Their efforts, while no doubt well meant, were entirely misdirected. "There is no one man living," he said "who could go into an exhibition and say, this is good and that is bad. I cannot do it with all my technical knowledge." The man who reports the police court in the morning then a political meeting, and next an Art Exhibition, cannot tell the people what is good or what is not, but the trouble is the people believe him. No great movement has arisen which was not condemned by critics. Turner, when he came on the scene first, was praised only by Ruskin and he did not know any better. Monet, the great master of the French Impressionist School, had his first pictures rejected by the judges at the French Exhibition. Critics are creating a great task for people of the next twenty years. The hot mush stuff, as he termed it, of Mr. H. F. Gadsby came in for some hard knocks.

The prospects for the future of Canadian Art were very bright. In five years' time a group of young men will arise in Canada that will win a notable place in the world's Art. The eyes of the whole world will turn this way, within the next twenty or twenty-five years. A very short time ago, it was customary to make a plea for Canadian Art. He was not making any such plea now. Painters in Toronto have sold everything they have painted; they no longer need the dribs and drabs of charity. The final judgment concerning their work, cannot emenate from any one individual.

Mrs. Vincent Eastwood presided. A hearty vote of thanks was moved and seconded by Mr. Roy, and Mr. Taylor and tendered the speaker.

GETTING ON HIS NERVES

Seven Fires in Six Months Baffle Owner and Police.

LONDON, March 13.—No less than seven times in the past six months fire has broken out in the home of C. J. Adams, 169 Albert street, and the fire department and insurance companies are investigating what has become a tantalizing puzzle. Mr. and Mrs. Adams are almost prostrated, the latter having moved to the home of a neighbor in a hysterical condition. Mr. Adams patrols the house nightly, but in spite of his watchfulness fire somehow started in an attic room Wednesday night and was extinguished by the fire chief with a chemical. For the remainder of the night Mr. Adams continued his vigilance, but soon after he had left for his place of business yesterday morning he was notified that still another fire had been discovered in a clothes closet. Very little damage was done.

MISS EVA BOOTH IN TORONTO.

MASSEY HALL, Toronto was nearly filled Tuesday evening when Miss Eva Booth, Commander of the Salvation Army in the United States, delivered a stirring address. There are people living to-day who can remember when the Salvation Army was regarded as a sect of faddists. They were regarded with contempt and it was believed that only a short time would elapse when they would be forgotten, like many abortive movements. But the Salvation Army was organized on a permanent basis. It had real spirit behind it, a spirit which has carried it forward and made it a great force for good, among the peoples of the world. The Salvation Army has extended its sphere of operations from England to the United States, to India, to Switzerland, to Germany, to far away Japan, to South America and to Canada. Its forward movement has been strenuously opposed, and yet, in spite of all opposition, it stands to-day as one of the greatest forces for the uplift of humanity, and particularly for the betterment of the struggling masses.

"The General," said Miss Booth, "wanted freedom to preach the gospel as he thought it should be preached, and when the request for liberty was refused, still pleaded before the conference for permission to go and talk to the poor, according to his convictions, inquiring 'Must I, must I disobey the call of God.'" That is the secret of the success of the Salvation Army.

Great churches or religions develop along the same lines as great literatures, great systems of law and government. Their advancement is only a part of the general progress, under which the whole state or society moves. For this reason, the history of great nations showing the rise of great churches as well as the decay of their systems, illustrates this weakness, that, while ministering to the educated, the rich, the refined, what are generally termed the upper classes, they forgot to minister to the poor, the outcast, the ignorant. In other words churches sometimes fail to satisfy the whole want for which they stand. Because the Salvation Army ministers to the under man, it fills the want that the larger, wealthier organizations do not fill, principally because they are perhaps not so well adapted. Progress tends to divide society into classes, churches tend to follow the lines on which society advances, and if one section is neglected by religious bodies, it will bring into existence a new organization to minister to its needs.

The speaker told of the present status of the work; of the 45,000 London Salvationists who paraded at the Crystal Palace, of the 235 naval and military stations of the 117 industrial homes in the United States, handling 17,000 men last year, and 57,400 tons of paper; of the 17,000 homeless men sheltered every night throughout the United States by the Army; of its 107 poor men's hotels; of the 42,000 homeless babies cared for last year; and of the seven thousand 'fallen' women dealt with—and 80 per cent. restored to respectability.

Behind the whole work of the Salvation Army is the personality of the Booths. Miss Booth's subject at Massey Hall was "My Father." The story of the founding of the Salvation Army, visualized by lantern slides, and made impressive by the appeal to sentiment, awakened a magnificent response in the vast audience, and showed that the Salvation Army has a definite place in the religious work of society—that the name of old General Booth, is one to conjure with.

THE GLOBE SCORES LIBERALS.

THE TORONTO GLOBE says in its leading editorial on Wednesday, that we must clean house. It refers to the Hon. W. J. Hanna, the Hon. Robert Rogers, the Trent Canal and the building of thirteen miles of railway in New Brunswick, where it claims $50,000 was dishonestly obtained. The Globe forgot to mention the Transcontinental scandal, the Evanturel episode, the Quebec Legislature scandal. It did not say that Hon. W. J. Hanna frankly explained to the satisfaction of the House, the charges against him and which, containing no scandal, amounted to nothing. It refused to say that the Hon. Robert Rogers' explanation in the House of that Prince Albert property was clear and complete and any fair-minded man reading the speeches as they were printed in Hansard, could not do otherwise than admit that the Minister's action had not even a trace of censurable conduct. But the Globe condemned the Trent Valley Canal affair as a stain on the Liberal administration and wished to drag the Conservative Government into the same boat.

Aside from this apparent inconsistency, the Globe's article is to the point that all good citizens in Canada must unite for the establishment of a higher standard of political life.

MR. BEATTY ON PROGRESS OF ART.

THE LECTURE delivered by Mr. J. W. Beatty last night, a report of which appears in another column, is deserving of more than passing notice. He possesses a pleasing personality, accentuated by a red tie, and has a forceful vigorous way of presenting his thought. He is quite conversant with the toilsome, slow progress of art in Canada. While there have been Canadian painters of note there has not been up to the present time a Canadian Art. It requires a spirit of Art, an art culture, an appreciation of art before there is a Canadian Art. But what would be a Canadian Art? Obviously it would be a style or kind of Art that would present a purely Canadian way of looking at things—a Canadian attitude towards life. Mr. Beatty cited his evidence for believing that the present time possessed the necessary factors for producing a Canadian Art. By all means let us commend him in sounding the call to represent on canvas the artistic side of the Canadian people, and of the land in which they dwell.

Mr. Beatty took occasion to complain of the attitude of newspapers to art exhibitions. In questioning the capacity of newspaper men to say such a picture was good or bad, he gave a jab at "the hot mush stuff," of Mr. H. F. Gadsby. We know that versatile writer could tear an art exhibition to pieces in a most effective and entertaining manner, and probably this writer has given "considerable" to some of Mr. Beatty's exhibitions. Be that as it may, a newspaper man must judge things as he sees them, just as Mr. Beatty does. If he calls a shovel a spade perhaps his art education has been neglected, he should be precieuse and call it an instrument of labor. Mr. Beatty may be right in his complaint although he acknowledged himself an extremist, but everybody of intelligence looks mostly through their own spectacles. The enjoyment an individual gets from a work of art depends largely on individual judgment. We remember when impressionist pictures began to attract attention in this country a few years ago, and the gibes cast at pictures of this style. Now we have other schools arising such as futurist and cubist art. They may all express life or thought in their own way, perhaps a capable and profound way, but a long education for which the critic and newspaperman is largely responsible, is necessary to awaken the inquiring faculties of the general public.

Mr. Beatty could never have been a newspaper man, for there are artists of several kinds connected with them. They shine by their own light, it may be bright or dull, but it is their own. They may not possess art or the faculty of artistic judgment, but they possess taste and must say quickly what their impression is. If people believe what newspapermen say, it is only because the newspaper expresses the general, perhaps dormant, attitude.

THE LATE UNPLEASANTNESS.

THERE IS NO use in recriminations or hysterics over the T.V.C. revelations. Peterborough has been plagued for many years with a disease known as "Papsucker's Ich." There is no politics in it. The germ may light on anybody, Grit or in it. The germ may light on anybody, Grit or Tory. It makes no distinction of religious professions. But it does require a rotten sub-soil. It does not thrive in clean ground. Like the fly and other dirty animals and insects, it must have something equally filthy to begin in. It makes no distinction of high or low. The designing lawyer or preacher is just as likely to fall a victim as anybody else. The only redeeming feature is that the disease soon appears in the face and actions of the victim. He begins to work up a clique of corn-crackers, who back each other up when necessary. They usually love whiskey, eating, gambling, money and the church. The church is always made part of the game.

Human nature is weak at the best, but the "papsucker's itch" is a preventible disease and it ought to be prevented by all manly men and women without delay and without compromise, regardless of politics or religion.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE OPINION is freely expressed, that no more level-headed and resourceful Mayor ever occupied that chair than Mayor Buller. Public service is more gratefully acknowledged than some pessimists are inclined to think.

IN REFERENCE to the letter of Mr. Kingan which appeared in yesterday's Review, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., assures us that if any injustice has been done Mr. Kingan, and if he will go to Ottawa, Mr. Burnham will bring the matter to the attention of the House at once. But he cannot understand how the report could be partisan, when two Conservatives in high positions were suspended. We have no doubt, Mr. Burnham will do everything in his power to get Mr. Kingan a full and ample hearing.

WE QUITE agree with the Hon. W. T. White in refusing iron bounties. No one gives the struggling newspapers bounties—they either go or they don't go, and why not the iron industry too?

THE FINDING of a Montreal court in regard to a damage suit against the city is to the effect that old persons must have escorts otherwise they are blameworthy. Why not demand a corporal's guard?

Montreal Gazette.

Two boys, aged 15 and 17, who pleaded guilty to killing another in a gunfight started in fun, and in which two parties shot at each other from behind trees, have been liberated on suspended sentence by Chancellor Boyd at Brampton, Ont. They were solemnly warned, however, and bound over in $2,000 each to keep the peace for eight years. Their youth was the reason they were dealt with so leniently. The moral of the tragedy is that boys should not be allowed to use dangerous weapons indiscriminately.

FRIDAY

By Walt Mason

Of all fried days this is the best, for men who earnestly have toiled; it could'nt have a keener zest if it were poached or stewed or boiled. For now the week draws to its close, and we, who worked to gain the prize, look forward to the sweet repose the Sabbath brings to weary guys. Full soon the wages we have earned will come to us, the plunks, the rocks; and will those wages then be burned, or thrown at owls and chicken-hawks? Shall we go forth and blow the coins, to gather which we sprained our thews, and dislocated back and loins, and tore the half-soles from our shoes? Ah, no! The passing years have brought some wisdom, and we're frugal now; each man will toddle to his cot, and hand the bullion to the frau. On Friday, with reward in sight, the cheerful toiler turns his crank, and thinks of how, with sane delight, he'll place three dollars ($3) in the ban. The week grows old, 'twill soon be sped, and we have rocks who for them chased;. but those who paint the village red have nothing but a dark green taste.

BACK TO THE DARK AGES

Senator Choquette's Bill Denounced by Senator Dennis.

OTTAWA, March 13.—A lively attack was made yesterday in the Senate upon Senator Choquette's bill forbidding the publication of the pictures of persons accused of crime or their accomplices, with the penalty of two years in prison for such publication.

Senator Dennis (Halifax) said he understood this bill proposed to make a crime in Canada of what has heretofore been a perfectly legitimate, harmless matter of daily business, and to render subject to two years in prison the twelve hundred newspapers, dealers and booksellers for the manner in which they have conducted their business in the past.

If such a law were enacted, Senator Dennis said a publisher might be incarcerated in jail for the publication of a portrait of Joan d'Arc, of Louis Reil, William Lyon Mackenzie, Robert Emmet, and others of their kind.

"I oppose this bill," he said, "because it seeks to make a crime in Canada of what never was a crime, and is never likely to be a crime here or in any other part of the globe. I further oppose it because it establishes a censorship of the press, which means to submit the judgment, the enterprise, the good faith and the honor of, to say the least, one of the most intelligent and influential professons in this country — the daily molders of public sentiment—to the dictation of some petty official, perhaps as fossilized and malicious as he may be narrow-minded and out of touch with modern life.

"Such a law would wrench Canada from the category of civilized nations and throw her back beyond the days of the bigoted and fanatical Puritans to the atmosphere of the still more bigoted and fanatical dark ages of the Inquisition."

Senator Choquette said he desired to look over the speech of Senator Dennis before replying, and to enable him to do Senator Cloran adjourned the debate.

Birthdays of Note

FRIDAY, MARCH THIRTEENTH

Sir Hugh John Macdonald, police magistrate of Winnipeg, who was born sixty-four years ago to-day in Kingston, is, as is generally known, the oldest son of the late Sir John A. Macdonald. Like his father, he is man of very genial personality and a great favorite among a wide circle of friends. On the occasion of Sir Thomas Taylor's retirement from the Bench as Chief Justice of Manitoba, he was present at the Court House along with a number of members of the bar to pay their respects to the retiring judge. It was a wet day and on leaving the building, Sir Hugh discovered that some one had walked off with his umbrella. When he reached his office, he made out a list of those who had been present and sent each a typewritten note to the effect that his umbrella had been taken, by accident he would presume, if the umbrella was returned, otherwise with malice aforethought. In less than an hour, umbrellas began to arrive and before evening he had a collection of eleven. Sir Hugh now boasts that he has not bought one since.

PRIMARY FINAL WON BY W. H. TAYLOR'S RINK BY ONE SHOT

The primary in the local curling club has been completed and the rink skipped by Mr. W. H. Taylor, are the champions. They entered into the finals last night with W. McCracken's quartette and won by 15—14. It was a grand battle all the way and only in the last shot of the last end was the game won.. After a beautiful draw Taylor's stone rested half an inch closer to the button than McCracken's best. It was a spectacular finale to a keenly fought contest.

Those who composed the rinks were:

L. A. Potvin	A. P. McLean
M. C. Tooley	W. H. Collier
A. W. Archibald	Jas. Skinner
W. McCracken, skip.	W. H. Taylor skip.

The score y ends:—

Taylor—1x1x1x1x4x51x1—15.

McCracken—x1x3x1x4x1xx4 ;—14.

THE LAST GAME AND IT'S WITH LINDSAY SEVEN

The final hockey game of the season will be played to-night at Brock street rink, when a picked team of the Junior City League will meet the L.C.I. septet. The game played in Lindsay on Wednesday was won by the Scugog seven by 6—4, so there is little to choose between the teams.

Lindsay have a big husky defence and a fleet forward line, but the Colts are confident they can reverse the score.

Mr. L. Dobson will referee.

The game will be called at 8.30.

BASEBALL

President McCaffery of the Toronto Canadian League club, said last night that the deal for the Ball Park for the Canadian League team would probably be closed in a day or two. It is centrally located, and will be fitted up in first-class style.

With the exception of Pitcher Auld, a Toronto boy, all the players required by President McCaffery in the purchase of the Berlin franchise have been turned loose.

Frank Shaughnessy, the Ottawa manager, was unable to attend the meeting. Shag had an addition to the family on Tuesday, when the fourth boy arrived. A telegram of congratulation was sent the wily Ottawa leader, in which he was reminded that every addition to the population would help in the fight for 'Class B classification.

T. J. Connors, of Erie, was in attendance at the meeting. The Erie chap has had much experience in baseball matters, and was of considerable assistance in the task of fixing up the schedule. — Habilton Herald.

The speaker was a magazine editor.

"Humphrey Ward, they tell me," the editor went on, "once entered his wife's study while she was out, and glanced over the manuscript upon her writing desk.

"He read the sentence, 'She swept the room with a bright, fresh glance,' and, taking up a pencil, he wrote on the margin of the page, 'If she would only sweep the room with a bright, fresh broom!'

"Reading on, he came to, 'She touched a button and a footman appeared.' His marginal note to this was, 'Alas, she will never touch a button!'

"And now he came upon the sentence, 'She decided to mend her ways.' And again he wrote, 'Hopeless. She'll never mend anything'."

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

GRAND BENEFACTOR.

I WONDER who invented kissing,
  Found out the way
To work the proper combination
  That's called in play?
Who was the first to get in action
  And frame the plot?
If Adam didn't know about it
  He missed a lot.

Or was it, after all, invented?
  Or did the art
Come second nature to the ancients
  Without a chart?
A fellow ought to tumble to it
  Some moonlight night
Without directions neatly printed
  If he were bright.

At any rate, through all the ages
  It's led the race
In every land and every language
  A merry chase.
It's given mankind a lot of pleasure
  And here and there
It's made for him a lot of trouble
  He couldn't square.

And now the sober son of science
  Has placed a ban
On it—in other words, to kissing
  Has tied a can.
But will man heed the words or treat them
  Much as a joke,
Take this advice and cut out kissing?
  Just watch his smoke.

A Decaying Race.

Nothing has called so sharply attention to the fact that the Indians have fallen sadly and far from their high estate as much as the fact that a bad Indian in California who had to be hunted by a sheriff and posse was named Willie Boy.

The name sounds more like that of the hero of one of our popular songs. Willie Boy! The next thing we know we will hear of bad Indians named Rollo and Percy.

Think of a race that has turned out such warriors and scrappers as Rain-in-the-Face, Scar-on-the-Ear, Patch-on-the-Trousers and others known to Indian warfare and dime novel fiction having Willie Boy as its star desperado!

It is enough to cause a cigar sign to weep.

Mutual Experience.

"Parting is such sweet sorrow," said the sentimental young man.

"It is, indeed," agreed the bewhiskered wanderer with whom the sentimental young man had met by chance.

"One hardly knows whether joy or pain predominates."

"That depends," replied the more practical one. "If the old man helped you out with the toe of his boot, don't take it so hard. He might have set the bulldog on you."

As Usual.

"He used to be madly in love with her."

"Isn't he now?"

"No."

"Mercy, what did she do to disillusionize him?"

"Married him."

Great Cause.

"There is no pole at the north pole."

"That's too bad."

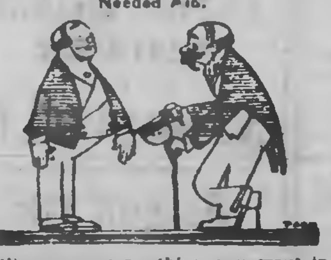
"I guess it is all right."

"Hadn't we better start a society to get the rich interested in buying one for the place?"

The Scorcher.

There was a young fellow named Haight,
Who went at so rapid a raight
  He blew out a fuse
  And punctured his shuse.
So Mr. Haight's gaight wrecked him straight.

Needed Aid.



"You can get anything you want in this place by simply touching a button."

"I was in here the other night, and I couldn't."

"Maybe the electricity wasn't working."

"Yes, it was."

"Didn't the waiter come when you touched it?"

"Sure, but the first thing he asked me was if I had any money."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Of course there's no use worrying, but think of the fun some people have working night and day at it!

Lots of people would be almost sensible if they had some sense.

Being able to have what you want doesn't always lessen longings.

Don't blame a man for being up in the air if he has a good aeroplane.

THE FOLLOWING IS THE FIRST OF A SERIES TWELVE TALKS TO OWNERS OF FORD CARS

Explaining in a Simple a Manner as Possible, the Reasons, Why a BOSCH MAGNETO Fitted to These Cars, Makes Such a Wonderful Difference in the Running of Same

"THE BOSCH MAGNETO EQUIPMENT ELIMINATES COMPLICATED WIRING"

With the Coil Equipment you have the following wires:

From the generator to the Coils	1
" " Coils to the Timer ..	4
" " Coils to the Plugs ..	4
" " Battery to the Coil ..	1
" " Battery to the Frame	1

in all eleven (11) cables, with a total length of 299 feet.

With the Bosch Magneto Equipment you have:

From the Magneto to the Plugs	4
" " Magneto to the Switch	1
" " Switch to the Frame	1

in all six (6) cables, with a total length of 149 in., eliminating therefore, half the wiring necessary with the Coil equipment.

The wiring of the Coil equipment is certainly as simple as it can be made, but the wiring of the magneto is much more simple than that.

Simplicity in the wiring system has four strong advantages—

(1) The wiring is generally the most leaky part of an ignition system, and, therefore, a simple wiring system will generally ensure a better working spark at the plugs.

(2) It is much less likely to cause trouble by deterioration and short circuit, because there is not so much of it to keep insulated from the engine and frame.

(3) If a fault does develop it is much easier to examine and test six wires which are all easily get-at-able than eleven wires, some of which are not.

(4) The equipment has a much neater appearance.

When considering the relative merits of the wiring systems, it should be borne in mind that all of the additional wires required for the Coil equipment are low tension wires, and it is much more difficult to locate a fault in the low tension wires than in the high tension. The high tension wires in both cases are the four which deliver the current to the spark plugs, and short circuit or leakage from one of these usually makes the seat of the trouble immediately visible and audible by the jumping of the spark there, but a low tension cable may become chafed against some metal part until the insulation is cut through, and then it will silently short-circuit and produce no audible or immediately visible evidence except that the motor stops or misfires intermittently in a manner which might easily be caused by several entirely different troubles, either in the ignition or carburation.

The only way to find such a trouble in the low tension cables or to be quite sure it does not exist is to examine each one carefully from end to end; therefore the fewer there are of them the better.

Another possible trouble with cables is the breaking of the wires inside the insulation. With a high tension cable this does not as a rule interrupt the regular operation of the ignition at all until the jumping of the spark across the break burns through the insulation. It can then be immediately seen and smelt, but if a low tension wire breaks inside the insulation, the current will not jump the break. Usually the motor just stops. Sometimes, when the vibration causes the broken ends to keep touching and separating, it causes the motor to fire and misfire in an uncertain manner, and if the motor stops it is usually found impossible to start it again unless the break is in a wire that affects only one cylinder. Such a fault may easily take hours to locate, especially if you do not at first realize what it is.

The occurrence of these faults in the two low tension wires of the Bosch equipment is, of course, equally possible, but they cannot create the same amount of trouble because the work they have to do is different. With the Coil system the low tension wires must carry the current to run the motor. With the Bosch equipment they must carry it properly to stop the motor. Therefore if any fault is suspected in the low tension wires of the Bosch equipment, it is only necessary to detach the connection from the one low tension terminal on the magneto and run the engine without them, stopping it when necessary by means of the throttle and brake, until the repair can be effected with the same ease and convenience that you always experience with a Bosch equipment.

PROVINCIAL TREASURER GIVES REPLY TO CRITICS

Moneys Voted for Specific Purposes Have Not Been Misapplied, He Says

TORONTO, March 13.—The leader of the Opposition and the Provincial Treasurer locked horns in the last struggle of the debate on the budget in the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon, after which the Opposition amendment was lost and the motion to adopt passed by a vote of 73 to 18, a Government majority of 55.

Both speakers were in fine fettle and the debate was vigorous.

Mr. Rowell began by stating that ten years ago the province had been paying its way, but that now, although the revenues had increased the expenditures had increased much more. The very spirit of expenditure had seized upon the Government and was apparently growing up with the growth of receipts.

Turning to the tabulated accounts, Mr. Rowell claimed that it was illegitimate to leave on the receipts side the cash on hand at the beginning of the year, the T. & O subsidy, which had arrived, the borrowings of four and a half millions, and the municipal sinking funds. If this sum had been deducted, as it should have been, the current receipts would have ten millions. On the disbursements side also the two millions in cash on hand, the drainage debentures, and advances to the T. N. O. and Hydro-Electric Commissions should come out, and then the province would have closed with three millions less receipts than expenditures.

Money which had been borrowed for a specific purpose should have gone only into that account, Mr. Rowell continued. The Legislature had authorized certain borrowings, but these had been diverted to whatever purpose the treasurer afterwards saw fit to encourage. He had gone to the money market and raised one million for the Northern Ontario development authorized, and again for another million. It was a wanton misuse of authority and should be condemned.

Further, he declared that the treasurer was so primitive and extravagant in his knowledge of finance that he would borrow money at six per cent. and deposit it in the bank here at three per cent. The statutory expenditure last year exceeded four and a half millions. It meant that the Government had taken out of the hands of the Legislature the expenditure of a sum nearly as large as the total outlay ten years ago. Where was it going to stop?

Hon. Mr. Lucas began by deprecating the "strong language" of Mr. Rowell, and came back vigorously against the charge that the financial affairs were not handled honestly. Under the old Liberal Government it had been the practice to place huge timber bonuses in the receipt column, and that was why the present leader could claim surpluses in those years.

With reference to the arrears of interest on the T. & N. O. subsidy, he pointed out that Mr. Rowell charged them with including the whole amount, while Mr. Bowman found fault only with including the amounts for the years prior to 1914. Here was a difference that they could settle between themselves. When the old Government piled up $12,000,000 in railway mortgages, there never was a debt, but always a surplus.

He denied that the expenses of civil government had increased, as Mr. Rowell would have them believe, or that expenditure in connection with crown lands was greater. Mr. Rowell had failed to explain that the Department of Forestry was now separate and distinct from that of agriculture, and agricultural expenditures were now confined to those purposes alone. Practically the whole mining industry had been developed by the Government with consequent improvements in fire ranging, forest reserve and park supervision, with no credit from the Opposition leader.

In reply to the charge of misuse of voted grants Hon. Mr. Lucas said that the Opposition was a mere student body when it came to matters of finance, or they would have known that the system was to place all such sums in the consolidated revenue, and use them as the time came. It was like taking money from one pocket to place in another. As for statutory expenditure, which was so fiercely attacked, the present Government was merely living up to the statutes enforced under the old regime.

The vote was then taken.

Four Victims of Fire.

LINDSAY, March 13. — Another victim died yesterday as a result of the Madison fire, the third child, Jack, having succumbed as the result of burns. The child also inhaled considerable smoke. The jury empanelled before Coroner Wood, after viewing the body of Madison, inspected the premises and then adjourned to meet again Monday afternoon.

They were highly incensed at the condition of affairs at the Madison home, where the direst signs of abject poverty were in evidence, while the sanitary conditions were extremely unwholesome.

Two Missionaries Missing.

LONDON, March 13.—A despatch to the Central News from Shanghai, China, yesterday says that two women attached to the station of the China inland mission at Kao Ho-Kow in the Province of Hu-Peh, have been missing since that town was sacked and burned by brigands Wednesday.

The two women are Miss E. Black and Miss J. Black of the China inland mission.

Williams Is Grand Master.

GUELPH, March 13.—The election of officers was proceeded with last night. Dr. J. J. Williams, of Woodstock, succeeds Fred Dane, Toronto, as grand master of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario West. His place as deputy grand master was filled by the election of Mayor H. C. Hocken, Toronto, former junior deputy. The other officers chosen were: Associate deputy grand master, J. I. Hartt, Orillia; grand chaplain, Rev. H. D. Peacock, Paquette Station; grand secretary, W. M. Fitzgerald, Toronto; grand treasurer, James F. Harper, Hamilton.

We Shall Also Formally Open the New Dept. for Children

Upon the Same Date

This is a New Section recently erected upon the Second Floor, and given over entirely to the needs of childhood in the way of Garments and Hats.

We have endeavoured to make this department complete in every respect, and the showing of little Frocks and Underwear of every child's size, is characterized by a breadth of selection that has not been possible heretofore.

While the great convenience of grouping everything in Children's Wear in the one circle, must surely commend itself very highly to those who have children to care for.

The department is situated near the elevator, and your inquiries into any particulars will be courteously answered.

FOUNDER OF THE AIR-BRAKE DEAD

NEW YORK, March 13.—George Westinghouse died suddenly here yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Westinghouse was 68 years of age and was perhaps best known as the inventor of the air-brake which bears his name, and which revolutionised railroading in this country. The airbrake which he invented is used throughout the civilised world and in almost every part of the globe there are great plants which he founded.

Mr. Westinghouse founded many manufacturing companies in the United States, Canada and abroad, including plants at Hamilton, Ont., Manchester and London, Eng. In the Westinghouse industries some 50,000 persons are employed, and the many companies have a capitalization aggregating $200,000,000.

Blue wool poplin or serge combined with tartan or the Roman stripe silk is a modish spring combination.

A respected member of Aukergill has passed away in the person of Mr. George Manson, at the age of 77 years.

WILL URGE CONFERENCE.

Australia and New Zealand Impatient About Defence.

LONDON, March 13.—The Sydney correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says that the postponement of the constitutional amendments in Canada, thus deferring indefinitely the naval proposals, is regarded here as a forceful reason for holding a naval defence conference at the earliest possible date, with a view to placing on a permanent and co-ordinated basis the naval forces of the mother country, Australia, and New Zealand in the Pacific.

The Sydney Herald states that if it be true that the navy question cannot be settled by the Canadian Government for several years to come, then the naval conference which Australia and New Zealand both desire cannot be postponed longer. Canada is at perfect liberty to take as long as she likes over her decision, but Australia and New Zealand have decided and cannot consent to go on for another three or four years in total darkness as to what is the Imperial policy in the Pacific.

The miners of Abertridwe, near Senghenydd, South Wales, have now gone back to work, the strike having been settled.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SHOW YOUR METTLE

Candidates; it is up to You Whether You Want a Gold Watch or an Auto

The great contest ends very soon. Are you satisfied with your work the last few days? Do you think you will have enough votes to win the prize that you are aspiring to? Now is the time to think of these things, contestants—don't wait for two or three weeks, and then, when the contest is over, say. "I wish I had worked that day I spent talking to friends about how many votes I had." This offer, right improved, will put you in the "auto" class. This is a chance of a lifetime, should you improve your time properly.

Race is Very Close.

The race is running very close and the contestants that put forth the best efforts on this offer are the ones that will find themselves in the lead when the votes are counted the last night. Bear in mind that if you want a prize this offer gives you the chance to get it.

To Stop Now is Suicide

No one knows who will win. Many readers think they can select at least one of the winners. Some pick the candidates that are now in the lead, some are confident that others will be the fortunate ones. It cannot be ascertained how many votes any one candidate will be able to cast at the close of the contest.

It is not wise for any contestant to estimate just how many their competitors will accumulate. Over-confidence often has lost contests of this kind and relaxation at this stage means certain ruin to the strongest candidate in the contest.

Don't think because you have a few thousand votes stored up that some of the other candidates haven't the same thing. Don't get tripped up on this little enemy that is bound to creep into your being, for if you do it is very likely that you will not get close enough to hear the car whizz by you. Good, rich prizes like The Review is giving away can not be won for a song, and the sooner some candidates find this out the better it will be for them. Make this your banner week and success will be yours.

Haymaking Time.

Figuratively speaking, it is the beginning of the real "haymaking" for the candidates and those of their friends who are helping them to gather in the votes, and if the figurative vein might be continued, it could be added that "the sun of votes is full of promise." Never before has there been such a total absence of anything which could interfere in the smallest degree with the friendly relations that have existed between all those interested.

U. S. SENATE ROUSED.

Page's Speech In London Seems To Have Been Too Cordial.

WASHINGTON, March 13. — Walter Hines Page, American ambassador to Great Britain, was made the target of enquiry yesterday in a resolution adopted by the Senate calling upon the Secretary of State to investigate alleged public assertions by the ambassador relative to the Monroe doctrine and the Panama Canal.

Senator Chamberlain, aroused over reports of a speech by Ambassador Page Wednesday night in London before the Associated Chambers of Commerce, introduced the resolution of enquiry, and his request for immediate consideration resulted in its adoption without debate. The resolution requests the Secretary of State to procure a copy for the use of the Senate of Ambassador Page's address, and to call upon the ambassador for evidence upon which he based the alleged statement that "it added greatly to the pleasure of the people of the United States in the building of the Panama Canal to know that the British world would profit most by its use."

Not Paying Its Way.

DENVER, March 13.—The annual report of the Colorado Eastern Railroad Co. for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, made public, shows passenger earnings for the year of $1.88, a decrease of 62 per cent. under 1912. Freight earnings amounted to $10.21, as compared with $15.25 during the preceding year.

Its operating force consists of one man — engineer, fireman, conductor and trainman. It is owned by the Havemeyers.

Full Suffrage Assured.

COPENHAGEN, March 13. — An agreement reached yesterday between the Socialist, Radical and Moderate parties, which control majorities in both Houses of Parliament, assures the passage of the constitutional reform bill, under the provisions of which all electoral property qualifications are abolished and suffrage is granted to women.

Smith Council Enact By-law Covering Discharge of Fire Arms

The members of the Municipal Council of the Township of Smith met in the County Council Chamber. All the members were present with Reeve Garbutt in the chair.

Mr. Thos. Chapman addressed the Council with reference to a culvert on the road at the north-east corner of Jackson Park, which did not properly carry off the water.

The Reeve instructed Councillor Jobe to make a note of the matter.

Mr. John Rowe requested the Council to open up Lee street at the rear of his property.

The Reeve promised to look over the matter in the spring.

Messrs. Reid and Hockeday, of Young's Point, addressed the Council with reference to sidewalks.

Reeve Garbutt stated that the Council were in hearty sympathy with the movement for permanent walks, but nothing could be done until all the ratepayers in that division were unanimous as to what they required.

By-law No. 726 was passed, enacting as follows:

Guns or other fire-arms may be carried and discharged for any lawful purpose by bona-fide residents of the Township of Smith, upon lands owned or occupied by them respectively, and by other persons with the express permission of the owners or occupants of the lands upon which the same are carried or discharged.

Save as above set forth the discharge of guns or other fire-arms in the said Township of Smith is hereby prohibited.

Any person violating the provisions of this By-Law shall on conviction therefore before a Justice of the Peace, incur a penalty of not less than One Dollar or more than Twenty Dollars, such penalty to be recoverable and enforced in accordance with the provisions of Section 498 of the Muncipal Act. 1913.

Moved by Mr. Northey and Mr. Telford that the following accounts be paid:

Ernest McManus, rebate dog tax	$3.00
Herbert Rosborough, cutting brush	3.00
Municipal World, Office Supplies	3.29
Dr. Morgan, M. H. O. acc.	7.75

Carried.

The Council adjourned to meet on April 6th.

Talking at card games is now the fashion in London.

Paris declares the hatpin is no more for it is not needed with the small hats and bands of ribbon or velvet fasten the large ones.

MILITANT MISS GOES TO PRISON

Six Months' Imprisonment for Mutilating Picture.

LONDON, March 13. — May Richardson, the militant suffragette, who on Tuesday hacked the celebrated Velasquez picture known as the "Rokeby Venus" in the National Gallery, was yesterday sentenced to six months' imprisonment for her crime.

The public prosecutor said that one might well doubt whether the prisoner was in her right senses.

Addressing Judge Robert Wallace, Miss Richardson said she had been an art student, but cared more for justice than for art. She firmly believed that when the nation had shut its eyes to justice and preferred to have women who were fighting for justice maltreated and tortured, such an action as hers should be understandable.

The slow and premeditated murder of Mrs. Pankhurst was an ultimatum which brought about the outrages. The nation seemed dead or asleep, for the women had knocked vainly at the doors of Ministers, bishops and archbishops and even of the King himself.

Alaska Bill Signed.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—President Wilson yesterday extended what he termed the hand of real "helpfulness and brotherhood to Alaska" when he signed the bill authorizing the expenditure of $35,000,000 for the first Government-owned railway constructed by the United States.

LEGISLATURE SUPPORTS AID FOR IRON INDUSTRY

R. R. Gamey's Resolution is Heartily Endorsed—Ontario Immensely Wealthy

TORONTO, March 13. — The Ontario Legislature yesterday put itself on record as in favor of urging upon the Federal Government the importance of granting a measure that would stimulate the iron industry of Canada. What form that assistance would take would be left to the discretion of the Ministers at Ottawa, but the idea would be to so promote public interest that the iron and steel business would be placed on an assured and permanent footing. A motion to this effect, proposed by R. R. Gamey of Manitoulin, received the unqualified support of the Government and Opposition, and was carried after a six-hour discussion with only one voice dissenting.

In speaking to the motion, Mr. Gamey claimed that the northern parts of the province contained ore quite as promising as that of Michigan, and the American Superior mines, but that the splendid equipment and good start of the Americans had discouraged Canadian capitalists.

Another member from the north, D. M. Hogarth (Port Arthur) felt that the opportunity now before the province was one of great importance. The opening of iron mines in the Lake Superior region would bring 12,000 new men at least for actual work in the ore and establish a municipality of 60,000 population.

Hon. W. H. Hearst followed up this position by claiming that the possibilities of the iron industry in Canada were almost beyond comprehension. This of all lines had been the most backward, regardless of the fact that Ontario was one of the two provinces in the Dominion which professed to have a source of this mineral in marketable quantities.

The resolution met with the entire approval of Wm. Proudfoot of the Opposition. He would go as far as was thought necessary to see iron production put on a new basis and even thought that the province should tender financial encouragement.

OPPOSITION LAMENTS ON INCOMING IMMIGRANTS

Hon. Dr. Roche Reminds Hon Frank Oliver That Same Immigration Officials Are in Charge

OTTAWA, March 13. — While in committee of supply on the estimates of the Department of the Interior yesterday the Commons discussed several phases of the past year's immigration.

Hon. Frank Oliver called attention to the fact that when the total immigration was 311,000, in 1911, the homestead entries had numbered 44,779, while last year, with a total immigration of 402,000, the homestead entries had dropped to 33,699. It was the announced policy of the Government to secure people to go on the land, but the records seemed to show they were traveling in the other direction.

Mr. Oliver believed that the methods of the Department should be revised. It had been looking for quantity rather than quality. In the first nine months of 1913 the Government had been under the necessity of deporting no less than 1,500 immigrants.

Hon. Dr. Beland advocated the examination of immigrants at the ports in Europe.

Mr. Alphonse Verville, the Labor member, placed himself upon record as opposed to bonusing immigrants. He urged the Government to pass an order in council, similar to the one passed for British Columbia, excluding all artisans and laborers until the present business depression was over.

Dr. Roche, in reply to the criticism leveled at his Department, said that the Department was being run by practically the same officials as when the Laurier Government was in power. He believed that Canada was getting her share of immigration, and on the whole a very good type of immigrant. The drop in American immigration in the last two or three years was due, said Dr. Roche, to the fact that the United States Government was offering 320 acres of land to homesteaders, instead of 160 acres as in Canada.

The distribution of New Brunswick constituencies over which the Liberals and Conservatives from the province have been in consultation, will be submitted to the special committee to-day.

There is general agreement with the plan and unless the committee decides to make some changes the eleven seats in New Brunswick will be as follows: St. John and Albert (2 members), Madawaska and Restigouche, Victoria and Carleton, Sunbury and York, Queens and Kings, Charlotte, Westmoreland, Kent, Northumberland and Gloucester.

Premier Mathieson and Hon. John McLean of Prince Edward Island, are here representing the claim of the island province to the six members with which they entered confederation. They feel confident that Prince Edward Island will be given four seats as at present. Nothing, however, regarding this matter has been definitely agreed upon.

New Brunswick is the second province to come to an agreement, Manitoba being the other.

British Columbia has been decided upon, but the only new feature there is that Vancouver will have three members.

Hon. Mr. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, presented a resolution to the House yesterday which asked that the Inspection and Sales Act be amended so as to allow binder twine manufactured for exportation to be sold unlabeled.

Mr. Foster explained to the House that foreign dealers in binder twine, especially the Russians, did not want the label of the maker to be on the twine. The bill would still compel the twine sold in Canada to be labeled, but that all twine for exportation would be exempt.

Hon. George P. Graham said he agreed with the resolution. The reports of the trade commissioners, he said, showed that the reason Canada did not get her fair share of export trade was because the Canadian manufacturers would not go out of their way to cater to foreign trade.

The bill was then introduced and read a first time.

Montreal Police All on Search.

MONTREAL, March 13. — The police and detective machine was yesterday concentrated on finding Arthur Foucault, Rielle avenue, Verdun, who is said to have been the driver of the sleigh from which the quartette of robbers fired the fatal shots which killed Constable Bourdon, and laid Constable Guyon low with a mortal wound early Wednesday morning on St. Catharine road, Cote Des Neiges.

SOCIETY
WEDDING—PERSONAL

Mrs. Frank C. Neal, Rubidge St., is in Toronto, owing to the illness of her father.

Mr. H. Heywell, aged 77, was married at Cullingworth, Yorks. to Miss Mary Bancroft, aged 69. Both are old age pensioners.

In future card playing is to be allowed in the infirmary of the London Union. Hitherto it has been strictly prohibited.

Owing to the decision to abolish mounted infantry in the British Army, the mounted infantry camp at Longmoor is now closed,

Space is Swansea's pricipal cemetery is being gradually filled up, and the Corporation Burial Committee have decided to raise prices.

Mr. E. J. Holt, of Milwaukee, is a guest at the Oriental.

COURT CHEMONG AT HOME.

An exceptionally fine programme furnished a delightful time for Court Chemong, I.O.F., and their friends last evening in the W. O. W. Hall.

Refreshments were served by the ladies at the close of the programme, which included vocal and instrumental music.

DANCE POSTPONED.

The dance of the Marlboro Club, announced for to-night, has been postponed.

Mr. Herbert King, of Chicago, Ill., is a guest at the White House.

Mrs. Walter Paterson, formerly of this city, announces the engagement of her daughter, Mary E. Paterson, to Mr. W. I. Lane, of Milwaukee. The wedding is to take place in the latter part of April.

POWELL-TAYLOR.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Taylor, 580 Bolivar Street, Peterboro, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on the evening of March 11th, when their youngest daughter, Alida, was united in marriage to Mr. Harry T. Powell, of Caren, Sask.

The bride was beautifully gowned in silk broque crepe, with ivory satin and seed-pearl trimmings, and carried a bouquet of white roses and ferns.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. J. Keith, pastor of Knox Church, in the presence of only the immediate friends and relatives.

The bride entered the drawing room to the strains of Lohegrin's Wedding March, played by Miss E. Wilson, of Toronto.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome cabinet of silver and to the pianist a necklace of pearls.

The happy couple left on the evening train for their home in Sask., accompanied by the best wishes of a host of friends for their future happiness.

ROYAL THEATRE

The management of the Royal will introduce this week Special High Standard vaudeville acts, with all feature motion pictures, making a good big show for the general admission of 10c.

See Jas. O'Neill in the "Count of Monte Cristo," Thursday and Friday only.

Mr. William Howard, a foreman at the L. & N. W. depot at Crewe, suddenly fell dead in his chair in his office.

Lottie Kendall, the dainty comedienne with John C. Fisher's Musical Comedy, "The Red Rose," which comes to The Grand next Thursday, March 19.

THE RED ROSE

Announced for "The Grand" Next Week.

One of the most notable musical comedy events of the season will be the coming of John C. Fisher's great success, "The Red Rose," at The Grand, next Thursday, March 19. It will be the first local appearance of this sensational musical comedy and with it will come the New York company with a large chorus.

"The Red Rose" has to do with student life in the Latin Quarter of Paris. The locale is suggestive of care-free happiness, and the particular scenes depicted in Mr. Fisher's play reflect the best to be found in real and imaginery student life. Its story deals with the love of a young millionaire art student for Lola, an exquisite artists' model, toast of the Bohemian quarter for two years. That the girl turns out to be the daughter of a wealthy and distinguished nobleman, and that everything ends happily is to be expected. The expected happens. The first act shows the interior of an art school, where the students are drawing from a living model. The second is an out-door scene on the estate of a nobleman just outside the French capital. The third depicts the Four Arts Ball, where are introduced many of the beautiful and novel dances which help more than a little to life "The Red Rose" out of the muck of musical comedy. The chorus of twenty-five girls have been chosen not only for looks, grace and youth, but for ability to sing and dance.

THE WONDERFUL PICTURE OF NERO

In 3 Acts

Was a great success and record breaker at the Royal, Red Mill and Princess on $ day. This wonderful film was shown at these three theatres to give lovers of feature pictures a treat on $ day.

NERO will be shown for the last time to-night at the Royal. Special vaudeville and the most talked of feature, James O'Neill in the "Count of Monte Cristo," will be on the same bill. The admission will be the same, 5c. and 10c.

THEATRICAL

Alice Lloyd and her company gave patrons of the Grand Opera House a pleasing variation last night. Alice is just as charming as ever. She wore some stunning costumes and she sang old and new favorite songs to the delight of all. Of course Alice had to sing "Ship Ahoy," and the gallery boys could not do other than get in on the chorus.

Frank Fogarty held the audience convulsed with laughter with his Irish jokes and stories. The Cowboy minstrels made a big hit, and Sidney Wood and Doraine Sisters were responsible for some high-class vaudeville turns. The living statues were also received with warm approval. In "Dance Mad" there are some very clever dancers. "Quo Vadis," an eight-reel photo-play will be produced to-night.

Considerable damage was done by a fire that broke out in Dundas Street, Grangemouth, and six families were rendered homeless.

Acting under medical advice, the Bishop of Newcastle left England for some southern climate on Feb. 17th.

Boston's Unemployed Demand Food.

BOSTON, March 13. — A small army of unemployed invaded the Chamber of Commerce yesterday, demanding shelter and food. Trading had closed for the day, but the unexpected arrival of the workless ones caused much excitement. Police reserves were called and the party, which included about 150 men, led by Morrison I. Swift, were ejected without violence. After the invaders had been put out of the building an attempt was made to hold a meeting in India square, but the police dispersed the gathering.

The Beet Sugar Industry.

The question of the Canadian beet sugar industry is dealt with in the current issue of The Canada-West India Magazine in an article which asks whether the efforts which have been made to get it properly going will prove successful or, like many other industries, prove an uneconomic undertaking. The first attempt to establish the industry took place in the 'eighties, when three factories were built: one at Coaticook, one at Berthier, and another at Farnham—all being in Quebec. Inside of two years, however, all these factories had failed. The next attempt to found the industry took place in Ontario in 1901. Four factories were erected. After about two seasons' work, however, the Wiarton and Dresden factories closed down. In 1908 the Berlin factory got into financial difficulties and was bought at public auction by the Wallaceburg Sugar Refinery, leaving but two factories out of the four commenced. Another factory was started at Raymond, Alta. The industry has been greatly aided both by large provincial subsidies and by the protection under the customs tariff, and $370,906 has been given in bounties by Ontario and $63,000 by Alberta. From 1901 to 1912 the Ontario factories received in tariff protection $1,061,000 and the Alberta factory $172,000. Altogether the aid given amounts to nearly $1,300,000 since 1901. Notwithstanding this immense aid, beet sugar production amounts to only 12,000 tons per year, or but four per cent. of Canada's consumption. This is mainly due to the difficulty of securing suitable labor and the lack of a diversified system of farming.

NO WORD FROM CANADA

LONDON, March 12.—"In Canada the Government has not obtained the Parliamentary sanction for the proposal to build three armored ships of the best modern type at the charge of the Dominion and the development of a naval policy for Canada is consequently in abeyance." This comprises the only reference to Canada in the statement of Winston Churchill on the naval estimates, which was issued last night.

Four new Dreadnoughts, four cruisers, twelve torpedo boat destroyers, and several submarines were provided for.

The estimate provides for an appropriation of $257,750,000, an increase of $13,700,000 over last year's budget.

The Admiralty proposes the most formidable increase of the British navy in many years.

The Liberal group, which was formed to check the increase in the expenditure on armaments view the proposed increase to $257,750,000 with great concern. In fact they regard the whole statement as exceedingly cryptic and as giving no indication as to the intention of the Government either regarding the Canadian position or regarding the position in the Mediterranean later.

The question will be fully debated in the House of Commons on Wednesday next at the instance of Aubrey Herbert Murray McDonald, and his friends are alarmed at the meagre nature of the information provided by the First Lord of the Admiralty in his explanatory statement. When the large total of the estimates is taken into consideration Churchill, they maintain, is trying to hoodwink Parliament, and they will press for fuller details before they assent to the estimates he has presented.

OBITUARY

THE LATE MRS. DAVIES.

The sympathy of his many friends will be extended to Mr. W. A. Davies, who has been called upon to bear the loss of his wife, whose death occurred on Tuesday, while Mrs. Davies was visiting her parents and relatives near Birmingham, England.

Besides her husband, the late Mrs. Davies leaves a young daughter, Olive., who was two years of age yesterday. The deceased was 34 years of age. Her maiden name was Agnes Emily Hadley Waterhouse.

CLIMATE IS IMPROVING

The Breaking Up of the Vast Prairie Lands Are Having an Appreciable Effect In the Direction of Reducing the Rigors of the Ice-Bound Winters — Drainage of Marshes a Powerful Factor.

The control of climate is evidently not merely a dream of the future but an accomplished fact.

As one would expect, some of the most interesting results in the way of artificial interference with climate are to be found in the case of those countries which have been colonized within comparatively recent times.

The breaking up of the vast prairie lands in Canada and the United States having a very radical effect upon the temperature of many districts. The experience of those who have investigated the matter goes to show that the more land is broken up and cultivated the more even is the temperature.

That great dread of the Western farmer—the summer frost-line—is being pushed further north year by year. Mr. J. Obed Smith, Assistant Superintendent of Emigration for Canada, says that twenty-five years ago in Manitoba summer frosts were expected as a natural and an inevitable event; the only question agitating the farmer's mind was whether the visitation would be severe enough to damage the crops. At the present time the question of summer frosts has become almost a tradition; for a generation the farmers have scarcely been troubled at all in this direction. It is not only in the summer (but in the winter as well) that an increase of temperature is to be noticed.

In many parts of the Dominion, especially round Winnipeg, it is common talk among the older settlers that the low temperatures with which they were so familiar in the old days are not now experienced. A steady increase in the warmth of the winters goes hand in hand with the breaking up of the prairies. This matter of bringing up the temperature by even a few degrees is much more important than may appear at first sight.

Stretching up towards the North Pole there are millions of acres of land, of which we may take the vast "tundras" of Siberia as an example. Here, owing to the marshy character of the ground, it is so thoroughly chilled that even in the height of summer it is always frozen hard within a few inches of the surface. It is admitted that if these great bog areas could be drained of their superabundant moisture a great difference in the climate of Siberia would be the outcome.

Large tracts of forest land have a definite influence on the climate of a district. In India it is known that great numbers of trees bring a cooling influence. The same effects have been observed in South America and in Africa. The fact is readily understood when it is considered that land densely covered with jungle does not get so heated as that which is fully exposed to the sun's rays.

More important is the effect of forests upon the rainfall of the district. Trees increase the humidity of the atmosphere by the evaporation of moisture from their leaves, and this will be precipitated again in showers. In many parts of the world the destruction of forests has brought about a serious shortage in the rainfall of districts. This has been so in America and in Central India. The replacing of the forests, although of course a matter of time, will in many cases restore the climate to its original condition. In some of the central provinces in India it has been observed that ten years after the reafforestation there was an increase of 20 per cent. in the rainfall. Similar results have been noticed in other parts of America.

A still more fascinating branch of the question of the artificial interference with climate is that in which naturally parched regions may be converted into serviceable tracts of land. It is true that trees do not grow in deserts because there is not sufficient rainfall for their needs. On the other hand, if it were possible to irrigate the Sahara desert and then clothe it with trees it is likely that a regular rainfall would become a feature of the climate. In India forests produced in regions so dry that cultivation was only possible after irrigation have brought about frequent rains.

The removal of stagnant water is another powerful ameliorating force on the climate. During the last few centuries there has been an immense reduction of marsh land in England. Now, as water-laden soil is always colder than dry, it is not difficult to imagine that the moistness or otherwise of a vast area of land will have a definite effect upon temperature. If damp land is artificially drained for the purposes of cultivation it seems like that a permanent alteration in climate would be the result.

This is what has actually taken place in England, for it is a proved fact the mean temperature in that country is appreciably higher than it was several hundred years ago.

A generation or so back Glaisher computed that at Greenwich the mean temperature had risen two degrees in the preceding hundred years. Certainly severe winters are less frequent than formerly, and when these do occur they are rarely experienced until after Christmas. The drier ground is able to hold the warmth of summer far into the autumn; in this way the threatening cold is diminished and kept at bay for a longer period than would otherwise be the case.

DR. P. E. DOLITTLE ONTARIO'S FIRST TOURING MOTORIST

Prominent in the Organization of the Motoring Fraternity

Dr. P. E. Dolittle, who has been elected president of the Ontario Motor League by acclamation, is so well known the country over that the news of his election will be welcome not only to motorists but also to those interested in the good roads movement. Dr. Dolittle was one of the pioneer motorists in Canada. When automobiles first began to snort and puff he became interested and he was, perhaps, the first touring motorist Ontario had. The doctor has always been in the forefront of motor organization. He was connected with the League from the first and has been one of the workers in the fight for good roads and reasonable motoring legislation. In making him president of the League members have fittingly rewarded a gentleman who has given unspared effort and time to the cause for which the organization stands.

Women as Officials.

The question whether women are eligible to qualify for the purpose of practicing as solicitors was raised in the Court of Appeal, before the Master of the Rolls and other Lords Justices, upon the appeal of Miss Gwyneth Marjorie Bebb from a judgment against her.

The plea in support of Miss Bebb's claim was that she was a "person" within the meaning of the Solicitors Acts ,and "persons" were entitled to be admitted to the preliminary examination of candidates held by the Incorporated Law Society. The former decision was that Miss Bebb both by common law and statute law was disqualified by reason of her sex.

Lord Robert Cecil, K.C., was the lady's leading counsel, and said that three other ladies were awaiting the determination of Miss Bebb's case.

The Master of the Rolls: Can women be churchwardens?

Lord R. Cecil: They can even be Queens and Regents, and they have been from the earliest times. A woman was Keeper of the Great Seal—Eleanor, wife of Henry III.

Counsel said that women had also been:—

Hereditary Lord High Constable.
Great Chamberlain.
Marshal.
Governor of a workhouse.
Hereditary sheriff.
Sexton.
Solicitors' clerks.

Sir Robert Finlay, K.C., was heard against the claim, and the hearing was adjourned.

All Hydrogen Makers.

Professor Sir James Dewar, lecturing at the Royal Institution in London recently mentioned a remarkable discovery which he made in the course of his heat researches. It was that every living animal was constantly giving off hydrogen gas during respiration.

One of his assistants, Mr. Green, gave off as much as a half litre daily, while Dewar himself only produced 100 cubic centimetres.

The production of hydrogen in connection with the processes of digestion has been long known, but apart from this there is a steady and uniform exhalation of hydrogen.

"Where does it all go?" he asked. In the course of ages it has accumulated to an enormous extent unless it has escaped from the atmosphere or came to earth in the form of water. Probably both these processes were going on to some extent.

Professor Dewar showed an instrument he had invented to measure the exhalation.

Mean Man.

Edwards—So you think your next door neighbor is mean? Matchell—Of course I think he is mean. Wouldn't you think him mean if he killed his rooster, which had wakened you and kept you awake every morning for two years, the very night before you wanted to catch a 2:10 a. m. train?—Judge.

A Possible Reason.

Boreleigh (at 11:40 in the evening)—I love that dreamy look in your eyes. I have never seen it in any other girls.

Miss Bright (stifling a yawn)—Perhaps you don't stay as late with them as you do here.—Boston Transcript.

Do not allow idleness to deceive you. for, while you give him today, he steals tomorrow from you.

TREE PUBLISHES BOOK.

In Which He Reveals His Personality and Tells Stories.

Curiosity as to the "real personality" of the people who on the stage play many parts is natural and legitimate. "Thoughts and After-Thoughts" by Herbert Beerbohm Tree, reveals an original mind, a close observer and shrewd critic of men and things, and a kindly, generous nature. Whilst he is first and foremost an actor, and has very decided views on everything relating to the dramatic profession, Sir Herbert Tree keeps an eye on the world at large, and is specially interested in some modern tendencies. The dedication of the book is characteristic: "To mine enemy I dedicate the faults of this book. To my friend I dedicate what virtue it may have, hoping thus to give pleasure to both." At the beginning of the book, in "Our Betters: a Medley of Considered Indiscretions," which in the after-thought we are told was written "when wandering alone under the pine trees, pondering some problems of life," the democratic note is struck, and much of it is permeated by the spirit of socialism. It is also dominated by a consciousness of the wonders wrought by physical science—the science of a higher sociology."

Here is a story of the late Lord Tennyson:

When staying at a country house, where the neighboring luminaries of the county had been invited to meet him, the poet was asked by his host after dinner whether he would like to look at the stars. He took up the telescope, and, forgetting himself and others, gazed for twenty minutes at the wonders of the heavens. "Well, what do you think, Mr. Tennyson?" inquired his host. "I don't think much of our county families," replied Tennyson.

Sir Herbert is an ardent and powerful peace advocate:

"As science is teaching us the use of the newly-discovered forces of electricity and radium, which, ignorantly used, are infernal agents of destruction, so may the right use of democratic power be the most splendid agency for good when the peoples shall have been instructed in its right use. Thus enlightened, the people may draw closer the bonds of brotherhood of man, and, guided by the new light, and restrained by the higher education, is it not possible that the workmen of the world will join in a bloodless revolution and cry, 'We will have no more wars'?"

In the after-thought to an essay on "The Living Shakespeare," Sir Herbert admits that the present moment is not a propitious one for the theatre:

"Ragtime and futurism are holding carnival on our boards, but soon they, too, may be swept away into the limbo of the half-remembered, along with the stucco statues, the faded photographs, and the crinoline classics of a bygone day. And almost before this printer's ink is dry the fickle public, sated with the ephermeral, may return once more to the ample bosom of the drama."

An Ancient Industry.

One of the oldest and most curious of existing industries is the making of narrow rings or bracelets, called bangles, from the chank, or sacred shell of the Hindus. This conch (Turbinella pyrum, Linn) is found chiefly at a depth of about two fathoms in the Gulf of Manaar, and about 2,000,000 of the shells are exported annually to Calcutta. So important is the bangle of the Hindu women that J. Hornell, representing the Madras Government, has specially investigated the industry. Tracing the early history of chank ornaments, Mr. Hornell is unable to assign prehistoric specimens in the Madras Museum to the later Stone Age, as had been previously done, but believes marks on some of them were made by metal implements. He has found, however, remains of ancient bangle factories scattered over the greater part of India. Bangle cutting is now confined almost entirely to Bengal, and it proves to be in flourishing condition, in spite of the growing taste for gold ornaments.

Ghost In London.

Have you heard all about the ghost that has just appeared in London? For the last few days crowds have been looking for it and seeing it in Abbey Park cemetery. A pale grey figure at the end of one of the paths, pausing irresolutely as though in wonder at the noise in the street outside. But the explanation has been ferreted out. The shrubs in the cemetery have recently been trimmed up, so that now it is possible for the light of a neighboring arc lamp to fall upon one of the grey granite monuments, and produce a ghost. And this wouldn't be London if the curiosity were not enough to collect a crowd.—London Chronicle.

More Dams For Nile.

The Egyptian Government is considering plans for the construction of two new dams in Upper Egypt below the city of Assiut. The other day a deputation from the provinces of Girgeh and Keneh was received by Lord Kitchener, whom it requested to have pity on the thousands who are being impoverished in their districts owing to lack of water, and to construct for them dams like that of Assuan or Assiut. Lord Kitchener has already given orders for preliminary surveys to be made. It is said that the new dams will cost about $1,250,000.

SCORPION STINGS KILL THOUSANDS OF PERSONS YEARLY IN MEXICO

The Venom of the Deadly Species, Unless Prompt Treatment Follows the Bite, Will End the Life of the Victim in Twelve or Fourteen Hours.

Four thousand persons are reported to die each year in Mexico from the stings of scorpions.

There are several varieties of scorpions in Mexico, some of them exceedingly venomous and others little feared. In the neighborhood of Tepic the virulent Centuris gracilis abounds, but it is little known about the more northern state of Sonora. It is one of the most venomous creatures in the world.

In the small city of Durango scorpions are perhaps more plentiful and more dangerous than anywhere else in the republic. Here the climate is humid and torrid—it is in the "tierra caliente"—and it is estimated that more than 150,000 scorpions are killed each year, with no appreciable effect on their numbers.

A scorpion resembles a diminutive lobster. Some specimens are eight inches long, though the average length is from two to four inches. The claws closely resemble a lobster's; with them the scorpion crushes its prey after disabling it by means of a sting.

The body of a scorpion consists of several segmented joints, the last five or more narrowing down to form the tail, which curls up forward over the body and terminates in the sting. This businesslike appendage is a horny, sharp spine containing two little openings which connect with the venom gland within the shell of the last segment. In striking the scorpion gives the tail a rapid lashing motion forward in advance of the body and literally administers a hypodermic injection of poison, or rather several injections, for it usually stings repeatedly when it does strike.

In color scorpions vary according to environment. One ordinarily colorless or translucent will assume a brown or blackish shade in dark surroundings. Scorpions live in the cracks of the sun baked clay, under stones, in the chinks of the adobe huts and in the cracks in the plaster of old frame houses. They prey upon spiders and other night marauding insects. A spider stung by a scorpion may be observed undergoing convulsions before death just as animals or human beings do.

Unless sleeping cots are well screened and the supports immersed in cans of kerosene or carbolic acid—water evaporates too rapidly—the prowling scorpion may find its way beneath the bed covers and sting the restless child. By nature it is a nocturnal pest. In Mexico every one takes a peep in the toe of his shoe before dressing in the morning to assure himself that no undesirable citizen is hiding there.

Contrary to common belief scorpions never commit suicide by stinging themselves to death—at least not in Mexico. In fact, they seem immune to their own venom. Two well matched specimens will battle to death if confined in a jar, stinging each other repeatedly, yet the victor does not die. He tears his antagonist into small pieces with his claws and voraciously devours every trace of the vanquished foe. And the cannibal thrives on the diet.

Some scorpion bites cause little more than burning pain and numbness in the part affected for a few days. But the more poisonous varieties cause death, and that speedily, especially when they sting young children or debilitated old people. The lower classes of people suffer more than the well to do because of their custom of going about half naked most of the time.

In serious cases the local numbness and pain or burning extend over the body in a few hours. Then follows a feeling as of a ball in the throat, the victim clutching his throat as though choking on a foreign body. Prompt treatment at this stage will usually save life.

If not treated the mouth soon begins to froth and the eyes become reddened and hypersensitive to light. Within an hour or two the breathing grows shorter and more difficult, the body turns blue, the pulse fails and convulsions set in. The convulsions recur frequently during several hours, but complete relaxation usually ushers in the end.

Fortunately unconsciousness develops early, so that the victim does not suffer the tortures of one dying from lockjaw. The average time required for a scorpion sting to cause death is twelve or fourteen hours.

The treatment of scorpion sting consists of a free incision of the part to promote copious bleeding, then vigorous massage toward the bleeding center for half an hour or more. Stimulants—meaning drugs and not that pseudo stimulant, alcohol—are also necessary.

In villages where physicians are wanting the treatment is applied by "practicantes"—ignorant, self constituted healers, and many a peon carries horrible scars from the practicante's crude surgery. Their reckless use of carbolic acid, iodine and similar poisons also accounts for many otherwise avoidable fatalities among victims of scorpion stings.—New York Sun.

Difficulties may surround our path, but if the difficulties be not in ourselves they may generally be overcome.—Jowett.

To Measure High Explosives.

An instrument for measuring the pressure of high explosives and of bullets was lately described to the London Royal Society by Prof. Bertram Hopkinson. It consists of a steel shaft four feet long and an inch and a half in diameter, with a magnet several inches long attached to one end. A projectile fired at the other end of the shaft causes a wave of pressure to pass along to the magnet, which flies off when the wave length extends twice its own.

Measurement of the momentum given to the magnet can be made, and in the case of the blow of a lead bullet, the result agree closely with expectation when the measurement is applied to the force of impact. By the same method of determination the detonation of a one-ounce dry gun cotton primer indicated an average pressure of twenty-five tons per square inch at a distance of three-fourths of an inch.

At the surface of the gun cotton the pressure was about twice as great, but in each case the pressure was gone in a fifty-thousandth of a second.

A Look of 'Ate.

Cyril Maude, the English comedian, was talking about class distinctions.

"They are less marked with you than with us," he said. "Here you all talk alike—the shop girl's accent differs in no wise from that of a Stuyvesant or a Roosevelt. But, with us, the lower classes talk a disgraceful jargon.

"The 'h' especially! The lower classes can never master that 'h.' In my youth I once heard a stage manager rehearsing Faust. He had sprung from the people, poor chap, and he conducted the rehearsals like this:

"'Old your 'ands on your 'ips, 'old up your 'eads, and look 'aughty. You're not on 'Amstead 'Eath now—you're in 'Ades. Now 'asten off 'urriedly, with a look of 'ate.'

"'But, sir,' said I, 'there's only six of us'."

Balm for Suffragists.

Oldham now boasts a woman alderman, the first in Lancashire. This is Mrs. Lees, who is certainly the best known woman in that hustling town. Five years ago Mrs. Lees was elected to the Town Council, being the first woman in Lancashire to receive such an honor.

Her work on the council was such that in 1910-11 she was chosen mayor of Oldham, a unique distinction which she fully justified by the manner in which she fulfilled her duties. Moreover, Mrs. Lees is the only "Freeman" of Oldham, so it is obvious that she enjoys the highest esteem of her own townsfolk.

Epidemic Among Rabbits.

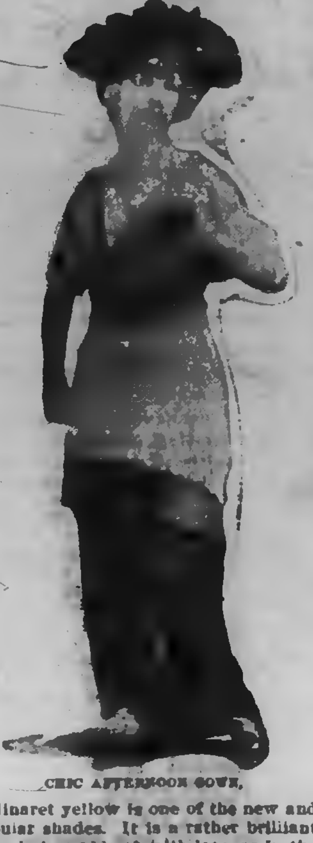
The hares, or "snowshoe rabbits" in the Camrose, Alta., district are dying by hundreds of an epidemic which several local doctors and veterinary surgeons have pronounced to be tuberculosis. It has been the custom to offer these rabbits for sale in the markets of the larger towns, but since the early fall of last year they have not been fit for food. The Edmonton Board of Health has already realized this, and has prohibited their sale in the markets of that city.

The fact that rabbits increase and decrease periodically in the Northwest is well known. In his monograph (N. A. Fauna, No. 29), E. W. Nelson, writing in 1909, tells us that the exact nature of the epidemics is unknown. He says: "In the upper Mackenzie river region, during the winter of 1904, E. A. Preble found varying hares extremely numerous, and great numbers were dying from an epidemic.

Crepe de chine and spotted foulard is a combination seen on many frocks at Nice, just now.

MINARET YELLOW.

Afternoon Gown of This Startling New Shade.



CHIC AFTERNOON GOWN.

Minaret yellow is one of the new and popular shades. It is a rather brilliant tone, but combined with lace, as in the case on the gown illustrated, it is quite pleasing. This tunic of princess lace is sloped to give the smart pointed effect in the back. The costume is for afternoon affairs or for restaurant wear in the evening.

The attempt to bring in high collars is as unwelcome as attempts to bring in long sleeves have so far been. In the case of the collars it will probably fall. However, the fact remains that some of the new lingerie waists show high collars and, of course, back closings. The front closing and the low waist are both so comfortable that women will probably cling to them.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Mme. Poincare, wife of the president of France, who is acknowledged to be the most accomplished hostess in that country, has thus far failed to be received by great monarchs.

Mrs. Barbara Galpin, a newspaper woman, of Somerville, Mass., has been appointed by the mayor a member of the city planning board. The other six members of the board are men.

Dottoressa Maria Montessori, famous as the discoverer of the Montessori system of child training, speaks no English. Though she is a countess she cares little for the title. She is under medium height and is conspicuous for her simple taste in dress.

The old English guild known as the York Merchants Adventurers, which was formed in 1367, still exists, and at a recent meeting a woman had the honor of being admitted to the freedom of the company. The woman was Miss Edith Sellars, and the honor bestowed upon her was in recognition of her services in transcribing the ancient documents of the organization.

STRANGE EXPERIENCES

ODD COMBINATIONS OF EVENTS WHICH RARELY OCCUR.

Two Men Reported Singular Phenomenon of Shadowless Ship—Sea Captain In Exactly Same Spot Two New Year's Nights In Succession—Literary Coincidences In Zangwill and Ward Novels.

In the lives of most of us coincidence has played a part. Probably nine out of every ten people can recall events and dates which, coinciding with one another, are a source of wonderment. There are some coincidences, however, which are of such a character as to call for more than casual comment.

In a recent issue of The Strand Magazine, for instance, there is a photograph illustrating a phenomenon only visible in the tropics—that of sunshine at noon, when no shadow is thrown by objects exposed to the sun's rays, the explanation being that the ship upon which the photograph was taken was at the moment in the exact nadir of the sun's zenith. The phenomenon was observed and recorded by Mr. W. B. Gibbs in latitude 15 deg. South, in February of last year, and it is a singular coincidence that precisely the same phenomenon was witnessed in 1881 or 1882 by Captain W. M. Gibbs of Cardiff, at about the same time of the year and practically in the same latitude.

An experience even more unique befell Captain W. M. Gibbs nearly twenty years later, when, by a really wonderful coincidence, his ship, on New Year's Eve, 1898, was in precisely the same spot as she had been at midnight on New Year's Eve the year before. Captain Gibbs got his chief mate to check the reckoning in order that there should be no mistake about the position, which was some thirty miles off the coast of Algiers.

There have, however, been many remarkable coincidences in regard to ships. On the day Lord Salisbury died a vessel called the Lord Salisbury was posted as missing at Lloyds, while the Czar's son, the Czarewitch, was born within forty-eight hours of the time when the Russian battleship, the Czarewitch, had a disastrous battle with Admiral Togo's fleet off Japan.

And this reference to the Russo-Japanese War recalls the fact that a horse called Togo beat Big Gun almost at the hour when Admiral Togo was defeating the Russian fleet outside Port Arthur.

The death of King Edward's aunt, Princess Alice, happened within a few weeks of the dreadful accident to the vessel, Princess Alice, in the Thames, while simultaneously with the wreck of the liner Delhi, off Tangier, on the coast of Morocco, when the Princess Royal and her husband, the late Duke of Fife, had such a narrow escape from drowning, the other Delhi was being created the capital of India.

Turning to other coincidences, there are some very curious literary parallels. The Crimean War was foretold 400 years before that event, the prophecy in verse being embodied in a little book published in 1458. It began:—

In twice two hundred years the Bear
The Crescent will assail,
But if the Cock and Bull unite
The Bear will not prevail.

When Guy de Maupassant, in one of his stories, described how an Englishman with three daughters, stood on the deck of a sinking vessel with a Frenchman, and all met their fate singing "God Save the Queen," not a few of the French critics pronounced the whole incident to be obsolutely implausible. Nevertheless, many years later, in 1897, a similar patriotic scene was enacted on the deck of the doomed Aden.

Perhaps one of the most interesting of literary coincidences is that concerning Mrs. Humphry Ward and Mr. Israel Zangwill. Stories from the pens of these two novelists were simultaneously appearing in Harper's Magazine, and in the same issue both writers described a scene at Orvieto, the actions of which were also peculiarly similar. Yet Mr. Zangwill subsequently confessed that he had chosen Orvieto because he thought the place comparatively neglected by writers.

The story of an extraordinary coincidence is related by Sir W. Robertson Nicoll in "A Bookman's Letters." A lady sent her servant, a young man of about twenty, to a neighboring town with a valuable ring which required some alteration. On the way he unfortunately dropped the ring while looking at it. He thought it fell into the hollow stump of a tree under the water of a stream, but failed to find it. Afraid to return to tell the story of his loss, he ran away, went to the West Indies, and there accumulated a very fair fortune. Then he resolved to come home and clear himself with his mistress.

Arriving in London he ascertained that she was still alive, and purchased a diamond ring of considerable value, which he determined to present in person. Arriving in the neighborhood he met a former servant, to whom he unfolded the story of why he had left the country abruptly years before. As he was telling the story they came to the spot where he had dropped the ring. "There," said he, "it was just here that I dropped the ring, and there is the very bit of old tree into a hole of which it fell—just there." At the same time he put down the point of his umbrella into a hole in the tree, and, drawing it out, there appeared, to the astonishment of both, the very ring on the ferrule of the umbrella.

Among scientific coincidences there is nothing so remarkable as that concerning Darwin and Alfred Russel Wallace, who died recently. Both scientists, unknown to each other, evolved the theory which is now termed Darwinism.

Narrow gol belts appear on the new pannier gowns.

PREPARE FOR PLAIDS.

Paris Decrees That Smart Women Must Wear Them.

BLUE TAFFETA GOWN.

The gown illustrated here is one of the most useful of spring models, for it incorporates many style hints that the wise woman would do well to note. The sleeves are set low on the shoulder, but so adjusted as to have a comfortable fullness at the elbow. The skirt has a moderate fullness, which is caught in at the side with three fancy buttons. Plaid is very prominent in its decoration. This use of plaid is one of the touches which Paris is now imparting to many smart gowns and wishes to make the fashion. Plaids will be exploited more and more as the season advances. This gown was carried out in blue taffeta with plaid silk in harmonious colors.

Paris says checks are returning to favor and plaids continue to meet the approval of smartly gowned women who need at least one such simple and practical dress as they afford.

Bright buttons, a bit of contrasted trimming material or scarcely more than a frill or vestee gives the style accent.

Designers are offering attractive plain models for misses and young women, with novel features to distinguish them from the style of early winter.

Travelers' Coat Hanger.

A convenience for travelers may be made as follows:

Buy two nickel towel rack rods, with the screws, a screwdriver and gimlet. Roll together in paper and place in the trunk when starting on a journey to supply the often felt need of proper hanging conveniences.

Adjust your rod at such a distance from the back of the wardrobe that you can slip coat arms over it and give them space to hang in a straight row.

When leaving unscrew the rods and take them with you.

When this has once been tried it will always be the traveling companion and one that never indulges in moods or whims.

Gay Bed Covers.

Pretty and useful covers for beds can be made of cretonne or heavy chintz to be used instead of the time honored counterpane.

The covers are to be cut at the corners so they will fit and lie flat and may be finished off with lace or wash edging.

Use the same material elsewhere in the room—on dresser, table, cushions, even to the curtains. Be sure to choose a well covered though dainty design.

Every one knows how ungainly a mattress is to handle. This difficulty can be overcome by sewing two loops on each side of the mattress to use as handles when turning or lifting it from one place to another.

New Glass Rolling Pin.

For some time the glass rolling pin which is filled with ice and which has wooden handles has been on the market, but the new glass rolling pin is made entirely of heavy crystal glass, handles and all. It has therefore no cracks or crevices to absorb either paste or water and by actual test was cleaned in five seconds. It is very light and so rolls easily, and if desired it can be placed in a refrigerator to have it extra cold before using. It has proved one of the most worth while of the season's household novelties and can be recommended to those housekeepers who are contemplating buying a new rolling pin.

An Emergency Hint.

To bake large potatoes quickly place in boiling water and boil until tender, then wipe dry and place in the oven until done. Usually about twenty minutes will provide them ready for the table. Bake very large potatoes until done, but not very soft, the day before wanted. At breakfast peel, slice in even slices and fry to crisp brown, sprinkling with salt or sugar, as preferred.

THE RIGHT MANAGEMENT OF A VEST.

This little vest has the long points that are imitated from the present fashion for men and the high flaring plain cut collar that has replaced the frill of last season. With the new short jacket and especially with the jacket frock of this season this vest and collar will be unusually smart and unusually handy, since the vest part if dainty gauze machine embroidery in batiste and the collar has the desired stiffness in sheer white organdy. The front fastening, as usual, to give proper looseness of effect is done with snap fasteners.

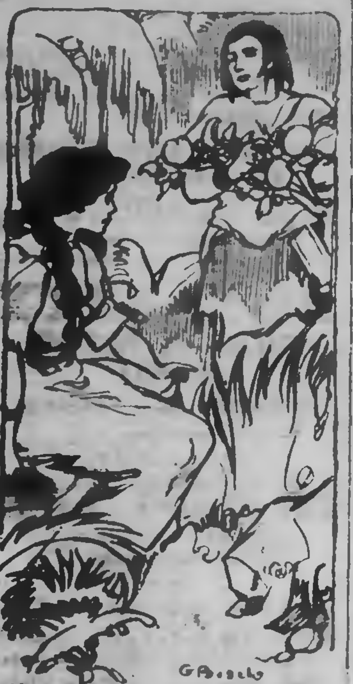
Tarzan of the Apes

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS.

Copyright by the Frank A. Munsey Co.



There Stood Tarzan, His Arms Filled With Luscious Fruit.

But now they had come to their destination, and Tarzan of the apes, with Jane Porter in his strong arms, swung lightly to the turf of the arena where the great apes held their councils and danced the wild orgy of the dumdum.

Though they had come many miles, it was still but midafternoon, and the amphitheater was bathed in the half light which filtered through the maze of encircling foliage.

The green turf looked cool and inviting. The myriad noises of the jungle seemed distant and hushed to a mere echo of blurred sounds, rising and falling like the surf upon a remote shore.

A feeling of dreamy peacefulness stole over Jane Porter as she sank down upon the grass where Tarzan had placed her. She looked up at his great figure towering above her, and there was added a strange sense of perfect security.

"What a perfect creature! There could be naught of cruelty or baseness beneath the godlike exterior.

With a bound Tarzan sprang into the trees and disappeared. Jane Porter wondered where he had gone. Had he left her there to her fate in the lonely jungle?

For a few minutes that seemed hours to the frightened girl she sat with tense nerves waiting.

She heard a sudden, slight sound behind her. With a shriek she sprang to her feet and turned to face her end.

There stood Tarzan, his arms filled with ripe and luscious fruit.

Jane Porter reeled and would have fallen, but Tarzan, dropping his burden, caught her in his arms. She did not lose consciousness, but clung to him, shuddering and trembling.

Tarzan of the apes stroked her soft hair and tried to comfort and quiet her as Kala had him when as a little ape he had been frightened by Sabor, the tiger, or Histah, the snake.

Once he pressed his lips lightly upon her forehead, and she did not move, but closed her eyes and sighed.

She could not analyze her feelings, nor did she wish to attempt it. She was satisfied to feel the safety of those strong arms and to leave her future to fate.

As she thought of the strangeness of it there commenced to dawn upon her the realization that she had possibly learned something she had never known before—love. She wondered and then smiled.

Still smiling, she pushed Tarzan gently away, and, looking at him with a half quizzical expression that made her face wholly entrancing, she pointed to the fruit upon the ground and seated herself upon the edge of the earthen drum of the anthropoids.

Tarzan quickly gathered up the fruit and, bringing it, laid it at her feet, and then he, too, sat upon the drum beside her and with his knife proceeded to open and prepare the various viands for her meal.

Together and in silence they ate, occasionally stealing sly glances at one another, until finally Jane Porter broke into a merry laugh in which Tarzan joined.

"I wish you spoke English," said the girl.

Tarzan shook his head, and an expression of wistful and pathetic longing sobered his laughing eyes.

Tarzan had long since reached a decision as to what his future procedure should be. He had had time to recollect all that he had read of the ways of men and women in the books at the cabin. He would act as he imagined the men in the books would have acted were they in his place.

Again he rose and went into the trees, but first he tried to explain by means of signs that he would return shortly, and he did so well that Jane Porter understood and was not afraid when he had gone. Soon he returned with a great armful of branches.

Then he went back again into the jungle and in a few minutes reappeared with a quantity of soft grasses and ferns. Two more trips he made until he had quite a pile of material at hand.

Then he spread the ferns and grasses upon the ground in a soft, flat bed, and above it he leaned many branches together so that they met a few feet over its center. Upon these he spread layers of huge leaves of the great elephant's ear, and with more branches and more leaves he closed one end of the little shelter he had built.

Then they sat down together again upon the edge of the drum and tried to talk by signs.

The magnificent diamond locket which hung about Tarzan's neck had been a source of much wonderment to Jane Porter. She pointed to it now, and Tarzan removed it and handed it to her.

She saw that it was the work of a skilled artisan and that the diamonds were of great brilliancy and superbly set, but the cutting of them denoted that they were of a former day.

She noticed that the locket opened, and, pressing the hidden clasp, she saw the two halves spring apart to reveal in either section an ivory miniature.

One was of a beautiful woman, and the other might have been the likeness of the man who sat beside her except for a difference of expression that was scarcely definable.

She looked up at Tarzan to find him leaning toward her, gazing on the miniatures with an expression of astonishment. He reached out his hand for the locket and took it away from her, examining the likenesses within with unmistakable signs of surprise and new interest.

His manner clearly denoted that he had never before seen them nor imagined that the locket opened.

This fact caused Jane Porter to indulge in still more speculation, and it taxed her imagination to picture how this beautiful ornament came into the possession of a wild and savage creature of the unexplored jungles of Africa.

Still more wonderful, how did it contain the likeness of one who might be a brother or, more likely, the father of this woodland demigod, who was even ignorant of the fact that the locket opened?

Tarzan was still gazing with fixity at the two faces. Presently he removed the quiver from his shoulder and, emptying the arrows upon the ground, reached into the bottom of the baglike receptacle and drew forth a flat object wrapped in many soft leaves and tied with bits of long grass.

Carefully he unwrapped it, removing layer after layer of leaves until at length he held a photograph in his hand.

Pointing to the miniature of the man within the locket, he handed the photograph to Jane Porter, holding the open locket beside it.

The photograph only served to puzzle the girl still more, for it was evidently another likeness of the same man whose picture rested in the locket beside that of the beautiful young woman.

Tarzan was looking at her with an expression of puzzled bewilderment in his eyes as she glanced up at him. He seemed to be framing a question with his lips.

The girl pointed to the photograph and then to the miniature and then to him, as though to indicate that she thought the likenesses were of him, but he only shook his head, and then, shrugging his great shoulders, he took the photograph from her and, having carefully rewrapped it, placed it again in the bottom of his quiver.

For a few moments he sat in silence, his eyes bent upon the ground, while Jane Porter held the little locket in her hand, turning it over and over in an endeavor to find some further clew that might lead to the identity of its original owner.

At length a simple explanation occurred to her.

The locket had belonged to Lord Greystoke. The likenesses were those of him and Lady Alice. This wild creature had simply found it in the cabin by the beach. But to account for the strange likeness between Lord Greystoke and this forest god—that was quite beyond her, and it is not strange that she did not imagine that this savage was indeed an English nobleman.

At length Tarzan looked up to watch the girl as she examined the locket.

She noticed that he was watching her, and, thinking that he wished his ornament again, she held it out to him. He took it from her, and, taking the chain in his two hands, he placed it about her neck, smiling at her expression of surprise.

Jane Porter shook her head vehemently and would have removed the golden links from about her throat, but Tarzan would not let her. Taking her hands in his, he held them tightly to prevent her.

At last she desisted and with a little laugh raised the locket to her lips and, rising, dropped him a little courtesy.

Tarzan did not know precisely what she meant, but he guessed correctly that it was her way of acknowledging the gift, and so he rose, too, and, taking the locket in his hand, stooped gravely like some courtier of old and pressed his lips upon it where hers had rested.

It was a stately and gallant little compliment, performed with the grace and dignity of utter unconsciousness of self. It was the hall mark of his aristocratic birth.

It was growing dark now, and so they ate again of the fruit which was both food and drink for them, and then Tarzan rose and, leading Jane Porter to the little bower he had erected, motioned her to go within.

For the first time in hours a feeling of fear swept over her, and Tarzan felt her draw away as though shrinking from him.

To reassure her Tarzan did the only thing he knew. He removed his hunting knife from its sheath and handed it to her hilt first, again motioning her into the bower.

The girl understood, and, taking the long knife, she entered and lay down upon the soft grasses, while Tarzan of the apes stretched himself upon the ground across the entrance.

And thus the rising sun found them in the morning.

When Jane Porter awoke, slowly the circumstances of her position crept one by one into her mind. Then a great wonderment rose in her heart, a mighty wave of thankfulness and gratitude that, though she had been in such terrible danger, yet she was unharmed.

She moved to the entrance of the shelter to look for Tarzan. He was gone. But this time no fear assailed her, for she knew that he would return.

In the grass at the entrance to her bower she saw the imprint of his body where he had lain all night to guard her. She knew that the fact that he had been there was all that had permitted her to sleep in such peaceful security.

She looked up to see his lithe form drop softly from a nearby tree. As he caught her eyes upon him his face lighted with that frank and radiant smile that had won her confidence the day before.

As he approached her Jane Porter's heart beat faster and her eyes brightened as they had never done before at the approach of any man.

He had again been gathering fruit, which he laid at the entrance of her bower. Once more they sat down together to eat.

Jane Porter commenced to wonder what his plans were. Would he take her back to the beach, or would he keep her here? Suddenly she realized that the matter did not seem to give her much concern. Could it be that she did not care!

She could not understand it. Her reason told her that she should be torn by wild anxieties. Instead, her heart was singing.

When they had finished their breakfast Tarzan went to her bower and recovered his knife. Motioning her to follow, Tarzan walked toward the trees at the edge of the arena and, taking her in one strong arm, swung to the branches above.

The girl knew that he was taking her back to her people, and she could not understand the sudden feeling of sorrow which crept over her.

For hours they swung slowly along. Tarzan of the apes did not hurry. He tried to draw out the sweet pleasure of that journey with those dear arms about his neck as long as possible, and so he went far south of the direct route to the beach.

Several times they halted for brief rests, which Tarzan did not need, and at noon they stopped for an hour at a little brook, where they quenched their thirst and ate.

It was nearly sunset when they came to the clearing, and Tarzan, dropping to the ground beside a great tree, parted the tall jungle grass and pointed out the little cabin to her.

She took him by the hand to lead him to it, that she might tell her father that this man had saved her from worse than death; that he had watched over her as carefully as a mother.

But again the timidity of the wild thing in the face of human habitation swept over Tarzan of the apes. He drew back, shaking his head.

The girl came close to him, looking up with pleading eyes. Somehow she could not bear the thought of his going back into the jungle alone.

Still he shook his head, and finally he drew her to him very gently and stooped to kiss her, but first he looked into her eyes and waited to learn if she were pleased or if she would repulse him.

FACTORIES ARE BURNED AT TORONTO

Damage Amounts to $130,000—Firemen Are Criticized.

TORONTO, March 12.—Within three hours after it had broken out, a fire, which originated in the boiler room of George A. Rudd & Co., harness manufacturers, 787 King street west, had totally destroyed this building and swept across a narrow lane to the establishment of Robert Crean & Co., hat manufacturers. Once it obtained a hold in the Crean structure it was impossible to arrest its progress owing to the inflammable material in the building. Both buildings are badly damaged and the contents are a total loss. The damage will amount to $130,000, covered by insurance of $95,000.

Both companies have suffered through large fires within the past few months. A year ago the Rudd building was badly gutted, and in August the Crean company had their building on Balmuto street and its contents totally destroyed.

The work of the firemen on that occasion was severely criticized by Mr. Crean during the recent fire department investigation. He said that the work of the firemen yesterday afternoon was very poor.

Several firemen were in danger when, while they were working in the buildings, the floors gave way.

TO FIGHT FOR ISLAND.

Tiny Speck in Lake Erie Is Centre of Legal Battle.

WINDSOR, March 12.—Fight for a dot of land in Lake Erie, the southernmost possession of Canada, will be made in the Assize Court at Sandwich before Mr. Justice Middleton on March 24. A suit filed by John Napres, of Detroit, against W. R. Goodchild, of Amherstburg, for possession of the Little Sister Island, so named in old county maps of Essex, a few miles southwest of Pelee Island, has revealed that the island is virtually an independent possession of Great Britain.

James Ross, now dead, was the first known owner of the island, which is little more than a danger point for ships on Lake Erie. He gave it to Napres, who L declared to have sold it, 45 years ago, to Goodchild. Since that time Goodchild's fishing crews have been the sole inhabitants of the island, and have to account to no one but Mr. Goodchild.

There are no taxes, for search of the provincial records reveals that the island is attached to no county or political subdivision in the province. The maximum population of the island is 40, at the time when fishing is at its height. At others it drops to the number necessary to care for the nets and lines. The only boats calling at the island are Goodchild's fishing tugs, and they do not operate on fixed schedules. No tourists ever visit the spot in the lake.

Discovery of a mineral, the nature of which is being kept secret by those in the case, is the cause of the present suit, it is said. Goodchild, it is understood, has no bill of sale, but will depend upon a verbal agreement to sell, and the fact that he had held undisturbed possession for 45 years.

Brant Never a Chief.

This year is the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the treaty of the alliance with the ancient confederacy of the Five Nation Indians, since then changed to the Six Nations. A common error is committed almost daily by citizens and press in referring to Joseph Brant as "Chief" Brant. Major Gordon J. Smith, Indian Agent, states that Brant was never a chief and was never so called by the Indians. He was Captain Joseph Brant, and not Chief. His son, however, John Brant, was made a chief.

SHADOWY SHEERNESS.

The shadowy sheerness and the lacy effects of the new modes are really poetically expressed in this frock of cream net, cream batiste machine embroidery which is almost as transparent as the net and quite as much the mode. A contrast as fashionable is found in the tango yellow taffeta sash, peplum and bow at the knees. The broad hip line is given by the double peplum of taffeta and machine embroidery, while shirrings at knees and ankles make narrowness at the right place.

DENOUNCES HOME RULE.

Grand Master Dane of Orange Lodge Condemns the Inclusion of Ulster.

GUELPH, March 12.—With over 300 delegates present the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario West assembled in annual meeting at the City Hall yesterday afternoon. Grand Master Fred Dane, of Toronto, occupied the chair, and Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, delivered a short address.

Mr. Dane in his address dealt with bilingualism, declaring that if Canada is to be a nation, the polyglot of languages will have to be wedged together by a knowledge of English. Every child in Canada should be taught English to have a fair chance to make a living.

Referring to Home Rule in Ireland, Mr. Dane declared that "we want it clearly and distinctly understood that we are positively opposed to Home Rule. Ulster shall not be sold to keep any political party in power. We oppose the bargain between the Asquith Government and the Nationalists, the price of which is the handing over of a loyal minority to the tender mercies of a party who clamor for separation from the Empire."

Fleet Street, London, generally is interested in the announcement that Viscount Mountmorres has been appointed to a curacy in the Isle of Wight. There was no more popular journalist than "Monty," as he was known to his intimates, and he was certainly one of the "livest" reporters on the London press.

"Monty" has had an extraordinarily-varied career, and his love of travel and adventure has led him into many remote corners of the globe. His father was murdered during the Irish agrarian war of 1880, and it was while acting as A.D.C. to the Governor of Jamaica at the time of the Kingston earthquake in 1907 that he received the thanks of the Jamaican Government for his services.

SPECIAL CORNER FOR AFTER DINNER READERS

ABEL'S REBELLION

How "He Made Good"

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Abel Durham had lived for years at Miss Pollock's boarding house and had patiently eaten the dishes that were set before him till one Sunday morning he revolted at the usual corned beef hash or bacon and eggs. He declined to eat her breakfast and sought Miss Pollock and gave notice that he would leave. He gave, among other reasons for his doing so, that he was about to be married.

Anastasia Pollock's head went up proudly. Fire came to her blue eyes. "Biddy," she said smoothly, "ask Mrs Jasper if she will have some more corned beef hash!"

* * * * * * *

Abel Durham pattered down the brownstone steps of his boarding place and wandered aimlessly to the corner, where he waited for a car. His eye glanced slyly back at Miss Pollock's comfortable abode, and he stifled a sigh as he thought of its many good qualities, its homelike atmosphere and its home cooked food, and to one who had been a dweller in boarding houses during twenty years of city life, Miss Pollock's house was a pleasant refuge. But the monotony of the daily meals jarred upon him.

Each day in the week brought its allotted bill of fare, and there was no wavering from this rule. As her mother had ordered so Miss Anastasia carried on the house when the mantle fell upon her delicate shoulders.

This rebellion of Abel Durham was the outcome of several years of hopeful waiting for a change. Now he had not only given up his pleasant front room with the open fireplace, but he had told Miss Pollock he was to be married. How to make good this last reckless statement was puzzling the usually tranquil mind of the bachelor. Abel Durham had not courted a girl for twenty years, not since he had left Telfleet village to enter business life in the great city.

"I will do it. I've got to make good," said Abel, with a sickly smile, as he boarded his car and rode to the railroad station. He bought a ticket for Telfleet and took his place in the stuffy, cindery coach that the railroad company considered good enough for the little single track Telfleet branch.

"Whoooo-eeee-e-e-ee!" shrieked the engine as it wound away among the hills toward Telfleet.

Abel Durham looked out of the window and noted the familiar landmarks as the train rumbled through villages, over bridges or skirted the river bank in its progress. Suddenly a large mountain overshadowed them.

"Telfleet mountain," murmured Abel without joy in his tones.

Since he had left the home of his boyhood all his family had moved to the far west, so that Abel was not going home to any near relatives. Perhaps there were distant cousins, but it might be they were dead or had forgotten him.

Abel Durham was bound on a singular errand.

He was going back to Telfleet to try to resurrect one of his old romances. He had told Miss Pollock he was to be married, and married he must be. His busy life had left no room for sentiment, and so he perforce must fall back upon the half finished romances of his young manhood. There was pretty Amy Cox. She had given him a pink rose when he left Telfleet and told him she would wait for him—a hundred years if necessary!

Somehow Abel had forgotten all about Amy in the rush of business. They had corresponded for awhile, and now he couldn't remember who had been the first to stop writing.

"Telfleet!" called the brakeman.

The station stage backed down, and the driver yelled to him: "Stage! All—yup!"

Abel climbed into the long, swaying vehicle and rattled around in its emptiness as the big white horses bore them through the village streets at a helter skelter pace.

"Where you want to go?" called the driver from a corner of his mouth.

"Philander Cox's place," replied Abel, turning red.

"Up mountain way," muttered the man as if for his own information.

The stage whirled perilously around the corner by the postoffice and rattled along the road that ran by the river bank. At last they began to climb the mountain toward a white house perched among the oaks.

"Whoa—yup!" called the driver, and Abel paid his fare and dismounted. The stage rattled down the mountain, and Abel went into the yard of the familiar place.

The same boxwood bordered the paths, and the same roses bloomed, and the same bees tumbled in and out of the blossoms. He felt a boy once more as he settled his necktie and started toward the house.

A pretty girl sitting on the steps of the house arose as he approached.

Abel Durham stood with his hat in his hand, his eyes staring at this reincarnation of Amy Cox's youth. How had Amy contrived to remain so youthful? He was suddenly conscious of the bald spot on his head and of the crowsfeet about his fine eyes. At Miss Pollock's table and among his business associates he never thought of his age; in the face of Amy's perpetual youth he felt like Rip Van Winkle.

"Amy, I don't believe you remember me." He smiled tentatively at her.

The girl smiled vaguely and edged toward the front door. "Ma!" she called.

"Well?" cried an impatient voice from within.

"Here's—here's an old gentleman to see somebody," she ended crudely and then fled in the direction of the gate, where a young man in a red necktie was suddenly waiting to take her to drive in a shining new buggy.

"Old gentleman!" Abel Durham turned crimson at the opprobrious term.

The front door opened and a faded little woman came out drying her hands on her gingham apron. She had obviously just concluded washing the Sunday dinner dishes, and she sank into the nearest rocking chair with a weary sigh, removing her apron and tossing it aside all in one swift gesture.

"Howdy do?" she queried without interest as she surveyed Abel's immaculate figure. "Won't you sit down a spell? Pa's over to Westwood today. I guess you're the new preacher from North Telfleet, ain't you?"

Abel Durham stared at her. This faded little gray haired woman was the mother of the girl he had taken for Amy. So this must be Amy. Amy must be married! A chill feeling took possession of his well ordered being, and he suddenly thought of his room at Miss Pollock's, and a great fear assailed him that Miss Anastasia might rent the room to some one else before he returned.

"I'm not the new preacher," he said, with a sickly smile. "I'm Abel Durham. Don't you remember me?"

The woman sat up and peered down at him from Amy Cox's beautiful blue eyes. "Abel Durham!" she gasped at last. "To think of your catching me like this! I'd never have known you—you've grown so fat!"

"Fat?" echoed Abel helplessly.

She laughed with amusement. "Don't you know it? My, don't you remember how thin you used to be? The boys used to call you 'Skinny' Durham. I remember once Jake Fenlow called you that and you struck out at him and you had an awful fight. You licked him, too, although you was such a skinny little fellow! You couldn't lick him now; you're too fat!" laughed Amy.

"I couldn't, eh? What has become of Jake Fenlow?" demanded Abel fiercely.

"I married him," said Amy calmly.

There was a long silence.

"I've got to be going," said Abel suddenly. "I was just looking around the mountain, and I thought I'd drop in and see you."

"Glad to see you. Come in whenever you're passing by," invited Mrs. Fenlow ambiguously. "Jamie, what are you up to in there?" She darted inside the house, and Abel Durham took advantage of her absence to depart.

He hurried down the mountain road, panting and puffing with the unaccustomed exertion. He overtook the shining new buggy and noted with a sickening recollection of his own lost youth that the young man in the red necktie had his arm around pretty Amy's slender waist. He heard the girl giggle as he rushed past them in a cloud of dust raised by his own hurried feet.

Along by the river bank he overtook the stage making its lazy way toward the station, and he buried himself in its musty depths with a sigh of relief. All the way back to the city his mind was busy with plans for the future, so that when in the quiet of the Sunday evening he presented himself at Miss Anastasia Pollock's parlor door he was not only immaculately garbed, but his mind was set in order as well.

Anastasia was reading by the light of a pink shaded lamp, and a pink shawl was thrown about her shoulders, lending a fictitious glow to her pale cheeks. Her fair hair was slightly loosened and softened the sharp outlines drawn by relentless time.

For a moment Abel Durham watched her, a queer little feeling of wanting to protect Anastasia from the storms of life disturbing his heart. Remove Miss Pollock from this boarding house atmosphere, place her in a charming home, let her rest and rest again—why, Anastasia would be handsome! He longed to do it, and the desire had been born in him way back there on the mountain, when he had realized that it was too late to take up the broken threads of youth. The threads of his middle age were interwoven with the threads of Anastasia Pollock's life. Together they would make a fabric of gray and silver, with the rosy thread of romance running through!

"Oh, Mr. Durham!" fluttered Anastasia as he closed the door and came forward.

"I can't go away, Miss Pollock," said Abel firmly.

"You said you were going to be married," murmured Anastasia. "I suppose you'll want to bring the lady here?"

Abel shook his head.

"I shall never marry any one unless you will have me, Miss Pollock, Anastasia, I should say," he said. "I hope you don't mind if I call you Anastasia?"

It took the bewildered Anastasia a half hour to understand that Abel Durham really meant what he said, and then she drooped her tired head and said that Abel might call her anything he liked.

"I'll call you wife, then," said Abel boldly as he kissed her cheek.

And it is a significant fact that the Durhams never will permit a dish of corned beef hash at their cosy breakfast table.

"Hart's River" Not a Defeat.

After years of controversy the name "Hart's River" has been added to the list of South African War fights on the monument on University avenue. The committee in charge of the monument inscription had refused to put it on because, though the Canadians took part in the fight on March 31, 1902, it was considered a defeat, and defeats are not usually recorded on British monuments.

Rev. F. Allan Patterson, M.A., who was a member of the 2nd Canadian Mounted Rifles, had tried to convince the committee that the fight did not end in a defeat to the British, and he at last succeeded.

By way of proof he wrote to Field Marshal Lord Kitchener, and received a reply which enclosed Kitchener's despatch reporting the engagement to the War Office, and in which he definitely says he repulsed the Boer forces.

The committee agreed to put the name on the monument.

CONTENTMENT.

CONTENTMENT is a happy bird,
And many times we fail
In our attempt to sprinkle salt
Upon its nervous tail.
We reach our hand to capture it,
But, lo, it isn't there!
In place of bringing down the prize
We get the bird of care.

To capture it directions come
In neatly printed form.
And one would think it easy were
To take the bird by storm.
Quite carefully we spread our net,
But it is overshy.
The best that we can do is say
We'll land it by and by.

Some tell us if we eat and drink
The proper kind of food
That we can lay our hands upon
A member of the brood.
Some say it is a mental trick
And we can so engage
Our minds that we may view it there
Before us in a cage.

At any rate, we find it is
A most elusive bird
That will not come for smiles or frown
Or for a coaxing word
We cannot hope to own the bird
In full and simple fee.
About the best that we can do
Is view it up a tree.

Something to Speak Of.

A group of proud parents were discussing their youthful prodigies.

"My Mary went into the high school when she was eleven years old."

"My Johnny has caught up three grades already without trying."

"Quite remarkable," commented an older man who hadn't been saying a word, "but do you know my little grandchild had appendicitis before she was three?"

Are more and more applied,

Motors In Far North.

The motor car has invaded the far north and has superseded the dog train as a means of travel. Big, powerful machines of the 50-horse-power type were used, and a speed of nearly a mile a minute was made by them even when traveling through a depth of from six inches to a foot of snow.

Twenty years ago on the First of March next, a well-known resident of this city took out at age 28 a 10 pay 20 year endowment policy for $1,000, No. 43860, in the Sun Life of Canada.

The yearly premium he paid on the participating plan for 10 years only was.. .. ..$ 69.30
The yearly premium he would have paid on the non-participating plan for the 10 years is.. .. 62.25

Extra paid for profits yearly for ten years. $7.05

He received in cash at the end of 20 years, $1,279.25, that is, the $70.50 extra that he paid for profits yielded him $279.25, almost 400 per cent.

Would you not like something like that?

Or, he could draw out $736.45 in cash, which is $43.45 more than all he paid in, and receive a fully paid-up participating policy for life.

You can never obtain such results as these on the non-participating plan unless you die and die early, so that the price will not become too high.

NOT A GOOD JAILER.

Still, the Burman Sentry Was Somewhat In a Quandary.

The warders in Burmese jails are nearly always men from the Punjab and northern India. They are large and muscular, but the principal reason for selecting them is that they are not Buddhists. The Burman is sometimes employed as a warder, but his Buddhist education often causes his prejudices to come in collision with his official duties, as in the case of one warder.

A phoongyee, or Buddhist priest, in jail for stealing, had been placed in solitary confinement for disobeying the prison rules. His influence as a priest had persuaded a Burman warder to procure him some betel nuts, which, being discovered in his possession, caused his punishment.

The stone cell in which the priest was confined had a plank supported at both ends by insertion into slots in the walls. The plank served as a bed, and at night the priest jumped on it again and again in order to force the ends out of the shallow sockets.

The Burman sentry peeped into the aperture of the door and asked him to desist.

The convict replied that he was a priest and, as such, forbidden to sleep upon a raised bed.

By this time he had got the board free and, to disarm the sentry's suspicions, lay down upon it and feigned sleep. The sentry returned to his post, but a few hours later he was alarmed to see the phoongyee walking softly down the passage. He had used the board as a lever to force out two of the bars in the door and had managed to squeeze himself through the aperture.

The sentry, a Buddhist, was embarrassed. To lay violent hands upon the holy convict was out of the question; to allow him to escape would bring punishment upon himself. As the passage doors were locked and the priest safe for the present, the sentry ventured to remonstrate with his charge on the impropriety of his behavior.

The tramp of the relief guard was heard outside. The sentry knelt and implored the priest to return to his cell. The door opened upon the tableau—a uniformed sentry in an attitude of supplication before a convict.

The Punjabese who formed the relief guard, not being Buddhists, had no respect for phoongyees. The convict priest was promptly bundled into a new cell.—Boston Herald.

Led Up to a Fall.

Anticlimax frequently occurs in the literary efforts of natives in India, particularly when they have occasion to petition Europeans for favors. The following is a fair example:

"Will the presence, whose reputation for justice is known from east to west and whose countenance spreads joy among his inferiors, who are as the sands of the seashore in number, graciously deign to take but an instant's notice of him who has the almost delirious honor to name himself as one of the most unworthy among the servants of the protector of the poor, and will the favorite son of the Lord of the universe magnanimously overlook the amazing presumption in asking him for the payment of a bill of two annas for hen feed?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

When a young man asks a girl for her photograph she classifies him at once as a matrimonial possibility.

For the Children

Margaretha Ritschen, a Youthful Traveler.

There recently arrived at Ellis island, the immigrant station in New York, a little girl only four years of age, who had made a journey from faraway Austria all by herself. When she arrived she was in good health and acted as if she enjoyed the attention she attracted. Stitched to her dress was a placard on which was written in several languages the following directions for her welfare: "Please take care of me. I am going to my mamma. Please do not kiss me." The little girl's name is Margaretha Ritschen, and her mamma lives in Kenwood, Senora county, Cal. Before leaving Ellis island little Margaretha had her picture taken. Then she was put on board a train, with her placard still tightly sewn to her dress, and safely reached her mother on the Pacific coast. Wasn't that a long journey for a four-year-old to take? She traversed a part of Europe, sailed over the Atlantic and then crossed the United States from ocean to ocean.

A Magician's Trick.

The magician lifts two pieces of tissue paper from a table, advances toward his audience and asks them to choose one of them to be used in the trick. The choice is made, and he throws the other one down upon the floor. The remaining sheet he holds aloft, then crushes into a little ball, which he holds above his head.

Producing a small Japanese fan from his pocket, he fans the tissue paper ball, with the result that confetti begins to fall from it, to be blown about in the breeze produced by the fan. When the storm is over a pretty bouquet of flowers springs out of the paper. The bouquet is accepted by the conjurer as some fairy gift to him, so he places it in his buttonhole and throws the crushed tissue paper ball upon the floor.

To perform this trick you must have one of the little "spring" bouquets of flowers that may be purchased from any dealer in magicians' supplies. Having the audience select the sheet of paper they wish is simply a little diversion that makes no difference to the conjurer, since he can perform the trick as well with one piece of paper as another.

The small bouquet and an envelope filled with confetti he has palmed in one hand while crushing the paper into a ball. As he fans the ball he permits the confetti to fall out. When the envelope is empty he presses the spring that causes the bouquet to open out.

Who Calls.

This game is played by the whole room. One person is selected as the "lost child" and goes out to be blindfolded, while the others change places. The "lost child" then comes in and some one calls his or her name in a natural tone, she must find the caller and guess who it is, but if she names the wrong person after three times trying, she must play over again. This game is lots of fun, for it is really surprising how just blindfolding a person causes him to lose sense of position and sound. As he feels all over the caller in an effort to find some distinguishing feature, the caller, who acts in pantomime to mislead the lost child, of course not speaking, usually manages to get off some amusing stunts. If he is named correctly he becomes the lost child.

But They Don't Tell Them.

Why shouldn't you speak of private matters when out driving?

Because the horses carry tails (tales).

Temptation.

I don't know if you've ever done
What I am going to tell.
But if you've not it's lots of fun,
Though you'll be scolded well.

It's when a feather bed is made
And ready for the sheet,
All plump and fat and smoothly laid,
So beautiful and neat,

That I can never keep, indeed,
From moving off a bit
And running back at headlong speed
To plunge down into it.

I know it spoils the feather bed—
It must be made again—
And when I see the mess I've made
Of course I'm sorry then.

Yet every time I pass that bed,
As neat as any pin,
My good resolves are quickly fled,
And I plunge head first in.

Two Are Canadians.

Lady Mount Royal and Strathcona, as the daughter of the late Lord Strathcona, will be styled by virtue of the second creation under which she succeeds, is the seventeenth peeress of the United Kingdom in her own right in addition to three lady holders of Scottish titles. Strangely enough, two of the seventeen imperial peeress are of Canadian origin. The other is Lady Macdonald of Earnscliffe, one of the oldest members of the group. Lady Macdonald is the holder of the only new creation since the death of Viscountess Hambledon. She is the widow of Sir John Macdonald.

Sponges as Drugs.

Sponges are classed by Canadian customs authorities with drugs, dyes, chemicals, and patent medicines. The total value, however, of this class of imports in Quebec is given as $29,158 for 1911 and $10,905 for 1912.

Played With Matches; Child Dead.

QUEBEC, March 13. — The four-year-old son of Philias Morissette, of St. Evariste, Beauce County, met a horrible death at Morissette station, near St. George, Wednesday. The youngster and his mother were on a visit to Mr. Morissette's brother, who keeps a hotel at Morissette station. Whilst his mother was upstairs the little fellow found a box of matches and ignited his clothing. The flames were extinguished, but not before the little fellow had been fatally burned. He passed away after 12 hours of extreme suffering.

Six Months For Escaping.

BELLEVILLE, March 13. — Ralph Deshane was sentenced here by Judge Deroche to the Central Prison for being concerned in the robbing of a house on Nov. 17 last. While being conducted from the court room to the cells, Deshane bolted and made good his escape. He went to New York State but returned Wednesday, was arrested at Trenton and taken to the county jail. An additional six months was added to his sentence yesterday morning for escaping.

Eats Quart of Pickles a Meal.

OAKLAND, Ore., March 13. — A strange idosyancrasy, aided and abetted by a capable appetite, has been found in a man living three miles south of Oakland, who eats a quart of dill pickles at every meal. Three-quarters of a gallon is his daily capacity.

Kingston Has Mean Woman.

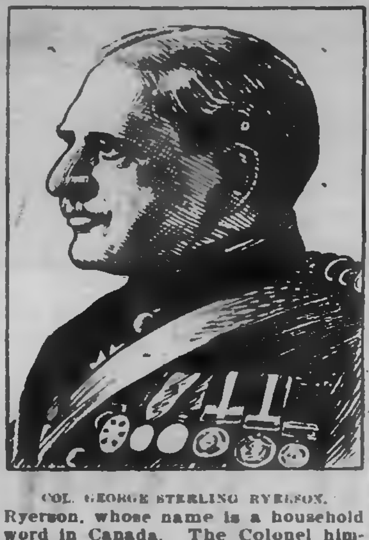
KINGSTON, March 13.—The police are looking for the meanest woman in the city. She gave William Tveneer, a blind salesman, a piece of paper when making a ten-cent purchase and got change for a dollar. Tveneer took the paper for a dollar bill.

HEADS U. E. LOYALISTS

COL. G. STERLING RYERSON IS AN ARDENT IMPERIALIST.

Presidency of Association Goes For Third Time to Nephew of Historian—Col. Ryerson Has Been a Soldier, a Legislator and Writer—Founded Red Cross Society In Canada and Pioneered Radium.

The presidency of the United Empire Loyalists' Association has again been conferred for the third time on a representative of one of the best known Loyalist families in Canada, Colonel G. Sterling Ryerson. Col. Ryerson is a grandson of Colonel Joseph Ryerson, who was an officer of the Prince of Wales New Jersey Volunteers, and who won distinction in the Revolutionary war of the United States, and in the war of 1812, a U. E. Loyalist of the best type. He is also a nephew of the noted historian of the Loyalists, Dr. Ryerson, whose name is a household word in Canada. The Colonel himself has an admirable record, as founder of the Red Cross Association in Canada, and as a volunteer in the Northwest Rebellion, and in South Africa. He was for a time a member of the Legislature of Ontario, and as a writer on historical and professional subjects is well known. He was one of the pioneers in the use of radium in Canada, and is also a senator of Toronto University. Of historical and medical works from his pen may be mentioned: "The Aftermath of a Rebellion," "Soldier and Surgeon," "Experiences in South African War," "Color Blindness and Railway Employes," and "Medical Uses of Radium." Colonel Ryerson is also a member of many professional societies in England, Canada and the United States, and is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts, London; of the College of Surgeons of American; of the American Academy of Ophthalmology, and a Knight of Grace of the Order of St. John and Jerusalem.



COL. GEORGE STERLING RYERSON.

Colonel Ryerson was Canadian Commissioner for the Red Cross Society in South Africa, and British Commissioner at Lord Roberts' headquarters. He took part in the military display in connection with Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee; was a guest at King Edward's garden party in 1907, and has been presented to King George and Queen Mary, and at the Austrian court.

Queens Who Could Work.

Many of the queens of Europe could earn their own living if the necessity demanded it.

Queen Elizabeth of Belgium possesses a doctor's diploma of the University of Leipzig. Besides, she is an excellent musician and plays the piano and violin with great skill.

Queen Mary of England paints, sings and is extremely clever with her needle. Queen Victoria Augusta of Germany is a specialist with the camera and produces a special kind of art photo. Queen Wilhelmina of Holland paints miniatures and porcelain, while Queen Maud of Norway, is a distinguished playwright, using the pseudonym of Graham Irving. She is also a competent bookbinder, dressmaker and painter.

Carmen Sylva (Queen Elizabeth of Roumania), is a world famous poetess and novelist. Helena, Queen of Italy, has jokingly remarked that in case of need she could easily earn a high salary in the music halls of London or New York as an expert swimmer and riflewoman.

Influence of the King.

Evidence accumulates of the growing influence of the Sovereign with all ranks of the nation. One sign is the rush to Court this season. Not even in the Coronation year, 1911 were the applications received by the Lord Chamberlain so numerous.

It has been found necessary to issue a statement that no further applications to attend Court this year can possibly be considered.

There will be four Courts in all for the reception of the general circle, two taking place before Easter, and the others at the end of May and the beginning of June.

At each about two thousand ladies will be received.

An effort is being made to induce the King to hold an extra Court about the middle of June, but the many engagements of Their Majesties for June will make this most difficult.

Village Slid Into River.

A serious landslide occurred recently in Kelani Valley, Colombo, the side of a hill containing a small village falling bodily into the river. Twenty-five inhabitants, men, women and children, were drowned. There have been almost unprecedented rains in this part of the island, higher flood levels being reached than in 1904, hitherto the greatest flood year.

At the regular March meeting of the Town Council on Monday night, March 2nd, the clerk reported that judgment had been entered in favor of the village in the suit of T. Pizer for his income tax of 1912 and 1913 taxes, and the clerk was instructed that he be notified that further proceedings would be taken if the judgment was not paid by March 10th. Mr. Pizer has since paid the amount of the judgment. The clerk also reported that the suits against A. Paquet and F. Butters for 1913 income tax had been paid by the defendants, with costs. S. Wright asked for a rebate on his taxes of $150 assessment. No action taken.

T. Callan asked for rebate of $3.12 on income tax of 1912, and on notice of Boylan and Scott the clerk was instructed to rebate the $3.12 if Callan had paid taxes on real estate in 1912.

The assessor reported that the C. P. R. had not furnished a list of employees for income assessment purposes, and the clerk was instructed to write the company giving them ten days in which to comply with the assessors' request.

Mr. Gilligan, of Smith Falls, applied for the position of scavenger. His letter was filed for further consideration.

The treasurer was instructed to notify all in arrears for 1913 taxes that the amounts will be placed in court for collection if not paid by the 29 of March.

Ray Phillips asked for permission to put a gasoline pump under the sidewalk and his request was granted.

The treasurer was instructed to return Mrs. Forsythe's arrears of taxes against property.

The clerk was instructed to notify Mr. Jas. Thompson that he must erect a guard around the ruins of his store to protect the public.

Pay sheet No. 3 was passed, and the Council adjourned.

Mrs. Pickering spent last week with friends in Lindsay and Peterboro.

GOVERNMENT WILL HEAR ANY COMPLAINTS GROWING OUT OF REPORT ON THE INVESTIGATION

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—In view of a letter that has appeared regarding the Trent Canal report, etc., in your paper, let me say that anyone who feels aggrieved in any way regarding the Report of Evidence on Investigation, has every opportunity for explanation or redress. It is in this way. It is the time-honoured right of the subject, when voting not only supplies, but any item of supply, to bring before the House of Commons and his Majesty, any matter whatever. It is a peculiar privilege which probably few people know of, but it is taken advantage of continually by members and gives more room for debate than all other causes combined. We will be in supply day and night for at least three weeks yet, and all that anyone aggrieved has to do is to come down here or get someone here to voice his complaint. In a word, his Majesty (in the persons of his government and Governor-General) stand ready to hear all complaints in open parliament, and no one need remain for 24 hours under the shadow of injustice without being heard. Of course it is thoroughly recognized that many of the names appearing in the report as "laborers," are not the work of the owners of the names. The public understands that. But how did they get there? That question must be answered by those who handed in the pay-sheets. The Minister will proceed to follow the whole matter up to its conclusion. That the report is not partisan is proved by the fact that Conservatives as well as Liberals, have been suspended. The introduction of party politics into the affair is to be deprecated. No one party has a monopoly of honesty and the free-for-alls have in reality no politics. Hoping that this information may be of service to anyone who wants a chance to explain.

I remain,
Yours,
J. H. Burnham.

REAL ESTATE DEALERS WILL SOON BE BUSY

Springtime Brings With it the Desire to Move.

FEW VACANT HOUSES.

With spring coming, the question of moving is uppermost in the minds of a large number of people. They generally look for a change of location every spring and for some unknown reason they get the moving habit. Evidently they do not move by any means to better themselves. Too long in one section of the city gets monotonous for some, and this results in a change. Some claim it is cheaper to move than to house clean, therefore they move. Some are of a nomadic turn of mind, and never find what they seek after. During the winter months they live in small houses curtailing all possible expenditure, but with the approach of spring they move to a more commodious dwelling. This results in a rush for the real estate dealer.

But it is not an easy job to find suitable houses. Very few houses are vacant at the present time.

VILLAGE FOR DEFECTIVES

Toronto Will Colonize Her Sub-normal School Children

TORONTO, March 14.—The city of Toronto is to establish a village populated only by such children as can only be taught handicraft that will make them self-supporting. Necessarily supervisors will also live in the village. There will be stores, factories, postoffice, places of recreation and amusement, etc. It will be a community of contented, happy children.

This is Controller Jesse O. McCarthy's scheme for the care of sub-normal children and is almost certain to be carried out without delay.

"The expense of establishing and maintaining this village will not be greater than that required by one of the largest public schools in the city," said Controller McCarthy.

"This will be the system for segregation: Pupils of the public schools who are normal but somewhat slow in learning are now being taught in ungraded classes in the schools, with a view to assisting them in promotion to higher grades. Children who enter the public schools and are found to be so mentally defective that they cannot be educated in these ungraded classes will be assigned to special classes, where training in handicraft will be specialized. These children for the special classes will be collected each morning and taken to their school rooms. They will be returned to their homes each day. Children who are not susceptible to any education at all, except in handicraft, will be educated in the village established for them.

"The only children who will be committed to the village will be delinquents passed through the juvenile court, and there a committee, assisted by a psychologist, will pass upon such commitments. The other children who go to the village will simply be admitted at the request of their parents. Only delinquents will be compelled to go to the village.

"The necessary legislation for this care of the mentally defectives is now being arranged," Controller McCarthy said. "Before I cease to be a controller I expect to see the village established, and Toronto's plan for care of mentally defectives become an example to other places having the same problem."

BEWARE OF THESE.

Any person asking for charity on behalf of the poor of St. Paul's Church is doing so without authority.

GIRL CHARGED WITH BIGAMY

First Husband Supposed to be Dead is Much Alive

WOODSTOCK, March 14.—Alva Britch, an 18-year-old girl of Ingersoll, appeared in the police court here yesterday morning on a charge of bigamy. She was married three years ago to a man named Britch of this city, and again on Feb. 27 last to Joseph Paradis of Niagara Falls, whom she met in Toronto. Her first husband, whom she believed dead, left her some time ago, and was last heard of at Otterville. She was let off on suspended sentence on the promise that she would live under her mother's charge.

Arkona For Radials.

ARKONA, Ont., March 14. — A monster Hydro radial meeting will be held in Arkona on Wednesday evening, March 18. The following speakers will be present: His Worship Mayor Graham of London, and Ald. T. J. Hannigan of Guelph, secretary Hydro-Electric Union of Ontario.

Paris is to have a childrens' court to be presided over by M. Flory, one of the most prominent judges in France.

EXECUTIVE AND PUBLIC MEETING

Council of Women to Hear Report on Social Service Congress.

An executive meeting of the local Council of Women, will be held in the Public Library building on Friday, March 20th, at 3.30 p.m. At four o'clock, a public meeting will be held, at which Mrs Rollins will give a report of the Social Service Congress at Ottawa, and Mrs Middleton will give her paper on Supervised Playgrounds. It is especially hoped that the representatives and members of all affiliated societies will be present.

FRATERNALLY YOURS

Mr. Oscar Rumple, of Berlin, grand chancellor commander of the Knights of Pythias, will pay an official visit to the local lodge No. 39, on Tuesday March 24th. The Knights intend to have a big night on the occasion and some ten new members will be initiated.

Field night will be held by the Peterborough Lodge of Oddfellows No. 111, on Thursday, March 19th. It is expected that 300 Oddfellows will be here from the surrounding lodges, namely: Millrook, Lakefield, Pontypool, Sterling and Havelock, and all the degrees will be exemplified. The meeting will commence at seven o'clock, so it is urgently requested that all members and especially the members of the degree teams, be on hand early. After the meeting the local lodge will banquet its guests.

The W.O.W. Sherwood Forest Camp, No. 50, meets on Monday night to discuss amendments to the by-laws.

The annual convention of the Woodmen of the World will take place in London, Ont., on Wednesday, March 18th. Mr. A. Graham will represent the local lodge, while a local degree team will compete for the prize to be awarded to the best degree team in Ontario. Their meeting last Monday night was very enthusiastic. Five members were initiated while 15 applications were received. These will be admitted at their next regular meeting to be held Monday evening, March 23rd.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., Master Workman of the local lodge of the A.O.U.W., No. 135, leaves Wednesday for Toronto to attend the meeting of the Grand Lodge.

The Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East, meets in Lindsay on Wednesday, March 18th. The representation from here will be:—Mr. Wm. Noftall, L.O.L., No. 80, Mr. C. Lufmann, L.O.L. No. 1175, Mr. J. H. Spence, L.O.L., No. 50, Mr. H. Stinson, city district, and Mr. E. Reid, county lodge.

Final arrangements are being made for the celebration of the anniversary of L.O.L. No. 50, on Monday, March 23rd.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians will receive Holy Communion in a body to-morrow morning at eight o'clock, in St. Peter's Cathedral. They will also be present in a body in the evening when Rev. J. J. O'Brien will deliver an appropriate sermon.

No doubt it will be of interest to local Knights of Columbus to know that Mr. James O'Neill, featuring in the fine film depicting the story of "Monte Cristo," which was shown at the Royal Theatre this week, is a very prominent Knight. A recent issue of the Columbia spoke very highly of the success of Mr. O'Neill.

The S.O.E. had a good turnout at the meeting of the White Rose Degree. After the business the Stripes defeated the Spots in a game of carpet ball. The Red Rose Degree meeting will include an entertainment in charge of Vice-President [illegible] Frick.

A wire received from Warden E. J. Fogarty, of Michigan, Ind., this afternoon, was to the effect that Jas. Maloney, the man in custody here was not the man wanted in Michigan for murder.

Maloney will appear in court on Monday on the charge of vagrancy. With the capture of the wrong man, the local department miss the opportunity of reaping the $100 reward.

SHARP CONFLICT OVER TOLLS REPEAL BILL IS EXPECTED

While Most Members of U. S. Congress Agree That President Wilson Will Have His Way In Removing Discriminatory Schedule Hard Struggle Is Expected.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Administration leaders in the Senate and House yesterday set themselves for a quick and decisive battle next week over the repeal of the toll exemption clause of the Panama Canal Act, confident that President Wilson's plea for reversal of policy in the interests of foreign relations would be heeded.

In the Senate, after informal conference with Democratic Senators and a talk with President Wilson, Senator Owen of Oklahoma introduced a repeal bill similar to the Sims bill pending in the House in order to have the issue placed immediately squarely before the committee on interoceanic canals. It also was determined to hasten consideration of the measure by this committee that it may be ready for action in the Senate as soon as it is disposed of in the House.

Representative Adamson, chairman of the House committee on interstate commerce, who is leading the fight for the President's plea in the lower body, conferred with Senators during the day, giving assurances that the repeal bill would be passed by a comfortable margin by the end of next week.

Senate leaders were actuated to begin vigorous action before the House completes its work on the matter because of a realization that while ultimate passage of the repeal is assured, there will be a hard fight in the committee on interoceanic canals, which has jurisdiction over the bill.

Senator Chilton is counted on by the administration leaders to vote for a flat repeal measure since the President has flatly declared that there must be no compromise in settling the issue.

Should the majority report the bill unfavorably, Senator Owen and others of the minority will submit a minority report, upon which the Senate would be asked to act.

Much discussion prevailed in the Senate yesterday as to the outcome of the issue, it being generally conceded that the repeal bill would pass.

EXPRESS COMPANY DECIDES TO QUIT DELIVERY FIELD

Latest Parcel Post Development is Too Much For U.S. Concern

NEW YORK, March 14.—The directors of the United States Express Co. decided yesterday, without a dissenting vote, to wind up the company's affairs and quit the delivery field. The short meeting indicated that the matter had been well thrashed out before the directors got together, and afterward no comment was made on their action by the board. This resolution was made public by President D. I. Roberts:

"Resolved, that, pursuant to the power and authority conferred upon the board of directors of the United States Express Co. by its articles of association, the board unanimously declares that it is for the best interests of the company that the company be dissolved as soon as may be, without awaiting the expiration of its term of existence; and that its business and affairs be settled up and finally adjusted as promptly as may be done. The president is directed to inform the shareholders of the company of said action of the board."

After explaining that it was understood a year ago that if the fight seemed hopeless he was to wind up the company, President Roberts said:

"If the parcel post had been continued as it was started and the weight limit of packages had not been increased and a severe cut in rates not ordered, the United States Express Co. could have continued to do business profitably. The Interstate Commerce Commission's order for a sixteen per cent. reduction in charges was too much for the company to bear. And the fact that heavier and heavier packages were placed on the parcel post list seemed to indicate that the Government service would ultimately eat into the express company's business much further than had been originally foreseen."

YOUNG MEN'S BIBLE CLASS OF GILMOUR MEMORIAL HOLD BANQUET

The third annual banquet of the Young Men's Bible Class of Gilmour Memorial Baptist church, was held last night in the Sunday school room. A large number attended and partook of the many good things provided by the ladies. The Sunday school was very prettily decorated with flags, etc.

Mr. C. E. Moore as toast-master, welcomed the many friends and thanked the ladies for the dainty spread.

The first toast "The King," was proposed by Mr. George Adams, and honored in the usual manner.

Solo—Mr. Asa Huycke.

The regular monthly meeting of the Elementary Graded Union will be held in the Charlotte Street lecture hall on Tuesday, March 17th, at 8 o'clock. The new graded lessons will be discussed and beginners' and primary lessons will be taught. All teachers of elementary classes are invited to attend.

SHAMROCK GIRL CLIMBED NEW TURNBULL BUILDING TO DISPOSE OF THE GREEN

The new Turnbull building was graced with the presence of the first lady this morning, when a young girl giving her name as Miss Grady, surmounted all obstacles in her efforts to dispose of her shamrocks and climbed to the top of the building.

This remarkable feat was accomplished by means of ladders, elevator, and other means of transportation. The sale of shamrocks among the workers of the building was very brisk, owing to the plucky attempt and nerve of the Shamrock Girl.

AT HOME.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the George Street Church will hold an At Home on Tuesday, March 17th, from 4 to 6.30 p.m., at the home of Mrs. James Kendry, 754 Water Street. Silver collection to go towards the Memorial Fund for the late Mrs. Platt.

A SERMON ON THE INSIDE OF THE CUP

Special Services Commence at Murray Street Church on Sunday.

Have you read "The Inside of the Cup," by Winston Churchill? Do you want to hear this book discussed? Rev. C. G. Smith, of Belleville, will be the speaker at a series of special services in Murray Strreet Church next week. Mr. Smith will preach at both services to-morrow. His subject at the evening service will be The Inside of the Cup.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, MARCH 14, 1914.

GOOD DWELLINGS ARE NECESSARY.

IN ORDER to cope with the slum problem and to improve housing conditions in Toronto, Dr. Hastings makes monthly reports to the Board of Health. He has stated that immediate action must be taken to improve conditions. Some recent police court cases there, revealed the fact that the by-law regulating the number of persons to a house or building was being broken.

We wish to draw the attention of Peterborough citizens to what is going on in Toronto so that measures may be adopted to avoid as much as possible, slum and bad housing conditions in this city. With the passage of years some dwellings will naturally become unfit for habitation unless properly altered and improved: Landlords have had from time immemorial a horror of improvements, so that it is essential that inspections and reports should be made as often as possible and that the necessary powers be granted to those in authority to secure the ends in view. Is Peterborough doing as much as it should for the housing of its people ?

SOME FACTS ABOUT CRIME.

AN INTERESTING document is the annual report of the Penitentiary just published. It shows that among its inmates are 48 persons sent up for life, of these two are females. The total number of inmates is 516, including 11 women. The nationalities of the prisoners are as follows: Canadians, 305; Wales, 2; Scotland, 11; Ireland. 22; France, 5; Sweden, 1; United States, 51; Italy, 34; Austria, 10; India, 1; Germany, 5; Russia, 7; Turkey, 1; Denmark, 1; Australia, 2; Greece, 1; Newfoundland, 1 ."Toronto the Good" contributes the largest number of inmates, 90 having been sent from there, which is more than any other two whole counties. According to social relations, 193 are arried, 8 are widowers, and 315 are single. Six prisoners are over 70 years of age, while 36 are under 20 years.

Classified according to habits, 184 are very temperate, 118 are total abstainers, and 206 are intemperate. This portion of the return is regarded as remarkable in the light of the oft repeated statement that drink is the cause of 90 per cent. of crime. The return showing the scholastic attainments of the prisoners shows that 444 men and 2 women can read and write well; 60 men and nine women are wholly illiterate, and one male prisoner can read only. In the list of occupations nearly every trade and profession is represented, there being even a news reporter.

There are 42 farmers; 24 clerks, 21 teamsters, 181 laborers, and 16 cooks. The last figures are remarkable when compared with the small percentage of the total population which cooks form.

The law is represented by three lawyers, one detective and one policeman.

A TIMELY WORD TO BRITISH INVESTORS.

SIR ALGERNON FIRTH, speaking to the Associated Chambers of Commerce the other day, spoke highly of the Canadian Railway Commission and of Canada as a field for investment.

> "It is the fashion to say Canada is going too fast, but with that I do not agree. The possibilities of the country are unlimited. The sums they are receiving for crops and minerals must enable them very soon to discharge any obligations, and the need of the rest of the world for all the products Canada can provide, even at high prices, justifies the hope that British investors will not close their pockets too tightly."

Verily Englishmen are beginning to have some accurate knowledge of what Canada is worth. It is no longer a great barren tract of ice and snow, but a country possessing all the necessary resources to make it a great country. What Canada needs is capital for ligitimate development. Britain can supply this, and, while assisting to build up Canada and the Empire will receive good interest on her investments. Sir Algernon's words are timely, in that they will help to reduce the slackening of British investments in Canada. Confidence in Canada is justified by her products.

MORE HOT STUFF FOR MONTREAL.

HON. W. S. FIELDING is going to start another daily newspaper in Montreal, says a report. Here's another job for Sir Hugh Graham. No sooner does he squeeze out the Montreal Witness, get control of the Herald and combine it with the Telegraph, than Hon. Bill knocks the whole coup on the head by announcing the launching of another evening Liberal paper. Sir Hugh now controls the evening paper situation in Montreal, but that well edited and original paper, the Montreal Mail, upholds real Liberalism in that city pretty well. Hon. Bill wants to dish up hash of his own cooking, but the trouble is Sir Hugh kicks at the grub and wants to boss things himself. However, we'll see what will happen in the newspaper soup kitchen in Montreal.

WASTE.

WASTE IS A THEME that we are all of us prepared to be indignant about, except where it touches us most nearly—in our own living. Take the case of Valparaiso University. The students at Valparaiso have excellent fare at 7 cents, at 8 1-3 cents, at 9½ cents the meal. How can this be done ? Vice-President Kinsey, of that university, is an expert buyer. By virtue of long experience he has become skilled in eliminating waste. That is the secret of the economies possible to a great corporation. "These organizations succeed," as Charles Steinmetx, the master electrician, puts it, "because in organization there is economy." Half a hundred boarding houses, with all their competition, could not feed those students anywhere near so cheaply. In co-operation, even to the uttermost kitchen, lies the hope of combating the high cost of living. The way of progress is the path of co-operation, leading to the ultimate death of waste.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE MONTREAL STAR devotes more than a column of its front page to the Trent Canal scandal. The confessions brought out in evidence under cross-examination seem to have angered the press of Canada, which continues to pour out bitter accusations on the whole affair.

THE ONTARIO Government has offered $25,000 for the discovery of radium. We haven't found any around this office, but some canal fishermen got hold of an article nearly as good.

A MAN who stole a ten cent doll has been sent to jail for ten days. Not a hundred years ago several hangings took place at Niagara jail for stealing trifles like sheep. With all our progress we have not made so much advancement as we sometimes think.

OTTAWA IS having trouble with its water. Why not give the city a pill ?

HISTORICAL NOTE of 1950. Ottawa still having trouble with its water.

WHEN OTTAWA has drunk all that dirty water what will she do ? Nothing. Residents will either be dead or immune by that time.

TORONTO HAS a lot of sore spots, is very touchy on all of them and one is her police. Everybody there thought they had played a good joke on Editor Farr, but second thoughts made them see the covert attack on their poor little police force. Now they are trying to prove Editor Farr not only drunk but very drunk and the general public are left in a neutral position with a strong tendency to believe Editor Farr in spite of them.

Current Corruption.

Hamilton Spectator.

Under the British flag corruption may begin, but it cannot make much headway before it is ended.

We Prefer to Live Now.

Montreal Mail.

An American professor has just translated a Buddhist poem written one thousand years ago. After reading the poem, one concludes that there was no particular advantage in living one thousand years ago.

Salisbury's Compliment.

London Chronicle.

The Bishop of London on one occasion when he went to Buckingham Palace, told the King that he had passed Lord Salisbury in an anteroom, but the latter did not seem to know him. "Oh," said King Edward, "Lord Salisbury never recognizes anyone," and going to a bureau he took out a new portrait of himself and handed it to the bishop saying. "What do you think of this " "A very excellent likeness, sire," said the bishop. "When I showed it to Salisbury," said the King, "he looked hard at it and then said: 'Poor old Buller ! I wonder if he's as stupid as he looks.' "

What Will the Climax Be ?

Montreal Gazette.

The turkey trot, the bunny hug, the grisly bear, the tango, the hypnotique and now the onion glide ! Strongr and stronger grows the dance as the days glide by.

Useful Work Still Ahead of Him.

Ottawa Free Press.

Sir J. P. Whitney, who appeared almost gone a few days ago, has survived his old opponent, Sir George Ross, and may prove to have days of useful work still ahead of him.

Diplomacy and Truth.

Galt Reformer.

"In diplomacy," says Sir Edward Grey, "the difficulty is not to tell the truth, but to get the truth believed when you have told it." If this is to be interpreted in the light of Aesop's fable, it throws doubt on the veracity of former diplomats.

Time Has to go Some.

Montreal Mail.

Citizens of Regina propose to put the clock ahead one hour during the summer. Time has got to go some to keep pace with the hustling west.

Liberal Paper Always Opposed It.

Huntington (Que.) Gleamer.

When the project of building the Grand Trunk Pacific was laid before the country, the Gleamer condemned it, and did, week after week, what little was in its power to rouse the electors to the danger that threatened the country. For doing so the Gleamer was styled a traitor to the Liberal party. The leaders of the Liberal association of the county of Huntington seriously considered starting a paper to be what they call truly Liberal. Sir Wilfrid was consulted and promised the help of the government to provide opposition to the Gleamer. The plan fell through on finding that the bulk of the farmers were behind the Gleamer, and would not give it up for a government organ. In the light of what has happened during the past ten years, would it not have been better for the Liberal party to have stood faithful to the pledges given in its platform of 1893 ?

Canada's Progress.

Mail and Empire.

The revenue of the Dominion for the 11 months of the fiscal year to the end of February was $14,000,000 larger than in the corresponding period of the previous year. That is a substantial and gratifying gain.

Is It True ?

Mail and Empire.

Mr. Evanturel hints that "there are others." If he can prove this he may not increase his popularity in the Legislature, but he will be doing a service to the province.

A Boost For Nickle, a Knock For Whig.

St. Thomas Daily Times.

The Kingston Whig endeavors to make a point against Mr. W. F. Nickle, M.P., who opposes further government assistance towards the completion of the C.N.R. It says that Sir William Mackenzie of the C.N.R. company, is not inclined to be favorably disposed towards Kingston with regard to railway facilities in view of the stand of its member. When some one approaches him with regard to the establishment at Kingston of a terminal so that coal could be shipped via Kingston from Oswego, N.Y., he is reported to have said that the C.N.R. could hardly be expected to consider projects that would benefit the city when its representative was inclined to be antagonistic to the interests of that road. The Whig is ready, it would seem, to place the selfish interests of Kingston against the wider interests of Canada as a whole.

SATURDAY

By Walt Mason

To Saturday it would be hard to hand too much of honest praise; it certainly inspires the bard to put up fifty-seven lays. All days are slick, when rightly viewed, with optimistic heart and eyes, but Saturday seems like a dude among a bunch of hayseed guys. It is the best of all the days, it sees the long week's labor done; the workers go their homeward ways, each man lopsided with his mon. There's nothing makes us more serene than knowing we have bravely wrought to earn the package of long green which to the wives and kids we've brought. And when the week end whistles blow, announcing now a day of rest, what peace and comfort do we know, who faced our tasks and did our best ! Then the long night of perfect rest, and Sunday sees us at the kirk, to hear about a country blest, the home of those who pray and work. So let us work, and let us pray, and do the thing that's to our hand, and when is gone life's fleeting day, we'll caper in the Happy Land.

Birthdays Note

SATURDAY, MARCH FOURTEENTH

Thomas Cooper Boville, Deputy Minister of Finance and the man who actually figures out the Dominion's surpluses or deficits, enters upon his fifty-fifth year to-day. He has risen to his present position from humble beginnings, starting in as a junior clerk when quite a young man. His appointment as Deputy Minister was made eight years ago. Mr. Boville's chief distinction outside the achievement just recorded is his skill as a rifle shot. He was quite a famous marksman in his younger days and on several occasions had a place on the Canadian teams for Wimbledon and Bisley. Once he came very nearly winning the Queen's prize and he still cherishes the special badge which was given him then.

SUNDAY, MARCH FIFTEENTH

Colonel Marie Joseph Eugene Fiset, who has been Deputy Minister of Militia and Defence for the past eight years, is celebrating his fortieth birthday to-day. He belongs to a distinguished French-Canadian family and is a native of Rimouski. Studying medicine, he obtained his doctor's degree at an early age and began to practice in his home town. But he had a love for soldiering and the South African War gave him his opportunity. He went to the seat of conflict with the Army Medical Corps and did splendid work, being mentioned three times in despatches. On his return to Canada, he remained with the Militia Department and gradually rose to his present position as Deputy Minister and vice-president of the Militia Council.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

The local Board of Education is going to make every possible effort this year to have a technical school established and erected in Port Arthur.

Severe fighting, in which the Italian troops killed 263 Arabs, took place on Wednesday in the neighborhood of the oasis of Seuetina, Tripoli.

An application for pardon for the men convicted in the dynamite conspiracy trials in Indianapolis will be presented in a few days to President Wilson.

There is a report current at Orangeville that many of the hogs in Pilkington Township are dying from a disease which the farmers call rheumatism.

Magistrate Jelfs, yesterday morning opened a letter sent to him by post, in which the writer, signing himself as J. A. K., threatened to murder him within 24 hours.

President Greenfield, of the Alberta Association of Rural Municipalities, says he will ask the Legislature to subsidize country physicians, so that their charges may be reduced.

Brockville people feel nervous owing to the report that the G. T. R. has purchased a large tract of land in Prescott for the purpose of constructing a roundhouse and car shop.

There seems little probability of legislation this session at Ottawa granting the demands of the interprovincial conference last fall for an increase in the Federal subsidies to the provinces.

More Public Buildings Closed.

LONDON, March 14.—The vandalism of the militant suffragettes has caused the closing of a great many public buildings in addition to those which locked their doors Tuesday. The Victoria and Albert Museum, the crypt and galleries of St. Paul's Cathedral, the royal stables attached to Buckingham Palace and the Clarter House were among those affected.

Premier Asquith announced that he was making an enquiry into the question into the best way to protect national art treasures.

Memory of Fels Honored.

NEW YORK, March 14.—Several hundred persons attended a mass meeting in Cooper Union last night to honor the memory of Joseph Fels, the millionaire single tax advocate who died last month in Philadelphia. The meeting was under the auspices of the People's Institute. George F. Peabody presided.

A FAMOUS ENGLISH SOCCER TEAM

The Blackburn Rovers, leaders of the First Division of the English League, whose elimination from the Cup Competition in the third round by Manchester City was the surprise of the round. Blackburn Rovers have won the trophy five times since 1883-4, but have only won the League championship on one occasion, that being in the season of 1911-12.

LINDSAY AND JUNIOR PETES WERE TIED AT 4-4

Small Crowd Witnessed Great Game-- Locals Behind at the Half

A handful of ardent fans were scattered throughout Brock Street rink last night to see the L. C. I. and a local picked team do battle.

The Lindsay septette came via the Port McNichol route, and as a slight delay was experienced on that line, the game did not commence till nine thirty. It was well worth waiting for, however, and in fact it might be truly stated that its equal has not been witnessed for some time. The final score was a tie, 4-4.

The pace was terrific from the very outset, and it was fifteen minutes before a counter had been registered. McIlroy doing the trick on a pass from the side. During the rest of the half Lindsay added two more, while the Petes were unable to find Williamson's weak spot at all.

After the rest period the Petes came to life and in ten minutes had the game tied up. Rush after rush by both teams failed to break the tie, and for a while it looked as though the scoring was over. The players roughed it a bit and penalties were numerous, nevertheless no scoring occurred. Finally Knapman secured an opening from close in and registered, putting the locals in the lead, 4-3. Norton made an end to end rush but after beating the defence he shot wide. It was hard luck for the big fellow but he kept on coming and finally combined with A. Carew for the tally that made it 4-4. There was no more scoring.

Coombs and the Carews were the most effective for Lindsay, while Long Jackson, and Flowers were most brilliant for the local septet. Mr. Len Dobson refereed very satisfactorily.

The teams:

Lindsay—Goal, Williamson; defence, Norton and Sandercock; rover C. Carew; centre, McIlroy; wings, A. Carew and Coombs.

Peteroboro—Goal, Flowers; defence, Phelan and Long; rover, Jackson; centre, Butcher; wings, Halpin and Knapman.

CRICKET CLUB IS READY AGAIN

Captain and Secretary-Treasurer Are Re-elected to Office.

MEETING NEXT WEEK.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Peterborough Cricket Club held last evening in the Y.M.C.A. was one of the most successful of any organization held there for some time, when one considers that the club is in its infancy.

The efficient services of Captain Whitehouse and Secretary Thompson were recognized by their re-election. Both these men have worked hard in the best interests of the club, and are to a great extent responsible for its success during last season.

The officers elected are:

Hon. President—Judge Huycke.

Hon. Vice-Presidents—J. H. Burnham, M.P., Major Cooper, C. H. Pennefather, J. R. Stratton, E. G. Patterson, Richard Hall, E. A. Peck, M.L.A., Miles Hamilton, E. Hatton, M. Charliss, Mayor Buller, John Crane, G. N. Gordon, W. H. Hill, F. M. Dela Fosse.

Captain—Frank Whitehouse.

Vice-Captain—J. V. Boone.

Sec.-Treas.—J. H. Thompson.

Executive Committee—Messrs. G. R. Hall, P. Lawrence, R. Rose, G. Bennett, J. Cumming, Foster, W. Brown.

A general meeting will be held next week when the question of better accommodations will be considered and also arrangements for a social evening.

Hard Practice.

"Has the young doctor much of a practice?"

"Yes, considerable."

"In any special line?"

"Economy."

Wakening Effect.

"He is lost in thought."

"Will we have to organize a relief expedition?"

"No; just ring the dinner bell."

More Substantial.

They had a feast of reason.
Of course the price came high.
He said that he enjoyed it,
But still he yearned for pie.

WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE MEASURE UP AGAIN IN LEGISLATURE

In Absence of Hon. W. J. Hanna Debate Is Adjourned Until Next Week, But Three Liberal Members and Allan Studholme Are Heard.

TORONTO, March 14. — Women's suffrage had an innings in the Legislature yesterday when J. C. Elliott (Lib., West Middlesex) moved a second reading for his three bills embodying a proposal to give the full municipal franchise to women owning property. Four speakers supported the bills but in view of the absence of Hon. W. J. Hanna the debate was adjourned without the Government benches contributing to it. The discussion will be resumed on Tuesday or Wednesday of next week.

Mr. Elliott said that there was real regret in the province at the delay in granting the requests of the organizations which supported women's suffrage, the woman who was able to acquire property was possessed of as much discretion as the man who was landless. Great Britain had recognized this point, and had enacted broad legislation to cover it. He felt that the last deputation which had waited on the Government made it clear that the refusal of votes for women was based only on mediaeval arguments.

Allan Studholme (Labo., Hamilton) who claimed that the bill proposed was merely a "child." In time he would bring along the "mother."

Wm. McDonald (Centre Bruce) cited the case of a woman in his town who could get $1,000 worth of credit from the merchants, and her husband would not be trusted with a quarter. Yet the man held the vote. A woman who had been abandoned by her husband and was raising a family could not vote, because she could not establish the fact of her husband's death.

G. Howard Ferguson (Grenville) was again elected chairman of the public accounts committee and some interesting sessions of that body are in prospect.

J. C. Elliott (West Middlesex) is preparing to investigate the terms of the contract with the Jackson syndicate, to whom the townships of Kendry and Haggart were sold for colonization purposes.

There will be an examination of the accounts in connection with the Guelph Prison Farm, the Whitby asylum and the expenditures of N. B. Colcock, the former Government agent in London.

FINAL GAME IN CONSOLATION TO-NIGHT AT 8

The matches for the consolation prize in the local curling club 'spiel will be concluded to-night. Yesterday afternoon W. Lang's rink defeated W. H. Denham 1[illegible]-5, but in the evening they fell before the strong curling of R. Neill's quartette. The other match last night between Dr. Wightman and H. F[illegible] resulted in a win for the former by 14-13, and Wightman's rink go into the finals. The other participant in the final will be the winner of the Neill-Stubbs game, which is being played this afternoon.

The final will commence at 8 o'clock.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

YOU can't expect any one's disposition to keep sweet when you are adding a ferment to it.

Being able to accomplish wonders is what makes a man a liar.

Truth has a startling way of showing itself in unexpected guise in unusual places.

When your nerves are stretched to their utmost tension and then rasped you wonder why it was ever thought necessary to invent a place of punishment.

It is hard work to keep up an average that you don't have.

The things that cost more than they are worth are those that we don't know what to do with.

The person who indignantly exclaimed that prosperity is no crime may not have consulted the prosecuting attorney.

Competent Liar.

"Why did you leave your last place?"

"My last job?"

"Yes."

"I improved things to such an extent that they were able to run the place without me."

The Reason.

"Look at that man."

"I see him."

"What makes him so lop shouldered?"

"He has carried a chip on that shoulder all his life."

Ambiguous.

Of all the fake philosophers
That daily come and go
The very worst, it seems to me,
Not to agree nor disagree,
Is he who answers "Yes and no."

Lose It.

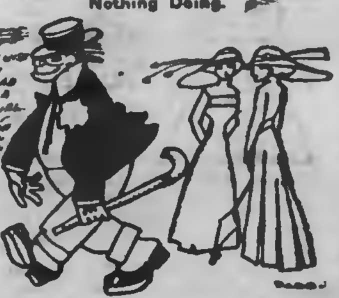
When you are freed from labor,
The day's work at an end,
And homeward you go hiking
The evening hour to spend,
Before the house you enter
To finish up the day
Pause e'er the gate you open
And throw your grouch away.

It may be in your business
You need a manner gruff
To make a good impression
Or run an awful bluff,
But in your family bosom
Forget the daily grind
And so when you foregather
At home have peace of mind.

It may be that the children
Won't know you for awhile,
Your wife may think you ailing
If you consent to smile,
But keep on bravely at it,
Chirk up a bit and sing.
They will, if you are patient,
Get used to anything.

In other words, be decent
About the family board.
Though it may cost an effort,
You'll gloat at the reward,
And with a little practice
It will not be so hard.
You might induce your children
To speak of you as "pard."

Nothing Doing.



"He proposed to her the first time he saw her."

"And, to make the story interesting, he married her the second time, I suppose?"

"Oh, no."

"No? What then?"

"There wasn't any second time."

Economical.

"Gone back to the old pipe, senator?"

"Yes; I am getting ready for a visit home."

"Constituents like it?"

"Not especially, but it comes cheaper to offer them a pipeful than a cigar."

Only Possibility.

"Jones is growing handsomer every day."

"I haven't seen him lately."

"Neither have I, but I hear he got smashed in the face with a baseball, and it must have made some change."

The French Flier.

Bleriot may not be so much,
But if not truly great
He beats the record and the Dutch,
Invading while you wait.

THE MARKET

The one who put the mar in market made her appearance to-day. Two ladies met at one end of the big auditorium and one murmured "Did you see that butter for thirty cents?" "Yes," responded the other. "Did you taste it?" "No," quoth the first lady, "I smelt it."

A fairly large number of farmers availed themselves of the fine weather and were present. Eggs sold from 25 to 28 cents, while butter went from 30 to 34. Chickens were $1.50 to $2.00 per pair, while one turkey sold for $3.25. The outside market was also fairly large.

To Prove Absence of Disease.

BERWICK, March 14. — The Department of Agriculture has promptly responded to a request to have an investigation made to see if powdery scab infests Nova Scotia potatoes.

By producing a clean bill of health Denmark and Belgium have satisfied the United States that no powdery scab exists in those countries. In consequence of this action the embargo has been lifted so far as Danish and Belgium potatoes are concerned.

It is believed that it can be proven that the disease does not exist in Nova Scotia. If this can be done, and the embargo on Nova Scotia potatoes removed, it will mean many thousands of dollars to the farmers.

Ambassador Page Explains.

LONDON, March 14.—In response to a cablegram from Secretary Bryan, U. S. Ambassador Page is preparing an explanation for the Senate of his speech concerning the Panama Canal. He feels that the Senators have been misled by the excessive condensation of his remarks in regard to his interpretation of the Monroe doctrine.

Mr. Page declared yesterday that he had distinctly said that the U. S. would object to or prohibit any European power from taking more territory in the new world, and that Britain would profit most from the canal because she owned the great bulk of the world's shipping.

HANDLING OF GRAIN IN THE WEST IS TO BE FACILITATED

Hon. G. E. Foster Announces Terminal Legislation For West

OTTAWA, March 14.—The House of Commons spent a quiet day for the most part dealing with the estimates. In the course of the day Hon. G. E. Foster, in reply to a question from W. A. Buchanan (Lib., Medicine Hat) announced legislation covering the handling and supervision of grain at terminal elevators.

The subject came up while the House was in committee of supply on the estimates for the Department of Trade and Commerce.

Mr. Buchanan (Lib., Medicine Hat), enquired if the Government intended to enlarge its terminal elevator system.

In reply, Mr. Foster stated that the Government did not intend to deviate from the policy it laid down at the last session, namely, that of establishing terminal grain elevators, owned and controlled by the Government, at the head of the Great Lakes, at Moose Jaw, Saskatoon, Calgary, on the Pacific coast and also one at the northern terminus of the new Hudson Bay Railway, which is now rapidly nearing completion.

"We intend," said Mr. Foster, "to introduce legislation at this session which will empower the grain commission to inaugurate a system of grain inspection and supervision which will enable them to guarantee that the grade given to the wheat at the terminal elevator will not be changed upon its arrival in Liverpool. This will prove to be a great boon to the western farmer, as it will enable him to realize the full market price for his wheat immediately after it is graded."

Mr. Foster supported Government ownership and co-operative systems, by declaring that he believed that in them lay not only the salvation of the west, but also the salvation of Canada generally.

"Their effect," declared Mr. Foster in conclusion, "is to reduce the high cost of living, and I beleve the extension of the co-operative system to Eastern Canada would tend to lower the present high cost of living."

Although nothing is definitely known, it is probable that the debate on the Lynch-Staunton-Gutelius report on the construction of the National Transcontinental Railway will take place on Tuesday next. Sir Wilfrid Laurier suggested that date to the Government to-day, and Mr. Borden intimated that it was satisfactory, but said he would first have to confer with the acting Minister of Railways and Canals, Dr. Reid.

Hon. Sam Hughes has given notice of a resolution which he will move to give a grant of $100 to every volunteer who is living on the date of passing an act based on the resolution, who was regularly enlisted on and served with the militia called out for active service in the year 1866 by the Government of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, or in the year 1870 by the Government of Canada, with the exception of several battalions formed for service in the Northwest, and also to provide that such grant may be paid to the widow or legal representative of every volunteer who was living on April 1, 1912, and to whom no grant has previously been paid under the authority of the act."

During question hour E. M. Macdonald (Pictou) raised the question of the purchase of coal for the I. C. R.

"Is it true," asked Mr. Macdonald, "that Mr. Gutelius, the general manager of the Intercolonial, has rejected the tenders of the Nova Scotia coal companies for the coal for the railway and is entering into arrangements with United States companies to furnish the supply?"

"Mr. Gutelius has notified the companies that their present offers cannot be accepted," was the reply of Hon. Dr. Reid, the acting Minister of Railways. Dr. Reid went on to say that there was some question as to prices, which had caused Mr. Gutelius' step.

"I understand that he has notified the companies that their offers are absolutely rejected," commented Mr. Macdonald.

Would Release Refugees.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Brigadier-General Bliss telegraphed the War Department late yesterday that the U. S. district attorney at El Paso, Texas, had been served with notice of habeas corpus proceedings for the release of Mexican refugees interned at Fort Bliss.

NOBILITY COMING IN.

German Aristocrats In Colony Which Has Arrived In Alberta.

CALGARY, Alta., March 14.—The vanguard of probably the most distinguished body of colonists to come into the west arrived in the city Thursday night. They comprise a number of German noblemen with following, who have acquired 90,000 acres of irrigated land near the town of Hussar, ten miles north of Bassano.

The leader of the expedition is Count Barnsloff, and one of those interested and who expects to join the colony later, is Prince Radziwill, a blood relative of Emperor William. Several counts and lesser members of the nobility have holdings and expect to join the colony later. The colony is strongly backed financially. It has under construction a palatial packing plant, upon which $250,000 will be expended, in creameries, elevators and numerous residences.

About two hundred German agriculturists all interested are expected to arrive in May.

Fisheries Treaty Amended.

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 14.—The administration bill to give effect to the provisions of the treaty of 1908 with Great Britain regarding fisheries on the Canadian border, was reported yesterday to the House by the Foreign Affairs Committee after it had been amended by suspending the regulation to prohibit trap nets.

One result of the change may be the return of the entire treaty to the contracting powers.

IT'S UP TO CONTESTANTS

Workers Must Make Use of Every Moment Till Contest Closes

WHAT HAVE YOU DONE? This is a question that every fair-minded live contestant should ask himself or herself—What have I done today? Have I got one or more subscriptions written up in my book beyond what I had yesterday? Have I got promises that will be turned into money before this vote offer of the contest is over?

One day has gone, and another is fast nearing the end. The time is here that you must conquer or fall by the wayside and go down in defeat, if you do not get subscriptions. This is battle of fame and fortune, but it is measured, nevertheless, by the results that you get day by day.

Tortoise and the Hare.

Many have heard the story of the tortoise and the hare. This applies in a great way to a contest. It is not the contestant who works hard to-day and spends the rest of the time telling others what he has done that wins anything. It is the one who says very little to any one. WORK IS THE ONLY THING THAT WILL WIN, and a candidate must work when he gets the greatest results, and that time is NOW, and the contestant that expects to win must do his work the next seven days.

Every Day a Contest.

Contests enter into all the affairs of life.

The man who starts with nothing and beats his way through obstacles natural and articificial, to competency, finds himself in a contest at every turn of the way. Measuring one's power with that of others brings out the best things in one. Many never know their power until they meet others in the affairs of life, and are made to measure their capacity with that of some other individual, who has his mind set on a certain goal.

Chance to Match Power.

In this great contest many have the chance to match their capacity against that of others, test the real depth of friendship of others. In this effort many are finding what they can do under pressure and are learning their capacity as they could not in any other field of effort. This is a training course in which strength and continuity are tested.

Get to Know Self.

Many candidates in every district are learning things about themselves they never knew before, learning, too, how to do things which count in this contest just as they will have to learn in all affairs of life, learning to harness their powers and make them active, learning to approach people, learning the effectiveness of intensive work.

A Wide Field.

The new opportunity offer opens up a very wide field for activity among the candidates and offers them such satisfactory rewards for their efforts that they feel that they are getting something worth while for their work.

Their friends, too, feel what help they can be. Now is the time for those interested in you to rally round and put their shoulders to the wheel, to send you on your way rejoicing.

CONTRALTO

Englands most distinguished vocalists are now on their second Canadian concert tour and having used the NEW SCALE WILLIAMS PIANOS on both occasions, they make known their esteem for this instrument in the following letter:

The Williams Piano Co. Ltd.,

Gentlemen,—

We wish to express our great appreciation of the splendid instruments furnished us, both for our concert at the Massey Hall and at this Hotel. "New Scale WILLIAMS" Pianos possess a rich, even tone, and a sympathetic quality of great value.

Yours very truly,

FICTION—PART THREE.

In compliance with the requests of many who are interested in the Library, a list is given herewith of some of the books that can be confidently recommended for home reading. Parents are constantly at a loss what to advise their children to read and the titles given may be a help to them not only in choosing for themselves, but for the younger members of their families, also it must be borne in mind that there may be some divergence of opinion as to the merits of some of the books, both from a purely literary standpoint and that of personal predilection; all those that are mentioned, however, are healthy in tone and contain nothing hurtful to the tenderest susceptibility. The list given this week will be entirely made up of fiction, but will be followed by other lists dealing with varied branches of literature. In order to make it easier for book-searchers to find what they require, the shelf-list number is added to the title of each book:

Light Fiction Readers.

These books have been mentioned as being more especially fitted for those who prefer light fiction. They have been picked hap-hazard and among them will be found some that were written thirty, forty, and fifty years ago. Interest in these, it is hoped for, as they are well fitted to be in the van when the question of good reading is being mooted. Some of them, like Bulwer Lytton's books, need no re-introduction, as the name of the author ranks with the best novel writers of the past century. There are others, however, like "Sarchedon," and "The Gladiators," by Whyte-Melville, and "Called Back," by Hugh Conway, which seem to have been utterly forgotten. "Vice Versa," also, by Frank Anstey, is a book full of light and laughter.

In the last article reference was made to the diversity of taste displayed by the public in the matter of fiction. In looking over the list of successes of the past year in England one sees a fine example of this variety. The greatest successes were "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," "The Amateur Gentleman," "The Devil's Garden," "The Broken Halo," "Stella Maris," "Eldorado," "The Regent," "The Passionate Friends," "The Judgment House." Of these at least two obtained their popularity by the free advertising they obtained in the papers and it is safe to say that not two others are up to the reputations of their authors. "The Amateur Gentleman" by reason of the healthiness of its tone, the picturesqueness of its setting and the virility of its characters deserves its popularity. Now, of these successes, there are not many that have gained much headway in this country. Wells' books, his scientific romances in particular, are by no means popularly sought for either by Americans or Canadians. Conan Doyle's, Farnol's, Gene Stratton-Porters's, and Florence Barclay's books are about the only ones that can be said to command a fair sale in both hemispheres. Charles Garvice's works are barely known in this continent, yet in England they are said to sell at the rate of a million copies a year. Another instance is that of Martin Farquhar Tupper, whose name is remembered as the author of a work entitled "Preverbial Philosophy," and who, was hailed as a genius in America and as next door to a fool in England. To-day his work sells in neither countries, so perhaps the English estimate of his worth may have been the soundest one.

Unusual Patterns Distinguish These New Arrivals In Imported Axminster and Wilton Rugs

In Every Weave, In Every Quality, In Every Design, "Hall's" Rugs Are Radically Different

Our Formal Display of New Spring Fashions In Millinery, Ready-to-Wear Frocks and Dress Fabrics, will be held on WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY And FRIDAY, March 18, 19 and 20.

On those days and following ones there will be much here to interest you in the way of exclusive Novelty Goods. All our new European merchandise, which in style and weave is authentically correct and very much different to any you have as yet seen in this city, will be on display and ready for selection

The Spring Style Show will be a treat to all lovers of beautiful dress

And that statement can be substantiated over and over again, by a simple inspection of the new Scotch Axminster and English Wilton Rugs now shown in our Home Furnishing Department.

Their superiority in quality and design can be recognized immediately preference in selection being given to the beautiful and rare artistic effects in Persian, Oriental and all-over conventional patterns, while in colorings are represented only the softest and richest tones in Old Blues, Persian, Rose, Oriental Reds and dainty Camel grounds.

Now as the house-cleaning time is approaching — would it not be a good idea to come down and select one of those elegant New Rugs—first choice is always best, and you have a wonderful variety to choose from in sizes from the small Hearth to the large Dining-room.

When purchasing Rugs of any description, just bear in mind these five points in which we know our rugs greatly excel.

Fineness of Weave Excellence of Pattern

Beauty of Color Trustworthy in Quality and

Reasonableness of Price

It is our pleasure to show you these superior Rugs at any time. May we have the opportunity ?

Draperies Made According To Your Order

We are now showing a most handsome collection of Curtain Nets and Drapery Fabrics to match all Rugs—and if you will come and make a selection, we will make up for you any design and any size you want for different rooms in your home.

Our showing consists of both American made and Imported Goods, and our prices for making are unusually moderate.

SOCIETY
WEDDING—PERSONAL

Mr. H. J. Booth, of Boston, who some few years ago managed the operetta "Queen Zephra," here, and was in the city for a few days, has gone to Lindsay.

Mr. Arthur C. Timmon, of Belleville, inspector of the Dominion Gresham Guarantee and Casualty Company for Eastern Ontario, was in the city.

His Honor Judge Huycke, while in Norwood last week, addressed the High School students at the weekly meeting of the Literary Society.

Mr. John O'Toole, one of Ottawa's leading contractors, who built the dam at the Quaker Oats Company, was in the city.

Mr. Elmer J. Mooney, of the Bell Telephone Company, Belleville, was in the city for the Telephony Club banquet.

Miss McCalla, formerly secretary of the Y.W.C.A. here, has been engaged for the same position at the new Y.W.C.A. building recently opened at Niagara Falls. Her many friends here will be pleased to learn that she has again resumed her duties.

The local Salvation Army band was greeted with a crowded house at Orange Hall, North Monaghan. Adjt. McElheney very acceptably filled the chair. The object of the function was to organise a new corps for the south end of the city, and judging by last night the aim of the local Army will be a success. The band gave a splendid programme of vocal and instrumental music.

Mr. O. E. Stanton, of Toronto, in the city attending the Bell Telephone Co. banquet. Mr. W. H. Winter, of Montreal, was also present.

Mrs. R. E. Wood has returned home after an extended visit to Kingston and other points.

Miss Marion Denne has returned home after a few days' visit in Toronto.

The S. O. E. Hall was the scene of a delightful function last evening, the occasion being a social evening by the Protestant Benevolent Federation.

Mr. Ted. Hanlon, after an extensive visit with friends in the city, has returned home to Fort William.

The union meeting of the ladies of the banquet committee, held at George Street parlors yesterday afternoon, was attended by representatives from Mark Street, St. James, George Street, and Charlotte Street. The various routine arrangements of the banquet on March 19 were completed by the committees.

Mrs. H. O. Fisk, 204 McDonnel Street, will receive Tuesday afternoon and not again this season.

Mr. Claude Bartlett, of the Bank of Ottawa staff, has received notice of his transfer to the Fort William branch and leaves the early part of next week for Fort William.

Mr. George Haynes, of Toronto, is a guest in the city.

Mr. S. W. Hazzlewood, of New Britain, is registered at the Oriental.

A concert will be given in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church Sunday school under the auspices of the Y.L.M.C. on Tuesday evening, March 31st. Those assisting are Miss Pearl Brock, of Toronto; Miss A. Richardson, and Mr. W. Wilson, of this city.

Mrs. Alec. J. Robertson and Miss Ruth Robertson, 310 McDonnel st., will receive Tuesday next and not again this season.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Huffman left this morning for a two weeks' visit in Rochester.

MILLER—SEDGWICK.

In Rochester, N.Y., on Wednesday, March 11th, Miss Essie Velena Sedgwick and Mr. Walter Collins Miller were united in marriage by Rev. Dr. Robert E. Brown, pastor of Asbury Methodist church. Mr. and Mrs. Miller left on the evening train for a two weeks' trip to Syracuse, New York, South Norwalk and Philadelphia. They will reside at Penfield, N.Y., and Mrs. Miller will be at home after April 15th.

"ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA

Last Presentation at "The Grand" To-night

The story of "Antony and Cleopatra" will be told in photodrama for the last time here at "The Grand" to-night. This wonderful production, which cost over $1,000,000 to produce and employed no less than 7,500 people, is without doubt one of the most remarkable picture plays ever shown. The flotella of boats carrying the Roman Soldiers and the landing of the Army on Egyptian soil, to say nothing of Caesar's royal entry into Rome, is worth the price of admission alone. In addition to this, however, there is the destruction of Rome by fire, the wild animals in the Arena, as well as great monstrous Alligators waiting to receive Cleopatra's slave, Charmain, who has been ordered cast into the waters. The film, which is in eight reels, and takes two and a quarter hours to run, is always kept in perfect order by the Kleine people, who immediately have inserted a new part to replace any of the film that has been scratched or torn, so that a beautiful clear picture is the result.

Although this wonderful drama has been shown in all the larger American and Canadian cities at prices ranging from 25c. to $1.50, the management of "The Grand" have arranged for special prices of 10, 15, 25c., for adults, children accompanied by an adult, 10c., any seat. If you have not yet seen "Antony and Cleopatra" make it a point to do so to-night as it is really too wonderful a work to miss, and especially at these attractive prices.

OBITUARY

THE LATE MRS. FRANKISH.

Mrs. Jemimah Frankish, aged 72 years, passed away in Lakefield yesterday.

The funeral will take place on Monday morning at 11 o'clock, interment at Little Lake Cemetery.

THEATRICAL

The story of "Quo Vadis" as seen in a Kleine photoplay is intensely interesting and one not soon to be forgotten. ne sees the banquet hall of Nero, the burning of Rome, the sports in the amphitheatre, the persecutions of the Christians and their death at the hands of the lions. All the prominent characters of the story are truly portrayed. Those who were unable to be present at the Grand Opera House last night will have the opportunity of witnessing this great photoplay next week. For dates see the Grand Opera House advertisement.

NAVIGATORS GO TO SCHOOL

Something new in schools is that now being conducted at Owen Sound by the Canada Steamship Lines, Limited. It is for the benefit of their own men—a course in higher navigation. Last month the school opened in Toronto, and after a few weeks session at Owen Sound, it will be moved to Midland.

Captain Geo. D. Frewer, official Compass Adjuster of the Company's fleet of 101 boats, is the Instructor. To him come the captains, first mates, second mates and wheelmen in the employ of the Canada Steamship Lines. The course of instruction is, in effect, a post-graduate one; the examinations set by the Canada Steamship Lines for their navigators being fifty per cent. higher than the Government standard. This results in a high degree of efficiency on the part of the Company's officers. As instancing the thoroughness of the instruction, it is interesting to learn that it includes a course in the handling of package freight.

IMMIGRATION

Mr. J.H. Burnham's Remarks in the House, on This Subject

In dealing with the subject of Oriental Immigration, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., is reported by Hansard as follows:

Whether it is a problem for the Minister of the Interior or for the Minister of Labor, I cannot say; but the balance between supply and demand should certainly receive a greater degree of superintendence. It frequently happens that in different centres of the country there are more men than are necessary for the work, and still they keep coming in. What are we to do ? They have either to be taken care of by the municipality or become burdens of a worse class on the community. At the present time, so far as I know or can find out, this superintendence is not exercised at all. The great cry is: Bring on your immigrants; fetch them in; fill up the country, so that we can say that the statistics show that the population is rapidly increasing. The population increasing in that irregular way is simply absurdity. If in trade, supply and demand maintain more or less of a balance and adjustment, there ought to be something of an automatic character with regard to men; but, strange to say, in the whole theory of public employment, the man, that is to say the life of the individual, is given no consideration at all. The whole thing is treated on a basis of trade, of goods, of bargain and sale. Until we have reformed this, and remember that the life of the men, women and children of the country is the first consideration, we shall never have reached even the primary stages of civilization.

GUNMEN ARE AT LIBERTY

Montreal Bandits May Elude the Police

MONTREAL, March 14.—The police here have issued descriptions of the three gunmen wanted for shooting two members of the force on Wednesday, and who are still at large. It is believed they may slip through and leave the city.

The funeral to-day of Constable Henry Bourdon, shot in the fight with gunmen on Wednesday, was attended by every member of the city police force not actually needed on duty, besides officers from district stations and members of public bodies. "Died on the field of honor" was the legend on the coffin plate, and a mass of flowers surrounding the bier at the morgue yesterday attests the widespread sympathy for the wife, three children and other relatives of the dead man.

August Guyon, also shot in the revolver fight, is making a strong bid for life, with youth in his favor. It was said yesterday he had a fair chance to pull through, though the bullet went clean through his left lung.

TO REFORM THE CITIZENSHIP LAW

LONDON, March 14.—The text is issued of Lord Emmott's bill, already presented in the House of Lords, for the consolidation and amendment of enactments relating to British nationality and the status of aliens. The measure provides that where an alien obtains a certificate of naturalization the Home Secretary may, on application of that alien, include in it the name of any child being a minor. Such child, if not already a British subject, shall become one, but the child may within a year after attaining his majority make a declaration of lienage, and thereupon cease to be a British subject. The Government of any British possession is to have the same power to grant nationalization certificates.

ARMY HEROINES MUST GO.

Famous French Cantinieres Will Be Dispensed With In War Time.

PARIS, March 14.—The picturesque Cantinières, or women who take charge of the French regimental canteens, and who have played many heroic parts in French military history, are no longer to share the dangers of active service with the troops, according to the Minister for War.

The women, one of whom is commissioned to each battalion of infantry, regiment of cavalry or battery of artillery, are in future to be retained simply in time of peace.

Formerly the women, wearing the uniform of their branch of the service, marched into battle with the troops, serving often as nurses or carrying soothing drinks to the wounded.

The Minister for War has now decided that the women are a tax on the food supply of the army and interfere with the rapid movement of troops marching to the front after mobilization. He says, too, they are a source of distraction to the soldiers, whose courage they weaken.

Napoleon I. paid a high tribute to the cantinieres for their services during his many campaigns. Several of them were made chevelieres of the Legion of Honor by him, one of them, Josephine Tiequart, for saving the life of her colonel by killing a Cossack who had attacked him during the retreat from Moscow.

Little Navy Organ Hopes Ships Will Be Forthcoming.

LONDON, March 14.—While the Unionists urge that the naval estimates show a dangerous use of the pruning knife, The Daily News, undaunted by the admission of the leaders of the "little navy" party, that the estimates are apparently not open to attack, points out that the estimates have grown 66 per cent. under the Liberal administration and deprecates the acceleration of shipbuilding.

"If there is a prospect of Mr. Borden's administration in the course of the next year or two being able to prosecute its splendid Imperial purpose, a partial explanation of the Admiralty's modest demand will be supplied," says The Telegraph, which adds: "The heavy outlay which the maintenance of our sea power involves is heavy, and is becoming heavier every year. Whether we are to bear it without more generous aid from the dominions time alone will show, but if economy in national expenditure is inevitable, then any other service must be pinched before a necessary penny is taken from the navy."

HAS PAID IN FULL.

Ex-Chief Kohler, of Cleveland, Wants Position as Sheriff.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 14.—Fred Kohler, ex-chief of police, nationally known as the "golden rule" chief, in an open letter announcing his candidacy for sheriff, declared yesterday he had "paid in full" for his dismissal from office a year ago.

Kohler was dismissed by the civil service committee for misconduct. He was previously named in a divorce suit. In his letter he said he wished to be rehabilitated with his fellow-citizens, that he had "paid in full," and that no further penalty ought to be exacted.

Theodore Roosevelt once referred to Kohler as "the best chief in America."

Tango Doesn't Shock Boston.

BOSTON, March 14. — Efforts to legislate against the tango and other new dances failed to meet with the approval of the legislative committee on social welfare, which yesterday decided to report adversely on a bill introduced by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan. Mr. Sullivan sought to prohibit dances "not conducive to propriety" under penalty of fine or imprisonment.

Child Born In Freight Yards.

NORTH BAY, March 14.—A babe, scarcely an hour old, was found wrapped in an old skirt under a freight car in the C. P. R. freight yards, and is doing well in the hospital. The mother, a girl of eighteen, had left the child where it was born, and could be found, and then walked half a mile to her home.

But there is always this hope for a mollymoddle good boy—he is apt to run across some tough kid who will take it out of him.

Two Men Killed In Fight.

PEORIA, Ill., March 14—Two men were killed and two deputy sheriffs and a woman were wounded in an attempted hold-up of a Chicago and Northwestern freight train at Manlius, Ill., yesterday.

The trainmen found four men unloading merchandise from a car. One opened fire on the conductor, while the others ordered Engineer Fisher to proceed with the train. He demurred and was shot dead.

The bandits fled south. Sheriff Byers and two deputies found them in a bunk car. The men opened fire on the officers, wounding both deputies, and fled to a cornfield, where they were surrounded.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY PAVILION

Panama-Pacific Exposition, San Francisco, Cal., 1915.

The Grand Trunk Pavilion which will occupy a prominent position in the railway plaza at the north-east corner of the grounds of the. Panama-Pacific Exposition, will be directly opposite the mammoth machinery palace, adjacent to the passenger ferry slips and over looking San Francisco Bay. As will be observed, the design is simple in out line and Spanishrenaissance in character, making a handsome and ornate structure. The walls will be of stucco, rough finish and tinted a soft cream shade, relieved with an ornamental enriched band carried around the building under the eaves. Shields and fountains have been effectively placed to enhance the decorative effect of the building.The roof will be covered with a rich red Spanish tile. The design for this building was the one accepted by the Exposition authorities as the standard for all the other buildings which will be erected on the railway plaza. This pavilion will house the exhibits of both the Grand Trunk Railway and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. Messrs. Ross and Macdonald, of Montreal, are the Architects.

"INVENTED" POTATOES

Antoine Parmentier Broke Down France's Objection to Tubers.

The centenary of the death of Antoine Parmentier, who popularized the potato in France, was celebrated at Neuilly, where his statue stands. Thanks to Sir Walter Raleigh, writes the Paris correspondent of The London Times, Englishmen became acquainted with the potato as soon as any nation in Europe. But in France, ever since its first introduction from Peru, it was the object of strange prejudices. It was supposed to cause fever and weakness, and was made responsible for any illness which attacked the first bold spirits who experimented with it in cookery; it was even believed to produce leprosy. To Parmentier's scientific exposition of its nutritive value and his campaign in its favor is due the final dissipation of these scruples and the spread of its cultivation on a large scale.

Parmentier was born in 1755, at Montdidier, in Normandy. His father died soon after his birth, and left his widowed mother with small means on which to educate her three children. Antoine, the eldest, became apprenticed to an apothecary at the age of 18. A year later the Seven Years' war broke out, and he obtained a post on the medical staff of the French army operating in Hanover. He took advantage of his being in Germany to continue his study of medicine at Frankfurt under the famous physician Meyer. It was there that he became acquainted with the nutritive properties of the potato, which had been well known in Germany for some time. At the end of the war he returned to Paris and was made apothecary at the Invalides. In consequence of the great famine of 1769 the Academy of Besancon offered a prize for a treatise on vegetables which could be substituted for bread in event of the failure of the corn crop. Parmentier won the prize with an essay showing how the necessary nourishment for the human body could be obtained from the starch of certain plants.

Potatoes were then cultivated at no considerable extent in France except in Anjou and in the Limousin, where they had been introduced by Turgot. In 1778 Parmentier published an "Examen chimique de la Pomme-deterre" in which he showed that all the popular prejudices against potatoes were unfounded, and obtained from the Government 80 acres of waste land to the north of the Bois de Boulogne on which to make experiments. In spite of the ridicule of the people of Paris, who regarded him as a crank, he sowed his acres and watched for the result. When in due time the flowers appeared Parmentier picked a bunch of them and offered it to the king. Louis XVI. at once placed it in his button-hole, and the success of the potato was assured. Its triumph was sealed by the genius of the royal chef, who invented pomme souffiee, surely the most dainty and palatable form in which the vegetable can be served. The court was delighted, and Parmentier was acclaimed as the "inventor of the potato."

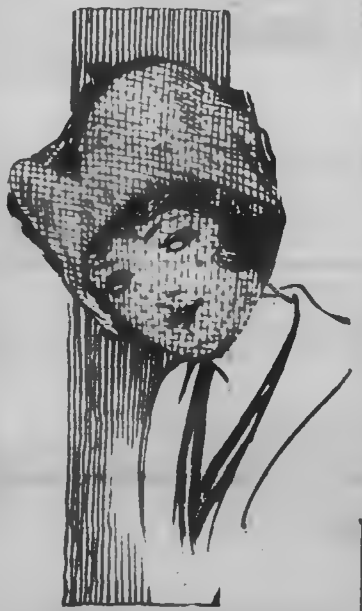
Suicides in France.

According to Dr. Jacques Bertillon, the French statistician, suicide is commonest among liquor sellers, chimney sweeps, butchers, fruiterers and musicians. It is frequent among "camelots," shop assistants, cutlers, hairdressers, servants, costers, lawyers, doctors and druggists. It is rare among the clergy, government officials and men leading an active, open air life.

A Versatile Mine is This.

The Highland Boy mine, at Bingham, Utah, began as a gold mine, in which class it was of no great account, says the Engineering and Mining Journal. Then it became a rich and profitable copper mine, its performance making it famous. It is no longer much good as a copper mine, but lately it has become a first class lead mine.

THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION



WHAT OF THE NEWEST IN VEILS?

The sheerness that has attacked the entire fabric of the fashions is seen in veils. not less than in blouse and lingerie. The very open mesh shown in this face veil, quite plain and set only with one chenille beauty spot, is ideally fashionable, and recommends itself to the wise woman in that it does not obstruct the eyes nor mar the features. The face veil now is usually gathered at both ends and fitted with a snap fastener to make its adjustment sure and quick.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Ease For the Feet.

A simple, effective remedy for tired feet is to bathe them twice a week in hot water into which have been put two tablespoonfuls of ordinary salt. When thoroughly dry, rub the soles of the feet gently for some minutes with a smooth piece of pumice stone. Only use the salt twice a week, but the pumice stone every night and you will find immediate relief and suffer no more from tired feet. Another good thing is to rub a slice of lemon on the feet. This will be found very soothing.

Circular Saws of Paper.

The latest use for paper is perhaps the most peculiar. A factory in England manufactures circular saws from paper. These paper saws are used for the manufacturing of the fine furniture, veneer and other thin plates of wood which must be treated with special care. Some time ago circular saws made from drawing paper were shown in an English exposition. The saws were driven by an electric motor and produced fine boards, which could not have been made better by the finest steel saw. The veneers made in this way are said to be so smooth that the cabinetmakers can use them without further planing.—Outlook.

A Legacy of the Distant Past.

"Did you ever notice," asked the experienced restaurateur, "that when one man is giving a dinner to another the waiter upon opening a bottle of wine generally pours a little into the glass of the host and then proceeds to fill the other man's glass to the top? If you asked the waiter why he did that he probably would be unable to tell you, but as a matter of fact it is a survival of feudal days, when life was held somewhat more lightly than to-day. It is intended to give the host an opportunity of taking the first taste of the wine in order to assure his guest that it is not poisoned."

LOOPING THE AERIAL LOOP

Beachey's Feat Said to Be More Daring Than That of Pegoud.

Before Pegoud looped the loop in the air, "Link" Beachey, the well known daredevil aviator, said he could do it if he weren't afraid of luring his brother aviators to try it after him. Seeing that the Frenchman set the fashion, Beachey concluded that he would be absolved from blame for accidents if he took it up as a mere imitator. Accordingly he did the trick three times in succession above San Diego, Cal.

Pegoud's feat was noised abroad throughout the land, but Beachey's received only a few lines of comment in the papers. Those that know, however, maintain that Beachey's was of vastly greater significance in the development of aviation. Pegoud flew in a slow and steady passenger carrying machine, bearing not more than three and one-half pounds to the square foot of lifting surface. His speed was less than forty-five miles an hour. But Beachey flopped over and over at nearly seventy-five miles an hour in a ninety horsepower speed machine lifting six pounds to the square foot.

As one expert put it, "One machine fluttered over like a dead leaf turning in still air; the other shrieked in an aerial circle like a crazy sky rocket."—New York Tribune.

SMOKE EATS UP MONEY.

This Avoidable Pest Costs Chicago More Than Its Taxes.

Experts figure that Pittsburgh's yearly soot emissions would make a pile 100 feet in diameter and 600 feet high, or larger than the Washington monument. The money waste and damage are estimated at $12,000,000 yearly.

Sample tests made some time ago in Chicago of the cost of the smoke nuisance in that city showed that the smudge bill exceeded the tax bill, which was about $60,000,000 a year, and the cost of smoke in other cities is fully as great in proportion to the size of the city.

This includes only the injury to property. Doctors will tell you that is the least damage. They will point out how the smoke gets into the throat and lungs and injures the health, causing chronic ailments which diminish the happiness and shorten the life of those who are not responsible for the smoke evil.

The old saying is, "Much smoke, much business," and we need the business. But the progressive engineer of today will tell you that most smoke can be avoided. It indicates incomplete combustion, which means waste of coal, extra expense in labor and equipment, damage to property, sickness and loss of life."—Power.

Wifely Curiosity.

"Henry, dear, I tried on a suit of your clothes the other day, and it fitted me to perfection."

"May I ask your object in taking such a liberty with my garments?"

"Why, Belle Greene said she heard Tommy Tolliver say that you wasn't much bigger than a shrimp, and I was just wondering how big a shrimp is."

Good Advice.

Never forget the advice of Themistocles. Said that ancient, "I would bestow my daughter upon a man without money, but not upon money without a man." Just change money for title and see the different reading: "I would bestowed my daughter upon a man without title, but not upon title without a man."

The Higher Education.

The sixteen-year-old princess who used to read books on "What a Young Girl Ought to Know" now has a sixteen-year-old daughter who is writing books on "What a Parent Ought to Know."

THE MAN IN SEEDY CLOTHES

How a Famous Gambling Resort Came To Be Discontinued

By R. A. MITCHEL

Half a century ago the celebrated gambling house at Monte Carlo did not exist. At that time Baden Baden was the center of attraction for those who wished to "buck the tiger." The building devoted to the purpose was not as splendid as that now at Monte Carlo, but it was a handsome one for those times.

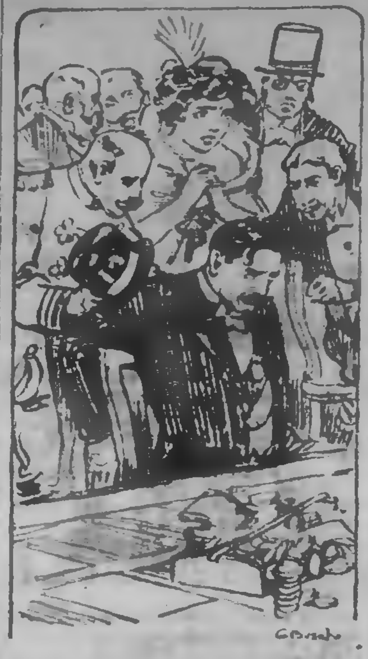
One night a man of mean appearance entered the spacious gambling hall at Baden Baden, shambled up to the table and stood behind those inclosing it looking at the game. His eyesight seemed to be sensitive, for he wore colored glasses. His clothing was shabby, and his appearance was by no means improved by his beard, which was long and scraggly.

After watching the game for awhile he pushed his way to a seat beside the table that had been left vacant by a woman who had lost all her money and had nothing for a stake. On the stranger's left was a German baron, who, looking aside at his new neighbor and not relishing the proximity of such a looking man, gathered up the coins before him and withdrew.

The seedy individual drew from his pocket a purse, from which he took a few gold pieces and distributed them over the numbers he wished to cover. The wheel was spun, the ball rattled about in the inclosure, and the croupier announced what had won and what had lost. The stranger was ahead on his bets. The next time he lost, and next won and continued to win and lose, his winnings usually equaling his losses.

At the table directly opposite the newcomer sat a young man, whom a number of the players recognized as a member of the ducal court. He was known to be talented and a favorite with his sovereign. Much of his time was spent at the gaming table, and report said that a splendid estate he possessed was gradually being transferred to others through the roulette table. On this occasion he was playing feverishly, risking large sums and usually losing.

At last he had nothing more to lose and sat with his hat drawn down over his eyes, doubtless to conceal his emotion, looking fixedly on the red where he had lost his last stake.



SOME ONE PULLED THE GAMBLER'S HAT OFF.

At the moment a handsomely dressed woman entered the hall with a hasty step and approached the table evidently looking for some one. Seeing the nobleman, she went to him, stood behind him and was about to lay a hand on his shoulder when the seedy individual opposite pushed a handful of gold pieces in front of his vis-a-vis. Whether the latter did not understand that an offer of a loan had been made him or whether he declined to accept a favor from one of such disreputable appearance none could tell. But he continued to gaze as before on the red, making no motion to use the proffered coins. Then the man who had made the offer partly rose, reached across the table and placed the money he had offered on a spot where if it won it would win 5 to 1.

This incident held the hand of the lady behind the nobleman, and instead of letting it fall where she had intended she waited. The wheel was spun, the ball rattled, and, being at last caught in one of the receptacles, the croupier announced the result. A dozen gold pieces that the seedy man had placed for his vis-a-vis were covered by sixty pieces of the same denomination.

All eyes were fixed on the winner to see what he would do. Would he accept his winnings? If so would he repay the loan? Would he reduce his new stake? Would he leave the whole amount where it was?

He answered these questions by doing nothing. He made no motion. His hat concealed the upper part of his face so that no one could see what it expressed. Since he did not withdraw his winnings it was assumed that he would leave them where they were. If he lost he would lose the whole amount; if he won he would win five times the sixty or 300 gold pieces.

The direction "Make your bets" was given, and the wheel was twirled.

By this time those about the table had largely lost interest in their own bets in the more absorbing diversion of watching this reckless player, who seemed resolved to risk all on one turn of the wheel. The ball rattled louder than ever in the surrounding silence. The hush continued till the croupier announced that the 5 to 1 bet had won again, then burst forth a din of exclamations.

The only impassive person at the table was the winner. He made no sign of excitement, did not extend a hand toward the gold that was poured on to the table for him to take up. The seedy man who was the cause of all this good fortune had ceased to bet, being apparently intent upon the person he had befriended. But his features, too, were concealed, the principal one, his eyes, being covered by the colored glasses.

The exclamations of the onlookers were succeeded by another hush. Could it be possible that the winner would leave what now amounted to nearly $2,000 of our money where it was, taking the chances again of losing all or winning five times the amount? The silence was broken by a soft voice coming from the woman standing behind the object of all this interest:

"Carl, hadn't you better take up some of your winnings?"

There was no reply—at least none was heard, for at that moment the ball rattled again.

For the third time the five to one won.

What was before mingled exclamations was now a hubbub. The heap of coins would be too large for the spot covered, and an I O U was laid on the pile. The seedy man sat stolidly looking at the man for whom he had rendered possible these winnings, but he made no protest against tempting fate further.

"Oh, Carl!" cried the woman behind the gambler. "Don't! Please don't risk it all again."

But the appeal was disregarded. The spinner of the wheel waited a few moments, but, receiving no sign that the money on the five to one spot would be changed, twirled it, and again the croupier announced that the bank had lost.

Something like $50,000 had now accrued to the credit of the winner. The woman behind him put her arms about his neck, with her face close to his. It was noticed that she shuddered. The seedy man opposite arose with his eyes glued to the couple before him. Then the woman gave a shriek.

Some one pulled the gambler's hat off. A burst of horror followed the uncovering of a face that bore the pallor of death, eyes that were fixed in a vacant stare on the pile of gold before them. The woman fainted and was carried out of the room by one party of attendants, while the dead gambler was carried out by another. These two objects of interest having been removed, the crowd looked about for the man with the threadbare clothes who had furnished the original stake.

He had disappeared.

While the excitement, the horror, was at its height he was leaving the gambling hall and, passing out of the gardens in which the building stood, called a cab, got in and to the driver, who bent down to hear to what point he wished to be driven, said:

"To the palace of the grand duke."

Stopping before a door in the rear of the building the "fare" turned him over to a lackey for his pay and hurried upstairs. Entering one of the apartments, he summoned attendants, who divested him of his clothes and handed him others.

"Send for the Count de ——" he said.

The Count de —— was the prime minister. In half an hour he appeared at the palace and was ushered into an apartment where the grand duke was awaiting him.

"Count," said the latter, "Baden Baden must cease to be a gambling hell."

"One of our brightest young men, Baron Carl Steinforth, whom I have intended for a high position, has recently—so I heard—been losing his patrimony. Knowing that he has frequented the Casino every day and evening, I went there tonight in disguise partly to see him for myself and partly to look upon what is going on there. I was present when he staked and lost his last coin. I put up a stake for him, which he did not notice, and I now believe he was dead at the time I offered it. I placed it for him where it would win, and it did win several times in succession. The baroness, his wife, came in to look for him doubtless to get him away at the moment I put up the stake. She waited while he won, then discovered the truth. She was carried out of the hall unconscious; her husband was carried out a corpse.

"I desire that you immediately take steps to recall the gambling privileges accorded to this nefarious concern. Let it be your first business on the morrow."

Such is the story of the recall of the license for gambling at Baden Baden as I heard it told by one who had been intimate with members of the grand ducal court. Had it not (the gambling) been transferred to Monte Carlo Europe would have got rid of a central point for gamblers. As it is, the business was simply moved from one point to another. But Germany is fortunate in putting it off her territory.

AN INDIAN TRAITOR.

How the "Rat" Provoked the Iroquois to the Massacre of Lachine.

During the days of the Old Regime there lived in what is now Canada, and then the territory over which French influence prevailed, a Huron chief of high renown named Kondiaronk, or the Rat.

Somewhat before his time his nation has been broken up and almost wholly destroyed by their cousins, but also their inveterate enemy, the Iroquois. The seat of the Huron nation was in the country near Lake Simcoe, Ontario, but a little to the west and southwest. The Iroquois burned their towns, massacred the greater part of the inhabitants, and drove the survivors from their ancestral lands. One band of refugees made its way to the shores of Lake Superior and to the islands of the Georgian Bay.

Kondiaronk, or the Rat, was the descendant of one of these refugees. At the time of the occurrence of the events here recounted, the Rat was in the prime of life, a redoubtable warrior, and a wise councillor. Some of the French admired him greatly, but had they understood him better they would have admired him less.

One French writer of the time described the Rat as "a gallant man if ever there was one"; while the historian, Charlevoix, declares that he was the ablest Indian the French ever knew in America, and that he had nothing of the savage but the name and the dress. When the Rat came to be found out it was learned that, besides the name and the dress, the Rat possessed the savages cunning and treachery.

Before the perpetration of the act of treachery that was the direct cause of one of the bloodiest massacres in Canadian history, the Rat had already given the French much trouble by his constant intrigues with the Iroquois, with whom he had even made a plot for the massacre of his neighbors, the Ottawas, under cover of a pretended treaty. The French spared no pains to gain him to their support of their cause.

At this time—1688—the French in Canada were hard pressed by their inveterate enemy, the Iroquois, and finally after a hard campaign peace was made between the colonists and the five nations. The Rat saw that this would mean an onslaught of the Iroquois upon the Hurons once the former were free of their French wars. Hearing that peace envoys of the Iroquois were on their way to meet the French, he waited for them.

After waiting for five days, the Iroquois messengers sent in advance of the embassy that was to go down to Montreal approached. As they came near the ambushed Hurons gave them a volley of bullets, killing one of the Iroquois chiefs and wounding the rest. Then the whole party was seized.

The prisoners secured, the Rat proceeded to tell them the lie that he felt quite sure would prevent peace being concluded between the French and the Iroquois. He told the Iroquois that he had been sent by Governor Denonville to attack them. The astonished prisoners protested that they were envoys of peace. The Rat pretended astonishment, then horror and fury, and presently broke into cursing Denonville, who, he said, had made them the instruments of his atrocious perfidy.

"Go, my brothers," exclaimed the Rat in addressing his prisoners, "go home to your people. Though there is war between us I give you your liberty. Onontio (the Indian name for the Governor of Canada) has made me do so black a deed that I shall never be happy again till your five tribes take vengeance upon him."

The Rat retained one prisoner, whom, he said, he wished to adopt to take the place of one of his followers killed in the skirmish. As soon as he arrived at Michillimackinac he perpetrated another act of treachery by having his prisoner shot by a file of French soldiers. This, when told to the Iroquois, confirmed the tale of treachery that they had already heard, and which they believed in spite of denials from the French. The anger of the Iroquois was on fire.

The temporary peace was broken by the massacre of Lachine, on Lake St. Louis, nine miles above Montreal, the story of which forms one of the bloodiest chapters in the early history of Canada.

More Power---Less Fuel

IT'S the motor that does it.

The wonderful Buick Overhead Valve Motor.

In the new McLaughlin-Buick "Six" it has proved itself capable of greater mileage per gallon of fuel than any other six-cylinder car of similar horsepower.

It has also shown greater capacity for developing power than any other motor of equal size.

And remember that the overhead valve motor is installed in every McLaughlin-Buick Pleasure Car for 1914.

If you consider upkeep cost, the saving in fuel made possible by this motor is a point that cannot fail to command your attention.

Consider, too, the daily satisfaction the McLaughlin-Buick will give you in certainty of service, comfort, convenience, appearance and pride of ownership.

No matter what its price, a McLaughlin-Buick car must, and will, give the maximum of that service for which it was intended, and must bear its proportion of the responsibility of maintaining that high prestige which McLaughlin-Buick cars have attained.

Tarzan of the Apes

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS.

Copyright by the Frank A. Munsey Co.

Just an instant the girl hesitated, and then she realized the truth, and, throwing her arms about his neck, she drew his face to hers and kissed him—unashamed.

"I love you—I love you," she murmured.

From far in the distance came the faint sound of many guns.

Tarzan and Jane Porter raised their heads. From the cabin came Mr. Philander and Esmeralda. From where Tarzan and the girl stood they could not see the two vessels lying in the harbor.

Tarzan pointed toward the sounds, touched his breast and pointed again. She understood. He was going, and something told her that it was because he thought her people were in danger.

Again he kissed her.

"Come back to me," she whispered. "I shall wait for you—always."

He was gone, and Jane Porter turned to walk across the clearing to the cabin.

Mr. Philander was the first to see her.

"Jane!" he cried. "Jane Porter! Bless me!"

He scrambled to his feet and rushed toward her. He could not believe that it was she and alive.

"Bless me! Where did you come from? Where in the world have you been? How"—

"Mercy, Mr. Philander," interrupted the girl, "I never can remember so many questions."

"Well, well," said Mr. Philander. "Bless me! I am so filled with surprise and exuberant delight at seeing you safe and well again that I scarcely know what I am saying, really. But, come, tell me all that has happened to you."

CHAPTER XVI.

The Village of Torture.

As the little expedition of sailors toiled through the dense jungle searching for signs of Jane Porter the futility of their venture became more and more apparent, but the grief of the old man and the hopeless eyes of the young Englishman prevented the kind hearted D'Arnot from turning back.

He thought that there might be a bare possibility of finding her body or the remains of it, for he was positive that she had been devoured by some beast of prey.

It was slow work. Noon found them but a few miles inland. They halted for a brief rest then, and after pushing on for a short distance farther one of the men discovered a well marked trail.

It was an old elephant track, and D'Arnot, after consulting with Professor Porter and Clayton, decided to follow it.

The path wound through the jungle in a northeasterly direction, and along it the column moved in single file.

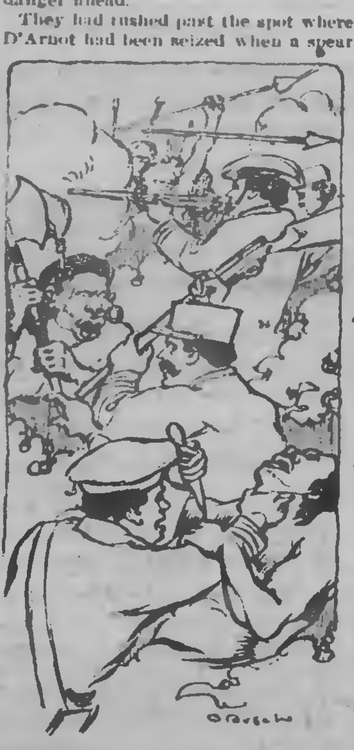
Lieutenant d'Arnot was in the lead and moving at a quick pace, for the trail was comparatively open. Immediately behind him came Professor Porter, but as he could not keep pace with the younger man D'Arnot was a hundred yards in advance when suddenly a half dozen black warriors rose about him.

D'Arnot gave a warning shout to his column as the blacks closed on him, but before he could draw his revolver he had been pinioned and dragged into the jungle.

His cry had alarmed the sailors, and a dozen of them sprang forward past Professor Porter, running up the trail to their officer's aid.

They did not know the cause of his outcry, only that it was a warning of danger ahead.

They had rushed past the spot where D'Arnot had been seized when a spear hurled from the jungle transfixed one of the men, and then a volley of arrows fell among them.



In an Instant They Were in a Hand to Hand Fight.

Raising their carbines, they fired into the underbrush in the direction from which the missiles had come.

By this time the balance of the party had come up, and volley after volley was fired toward the concealed foe. It was these shots that Tarzan and Jane Porter had heard.

Lieutenant Charpentier, who had been bringing up the rear of the column, now came running to the scene and on hearing the details of the ambuscade ordered the men to follow him and plunged into the tangled vegetation.

In an instant they were in a hand to hand fight with some fifty black warriors of Mbonga's village. Arrows and bullets flew thick and fast.

Queer African knives and French gun butts mingled for a moment in savage and bloody duels, but soon the natives fled into the jungle, leaving the Frenchmen to count their losses.

Four of the twenty were dead, a dozen others were wounded, and Lieutenant d'Arnot was missing. Night was falling rapidly.

There was but one thing to do—make camp where they were until daylight.

This work was not completed until long after dark, the men building a huge fire in the center of the clearing to give them light to work by.

When all was as safe as could be made from the attack of wild beasts and savage men Lieutenant Charpentier placed sentries about the little camp, and the tired and hungry men threw themselves upon the ground to sleep.

The groans of the wounded, mingled with the roaring and growling of the great beasts, kept sleep except in its most fitful form from the tired eyes. It was a sad and hungry party that lay through the long night praying for dawn.

The blacks who had seized D'Arnot had not waited to participate in the fight. They hurried their prisoner along, the sounds of battle growing fainter and fainter as they drew away from the contestants until there suddenly broke upon D'Arnot's vision a good sized clearing, at one end of which stood a thatched and palisaded village.

A cry went up within the palisade. A great throng of women and children rushed out to meet the party.

And then began for the French officer the most terrifying experience which man can encounter upon earth—the reception of a white prisoner into a village of African cannibals.

They fell upon D'Arnot tooth and nail, beating him with sticks and stones and tearing at him with claw-like hands. Every vestige of clothing was torn from him, and the merciless blows fell upon his bare and quivering flesh.

But not once did the Frenchman cry out in pain. A silent prayer rose that he be quickly delivered from his torture.

The death he prayed for was not to be so easily had. Soon the warriors beat the women away from their prisoner.

He was to be saved for nobler sport than this, and, the first wave of their passion having subsided, they contented themselves with crying out taunts and insults and spitting upon him.

Presently they gained the center of the village. There D'Arnot was bound securely to the great post from which no live man had ever been released.

A number of the women scattered to their several huts to fetch pots and water, while others built a row of fires on which portions of the feast were to be boiled.

The festivities were delayed, awaiting the return of the warriors who had remained to engage in the skirmish with the white men, so that it was quite late when all were in the village and the dance of death commenced to circle around the doomed officer.

Half fainting from pain and exhaustion, D'Arnot watched what seemed but a vagary of delirium or some horrid nightmare from which he must soon awake. He closed his eyes and held his teeth firm set. He would not cry out.

He was a soldier of France, and he would teach these beasts how an officer and a gentleman died.

Tarzan of the apes needed no interpreter to translate the story of those distant shots. With Jane Porter's kisses still warm upon his lips he was swinging with incredible rapidity through the forest trees straight toward the village of Mbonga.

He was not interested in the location of the encounter, for he judged that that would soon be over. Those who were killed he could not aid; those who escaped would not need his assistance.

It was to those who had neither been killed nor escaped that he hastened. And he knew that he could find them by the great post in the center of Mbonga's village.

Many times had Tarzan seen Mbonga's black raiding parties return from the northward with prisoners, and always were the same scenes enacted about that grim stake, beneath the flaring light of many fires.

Tarzan had looked with complacency upon their former orgies, only occasionally interfering for the pleasure of baiting the blacks. But heretofore their victims had been men of their own color. Tonight it was different. White men, men of Tarzan's own race, might be even now suffering the agonies of torture.

On he sped. In a few minutes he swung into the trees above Mbonga's village. Ah, he was not quite too late! The figure at the stake was very still.

Tarzan knew their customs. The deathblow had been struck. He could tell almost to a minute how far the dance had gone.

In another instant Mbonga's knife would sever one of the victim's ears. That would mark the beginning of the end, for very shortly after only a writhing mass of mutilated flesh would remain.

The stake stood forty feet from the nearest tree. Tarzan coiled his rope. Then there rose suddenly above the fiendish cries of the dancing demons the awful challenge of the ape man.

The dancers halted as though turned to stone. The rope sped with a singing whir high above the heads of the blacks. It was quite invisible in the flaring lights of the campfires.

D'Arnot opened his eyes.

A huge black, standing directly before him, lunged backward as though felled by an invisible hand.

Struggling and shrieking, his body, rolling from side to side, moved quickly toward the shadows beneath the trees. The blacks, their eyes protruding in horror, watched spellbound.

Once beneath the trees the body rose straight into the air, and as it disappeared into the foliage above the terrified negroes, screaming with fright, broke into a mad race for the village gate.

D'Arnot was left alone. He was a brave man, but he had felt the short hairs bristle upon the nape of his neck when that uncanny cry rose upon the air.

As he watched the spot where the body had entered the tree he heard the sounds of movement there. The branches swayed as though under the weight of a man's body. There was a crash, and the black came sprawling to earth again, to lie very quietly where he had fallen.

Immediately after him came a white body, but this one alighted erect.

D'Arnot saw a clean limbed young giant emerge from the shadows into the firelight and come quickly toward him.

What could it mean? Who could it be? Some new creature of torture and destruction doubtless.

D'Arnot waited. His eyes never left the face of the advancing man. The frank, clear eyes did not waver beneath his fixed gaze.

D'Arnot was reassured, but still without much hope, though he felt that that face could not mask a cruel heart.

Without a word Tarzan of the apes cut the bonds which held the Frenchman. Weak from suffering and loss of blood, he would have fallen but for the strong arm that caught him.

He felt himself lifted from the ground.

There was a sensation as of flying, and then he lost consciousness.

* * * * * * *

When dawn broke upon the little camp of Frenchmen in the heart of the jungle it found a sad and disheartened group.

As soon as it was light enough to see their surroundings Lieutenant Charpentier sent men in groups of three in several directions to locate the trail, and in ten minutes it was found, and the expedition was hurrying back toward the beach.

It was slow work, for they bore the bodies of six dead men, two more having succumbed during the night, and several of those who were wounded required support to move even very slowly.

Charpentier had decided to return to camp for re-enforcements and then make an attempt to track down the natives and rescue D'Arnot.

It was late in the afternoon when the exhausted men reached the clearing by the beach, but for two of them the return brought so great a happiness that all their suffering and heartbreaking grief were forgotten on the instant.

As the little party emerged from the jungle the first person that Professor Porter and Cecil Clayton saw was Jane Porter standing by the cabin door.

With a little cry of joy and relief she ran forward to greet them, throwing her arms about her father's neck and bursting into tears for the first time since they had been cast upon this hideous and adventurous shore.

Professor Porter, burying his old face in the girl's shoulder, sobbed like a tired child.

Jane Porter led him toward the cabin, and the Frenchmen turned toward the beach from which several of their fellows were advancing to meet them.

Clayton, wishing to leave father and daughter alone, joined the sailors and remained talking with the officers until their boat pulled away toward the cruiser, whither Lieutenant Charpentier was bound to report the unhappy outcome of his adventure.

Then Clayton turned back slowly toward the cabin. His heart was filled with happiness. The woman he loved was safe.

As he approached the cabin he saw her coming out. When she saw him she hurried forward to meet him.

"Jane!" he cried. "Heaven has been good to us indeed. Tell me how you escaped—what form Providence took to save you for—us."

He had never before called her by her given name. Forty-eight hours before it would have suffused Jane Porter with a soft glow of pleasure to hear that name from Clayton's lips. Now it frightened her.

"Mr. Clayton," she said quietly, extending her hand, "first let me thank you for your loyalty to my father. He has told me how noble and self sacrificing you have been. How can we ever repay you?"

THE USEFUL OUTER COAT.

The little outer coat that serves all sorts of purposes is a necessary adjunct to almost every woman's wardrobe, and here is one that was tucked into a trunk of a southbound traveller the last steamer. It was a mineral yellow, for sport coats are bright colored this year, in a downy, sursurfaced fabric, smart of cut and trimmed only with buttons and a bit of brown printed velours. The front of the garment is conveniently closed with concealed snap fasteners.

Life on Broadway.

"Hey! Git outer th' way! Do you t'ink you own th' street?"

"Go on, you big stiff! You got about as much brains as a weasel!"

"Come down here and I'll lick you!"

"You couldn't lick a postage stamp, you boob!"

Sit behind the motorman on a Broadway car some afternoon and this is some of the repartee you will hear between the truck driver who insists on sticking to the car tracks and the motorman trying to keep to schedule. Of course nothing serious happens. There are lots of "cops" along Broadway, good big ones.—New York Tribune.

Native Home of the Novel.

England is the native home of the novel, as is Normandy of the apple or Valencia of the orange. Why? That question can be answered only in a large volume or in a single word. Let us answer it in a word. Lord Redesdale has already suggested the answer to us. It is that the novel is in its nature intimate, cordial and homely and that the English mind is homely, intimate and cordial.—Anatole France in a London Address.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XI.—First Quarter, For March 15, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xiii, 10-17; xiv, 1-6—Memory Verses, 3-5—Golden Text, Mark ii, 27—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Both of the portions assigned for today are Sabbath day incidents. In the first He healed a woman in the synagogue who had been afflicted eighteen years, and in the second He healed a man who had the dropsy in the house of one of the chief Pharisees. The ruler of the synagogue was indignant because the woman had been healed on the Sabbath day, for the day was more to them than the Lord who gave them the day, and they had not learned that the one in their midst was the Lord even of the Sabbath day, greater than the temple, and that it was lawful to do well on the Sabbath day (Matt. xii, 6-8, 12).

The late Dr. Weston of Crozier seminary says, in his notes on Matthew, that the immediate occasion of the determination by the Jewish rulers to put Christ to death was His relation to the Sabbath. Christ claimed that the Jewish nation were His people; that as Son of Man He was greater than their greatest king, greater than the temple, greater than the sacrifices, greater than the Sabbath; that all these were ordained for the sake of redemption, that God might through them show mercy; that His object was to give, not to receive, and that necessarily the Redeemer was greater than all the means of redemption.

The Jewish Sabbath was the one peculiar and distinctive ordinance of the nation. It was the Jewish national flag. If the nation is to be deprived of its distinction from other nations, what is the use of being God's people? Pride, self righteousness, arrogance, had taken possession of them. Incarnate love was in their midst doing its mighty works, and they thought it was Satan.

They did not know heaven from hell, sin from holiness, God from the devil. Their case was hopeless. The nation was doomed. Yet He was slow to cast them off. Ephraim was joined to idols, Israel would not frame her doings to turn unto her God, yet His cry was, "How shall I give thee up?" (Hos. iv, 17; v, 4; xi, 8.)

As He said in the parable of the unfruitful fig tree, "Let it alone this year also till I shall dig about it and dung it, and if it bear fruit, well, and, if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down" (Luke xiii, 6-9). He is slow to anger and plenteous in mercy, not willing that any should perish, but the day of the Lord will come (II Peter iii, 9, 10). He delights in mercy and loving kindness, and judgment is His strange work (Jer. ix, 23, 24; Hos. vi, 6; Isa. xxviii, 21).

Sabbath signifies rest and a ceasing from our own works (Gen. ii, 1-3; Heb. iv, 3, 4, 10), but these hypocrites were full of their own works, their own days, their own feasts and their own ways and were so occupied with them and blinded by them that they could not see the light from heaven that was in their midst.

The sicknesses which He healed were typical of the spiritual condition of the nation and of the condition of multitudes today. This woman in the synagogue was like many who are found in our churches. She was long years bowed down, bound by Satan and utterly unable to lift herself up. Every unsaved person is bound by Satan and unable to loosen or lift up himself, and neither the synagogue nor any mere human agency can do any good, for by the deeds of the law can no one be justified, for the law, although holy and just and good, cannot give life (Gal. ii, 16; iii, 10, 11, 21; Rom. vii, 12).

By one word, one touch, from Him who is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth the infirmity of eighteen years instantly disappeared, the bound one was loosed from the bond of Satan, the people rejoiced, and the adversaries of the Lord were ashamed.

Thus it was with Saul of Tarsus when he saw the same Lord on the way to Damascus. Thus it will be with Israel as a nation when they shall see the same Jesus coming in His glory. Thus it has been with multitudes now in glory and multitudes still on earth, and thus it might be with every one still bound by Satan if they would let the Lord lay His hand upon them and speak peace to them, for the free gift of God is eternal life, and whosoever will may take it (Rom. vi, 23; Rev. xxii, 17).

In our second portion He did not say, "Which of you shall see," but "Which of you shall have an ox or an ass fallen into a pit." Surely He can save His own property at any time and in any place, but His pitiful cry is, "Ye will not come unto me; Israel would have none of me" (John v, 40; Ps. lxxxi, 11). The woman came to Him when He called her (xiii, 12), and so did the little child, but He is saying to many: "I have called, and ye refused. Ye have set at naught all my counsel and would none of my reproof" (Prov. i, 24, 25).

These great foundation truths must never be forgotten: "God is love;" "The Lord is not willing that any should perish." He is still asking, "What more could have been done that I have not done?" (Isa. v, 4.) It is still true, "This man receiveth sinners."

SPECIAL CORNER FOR AFTER DINNER READERS

The Invalid

He Was Very Hard to Nurse

By F. A. MITCHEL

Barton Hough was educated abroad, and, after having attended schools till he was eighteen, universities till he was twenty-six and taken post graduate courses till he was twenty-nine, his mother thought it time that he returned to America.

It is not to be inferred that Mr. Hough came out with great knowledge from all this training. He had become accustomed to European life and remained in the universities for the purpose of prolonging it. The only thing in which he had become proficient was the use of the small sword, which he learned at a German university.

However, when he had finished his last postgraduate course he concluded to take a rest in Paris, where he remained a year. Then his father died, and he felt it incumbent upon him to go home. He found his mother very lonely, and she begged him to stay with her. He promised to do so, but before long it became apparent that he was sighing for those places where people work a few hours a day or not at all and enjoy themselves the rest of the time.

In order to get her son chained down she desired that he should marry. Unfortunately for this plan Barton's feminine associates abroad had not been such as to inspire confidence in women. He had been much pleased at one time with a Russian countess. But she turned out to be an adventuress and the sweet intercourse between them had turned to bitterness. An English girl, Lady Angela Courtney, had been his next flame, but she had married a nobleman of her own country, leaving the American in the lurch.

Mr. Hough, forgetting that "one swallow does not make a summer"—or two in his case—came to consider all women bereft of any sense of honor, and he would have nothing to do with them, or, rather, he would trust none of them. As to marrying, that was out of the question.

One day Barton fell ill. His mother was not strong enough to nurse him, but he would have no one else. Finally when wornout she suggested a trained nurse. The young man was so enraged at the suggestion that his mother desisted. Finally in order to relieve her he consented that she might bring in a man to help her.

Mrs. Hough knew a young woman who had become a trained nurse. This girl, Adele Trevor, the good lady sent for, and on her arrival said to her:

"Philippa, my son is ill and I must have some one to take care of him. What salary do you usually get?"

"Twenty-five dollars a week."

"I will pay you double that sum, but I have a requirement to make of you. You must personate a man."

The girl hesitated, but she needed money, and $50 a week was a temptation to her. Besides it was understood that her duties would be rather to entertain the patient than to nurse him. She accepted the position and Mrs. Hough sent her to a tailor to be outfitted. It became necessary to cut off a wealth of hair, but her employer gave her a substantial check to cover the loss. When all was ready the nurse was introduced to the patient by Mrs. Hough.

"Why, mother," he said, "I thought you were to get a man, not a boy!"

"You don't need a person of strength. The butler will do everything for you. Philip is simply to be with you when you are lonely, to give you your medicine, and read to you."

"Very well, let him begin at once."

"What kind of reading do you like, sir?" asked the nurse, very meekly.

Barton smiled. "You must be pretty young. Your voice hasn't changed yet," he said; then added in contrasting tones, "I want a blood and thunder story."

Philippa went out of the room with Mrs. Hough for a book and returned with a history of the buccaneers of the Spanish main. Drawing a chair beside the invalid's couch she seated herself and began to read. She had not read long before Barton stopped her.

"That's no voice with which to read about pirates. No pirate would ever tell anybody to walk the plank like that. Put it this way"—and in as stentorian a voice as he could command in his weak condition he repeated:

"'Out there—every one of you!'"

"My voice isn't very strong yet. I suppose it will be stronger when I am older," said the nurse.

"You need developing. Look in the closet and you'll find a couple of foils. Never mind the pirates; I'm tired of them."

Philippa closed the book, laid it aside and, going to the closet, found the foils standing in a corner. She brought them to the invalid, who took one leaving the other with her.

"Now stand off there," he said, "and I'll give you a lesson in fencing."

"But, sir, are you strong enough to"—

"I'm going to do my part in bed. Put the pillows behind me."

She propped him up as he desired, and he bent his foil above his head after the fashion of fencers beginning to fight and told Philippa to do the same. Then he told her to see if she could touch him with the button of her foil.

"Don't you think, sir," she protested, "that it would be better for me to read to you?"

"No; it's your business to amuse me, and you must amuse me; not bore me."

"But the doctor; he wouldn't allow it."

"The doctor be hanged; he's not here to stop it."

Philippa made several inoffensive thrusts, rather endeavoring not to touch the patient than to do so.

"See here, young man," cried Burton; "do you call that fencing? I want you to do your best to put the button there," and he tapped his left breast with his finger.

Philippa, seeing that nothing would satisfy him except her doing her best, set to work to touch the spot indicated, but found it impossible. Although reduced by illness, he was too quick for her.

"Now, I'll try you," he said, "but my hand is not as steady as it should be, and I'm afraid I'll hurt you. You'll find a mask in the closet. Bring it out."

Philippa brought the mask, and he told her to put it on. She did so and, again taking up her foil, placed herself on the defensive. Barton had no difficulty in getting behind her guard and placing the button of his foil wherever he liked. They were in the midst of lunges and parries when the door opened and Mrs. Hough ushered in the doctor. Philippa turned quickly, lowered the point of her foil to the floor, bent her head and stood like a culprit ready to receive a reprimand.

"So this is the nurse you have provided for your son?" said the doctor to Mrs. Hough.

"He's a dandy!" said the patient. "I don't believe he ever took a lesson in his life, and yet he came very near pinking me several times."

But the doctor refused to be placated.

"Madam," he said to the mother, "is this young man a professional nurse?"

"He is."

"Discharge him at once."

"Not on your life!" cried the patient.

"Any educated nurse," continued the doctor, "knows better than to risk a patient's life by permitting him to take such violent exercise."

"Permitting!" sneered Barton. "Do you think that stripling could lord it over me? Not much."

"Either discharge the nurse," said the doctor resolutely, "or I shall withdraw from the case."

"The nurse won't be discharged," replied Barton. Whereupon the doctor left the room, followed by the fond mother, who was quite beside herself at the trouble she had made in giving her son a man nurse. She made no attempt at an explanation to the doctor, being too agitated and not knowing what to do. She went back to the sickroom, to find the nurse had vacated it, while her son was evidently no worse for his exercise.

"Mother," he said, "let old sawbones go. I like this little chap you've given me, and before he goes away I'll make a man of him."

"Oh, dear!" cried the mother, which under the circumstances was as appropriate as anything she could say.

"Send Philip back to me," Barton went on. "He's a bit cut up at being blamed."

Mrs. Hough was ready to do anything in her power and, going out, came back dragging Philippa with her.

"Come here," said Barton to his nurse.

Philippa went to him and, taking her hand, the patient said kindly:

"Don't mind what the old curmudgeon said. You're a nice little fellow, only a bit too delicate for a boy, but I'll take that out of you. Mother, I want him to stay with me till I get well. I feel better already."

So Philippa continued her attendance, and the patient continued to improve. As much cannot be said for Philippa. As the patient grew stronger he increased his efforts to take the effeminacy out of her, and she was forced to suffer some pretty hard knocks. A crisis came when Barton was able to get out of bed and stand on his feet. Then one day Mrs. Barton heard sounds above, followed by a thud. Running upstairs, she found her son lifting Philippa, unconscious, from the floor. Both had boxing gloves on their hands.

"For heaven's sake, Barton," cried the mother, "have you killed her?"

"Killed her? You mean him."

"Oh, my dear boy, she is a girl!"

Barton laid Philippa on a lounge and begged his mother to go for restoratives. While the old lady was gone Philippa opened her eyes, meeting another pair of frightened eyes that showed a relief, but still anxiety.

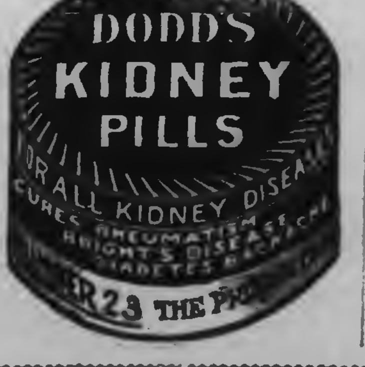
"Thank heaven I haven't killed you!" he said.

"No, no! It is nothing. The violence of the exercise overcame me. I am all right now."

"Forgive me, sweetheart—I mean little girl. I didn't know"—

"I should not have entered upon such a deception," the girl moaned. "I didn't want to do so, but was overpersuaded. Your mother's offer was tempting, and I yielded despite my better judgment. But I didn't know I would be expected to play a man's part except as a man nurse."

When Mrs. Hough returned to the room armed with smelling salts her son was bending over his nurse so intently that he was not aware of his mother's presence. But Philippa's color had suddenly returned in a measure. Indeed, there was something like a blush on her cheeks as she listened to the pleadings of the young man for forgiveness. The good lady withdrew, and it was not many weeks before she was rewarded by her son announcing that he would remain in America and become a benedict.



HAND AND MOUTH.

Tests Two Managers Used to Get the Right Kind of Employees.

"How do you pick out your stenographers? By their clothes or for their looks?" asked the sales manager of the correspondence man.

"By neither. Just by their hands. I look at those much more carefully than I do at their faces. A combination of rings and ink stains, or rings and carelessly kept nails, means that the girl cannot have the job.

"It is simple enough when you come to think of it. The girl who takes pains to keep her hands immaculate and her nails trimmed will turn out letters that are just as carefully neat. If she has a white, clean, well kept hand she will be a good employee, and you are welcome to the information. It took me some years to discover it for myself. How do you pick out your salesmen?"

"Not by their hands," laughed the sales manager, "but by another physical characteristic. I pick them out by their mouths.

"Every man who applies has recommendations. I never read them. If a man's jaws close with a snap when he talks that man has opinions that are strong and can put up a good argument. He will put up a good argument with our customers and a convincing one.

"On the other hand, if he closes his mouth loosely or his jaws wabble when he finishes a sentence he will put up a lame and uncertain line of argument with an obstinate customer, and obstinate customers are the ones we are after. Take a look at the jaws of the men who have been great vote getters and politicians, and you will see what I mean. It's a simple thing after all, isn't it?"—New York Sun.

KEPHALDOL

Cures Pain But Does Not Affect The Heart

First of all, it may be well to mention that "Kephaldol" is the prescription of one of the world's greatest nerve specialists — the famous Herr Doctor Stohr, of Vienna, Austria.

He has used "Kephaldol" in his private practice and hospital clinics, in thousands of cases of Headaches, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuritis, La Grippe, and other forms of Nerve Exhaustion.

The mere fact that Dr. Stohr originated "Kephaldol" is the only recommendation needed by most physicians and surgeons to commend the formula to their attention.

"Kephaldol" is the only pain-relieving remedy used by Dr. Stohr, because it is the only one that does not affect the heart or other organs and may be taken with perfect safety until a complete sure results.

"Kephaldol" Tablets may be obtained at most drug stores in 50c. tubes, or they will be sent on receipt of price by Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

LONGING.

YOU hear me roar?
I'm dying for
A chance to soar
High up and o'er
The sixteenth floor
With Wilbur Wright
Or any wight
To any height
In airy flight,
A human kite,
In wild delight
To sail away
Most any day,
To be as gay
And light as they
Who aviate
Where eagles play;
To make a date,
To idly stray
Where on display
The Milky way
Sends down a glow
To those below
And charges nothing
For the show.
It must be great
To steer her straight
For Mars
And stars
While cars
Must wait,
To take a spin
Up yonder in
The azure blue
As comets do.
'Twould seem too lovely
To be true.
Then must I glue
Myself to earth
When it is worth
A monarch's toil
To reach the goal
That's set on high
To brave the sky?
No; I will fly,
Or I will know
The reason why.

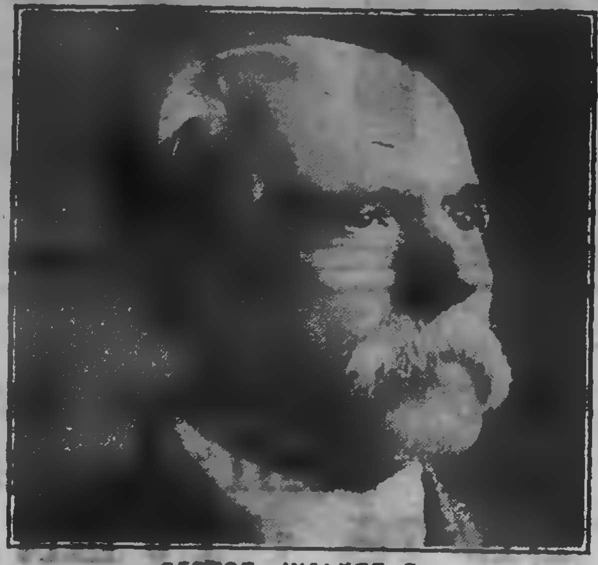
FOUGHT WITH LORD ROBERTS

Veteran of Crimean War and Indian Mutiny Suffered Horribly With Rheumatism, Until "Fruit-a-tives" Brought Welcome Relief.



GEORGE WALKER, Esq.

Chatham, Ont., April 3rd., 1913

"I am a veteran of the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny, volunteering from the Royal Artillery into the Royal Engineers, and served under Lord Roberts during the Indian Mutiny, and am a pensioner of the British Government. Fierce hand-to-hand fighting and continual exposure, left me a great sufferer from Rheumatism, so much so that my legs swelled up making it impossible for me to walk. My bowels were so constipated that I only had one passage a week until I got to using "Fruit-a-tives." They cured me of both the Constipation and Rheumatism. To-day, my bowels move immediately after breakfast, and in my regular employment, I walk thirty miles a day and enjoy perfect health. No more Rheumatism or Constipation.

You are at perfect liberty to publish this letter and my photo if it will be advantageous to "Fruit-a-tives." GEO. WALKER

This letter of Mr. Walker tells how to cure Rheumatism, but does not tell WHY "Fruit-a-tives" cures this trouble. Rheumatism is the result of poisoned blood, due to weakness or faulty action of the bowels, kidneys or skin. In Mr Walker's case, Rheumatism was the result of excessive Constipation. Waste matter remained too long in the system, was absorbed by the blood and inflammed the nerves and membranes in his legs. When he started to take "Fruit-a-tives," these tablets immediately acted on the liver. More bile was given up to move the bowels. As the bowels were cleaned, the poisonous waste matter was removed, the blood became clear and the nerves were no longer irritated. To-day, Mr. Walker is enjoying vigorous health that was his when he fought with Lord Roberts and helped to plant the British Flag firmly in our Over-Seas Possessions. He is as active as a man of forty and cannot praise "Fruit-a-tives" too highly. Try them yourself, 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c., at all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

BOWSER'S BOUNTY

He Offers to Bestow it in Most Generous Fashion

By M. Quad.

(Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.)

"BY the way," said Mr. Bowser as he looked up from his paper, "have you heard from your mother lately?"

"Had a letter yesterday," replied Mrs. Bowser, "and she asked to be remembered to you."

"Dear old soul! I think as much of her as I do of my own mother. I'll give you $10 tomorrow to buy a nice little present for her. Is your father well?"

"Not very. He's very old, you know."

"Poor old daddy! There was never a nicer man in all the world. I'll give you $10 to buy something for him as well."

"You are awfully kind," said Mrs. Bowser as she shed a tear.

"Everybody ought to do what is right. I was thinking this afternoon that I cut you pretty close on money matters. I suppose I ought to make you a regular weekly allowance."

"It's awfully sweet and kind of you."

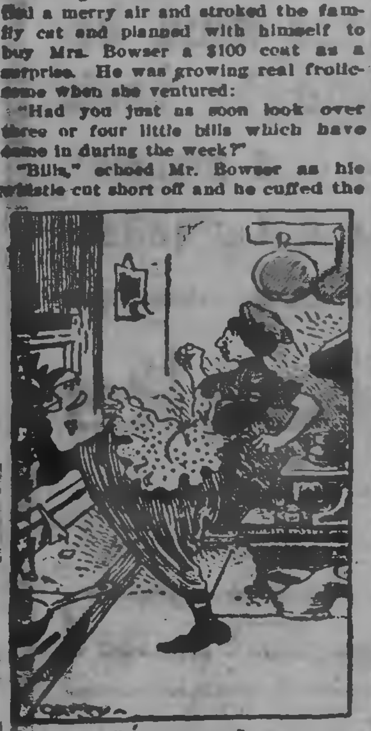
"No taffy, my dear," laughed Mr. Bowser. "I was going to say $5 per week, but I guess I'll make it $10. If that won't do you let me know later on and I'll make it $15 or $20."

Mrs. Bowser Ventures.

In his good nature Mr. Bowser whistled a merry air and stroked the family cat and planned with himself to buy Mrs. Bowser a $100 coat as a surprise. He was growing real frolicsome when she ventured:

"Had you just as soon look over three or four little bills which have come in during the week?"

"Bills," echoed Mr. Bowser as his whistle cut short off and he cuffed the cat off his knee. "I always pay cash down, and I don't know anything about bills."



"TO GET EVEN."

Clouds on the Horizon.

"You—you didn't happen to have the change, and you told me to go ahead. A water pipe burst one day, you know, and you told me to send for the plumber. Here is his bill. I'm sure it's a very reasonable one."

"Two dollars, eh? Two dollars for plugging up a pinhole leak in a water pipe! Does that tinker imagine I'm a fool or a lunatic? I'll never pay it this side of the grave! What else?"

"You told me to get the doorbell fixed, and the bill is $1."

"Doorbell? I told you? Never! If the doorbell was out of order then it was because you stood there and hauled and pulled and yanked on it and finally got it out by the roots. You'll pay that bill out of your own pocket!"

"And I had a broken window pane in the kitchen replaced," said Mrs. Bowser. "The bill is only 80 cents."

"Eighty cents!" shouted Mr. Bowser. "Eighty cents for a small pane of glass, Mrs. Bowser? The cook probably got mad because I found fault with the coffee and stood before the window and deliberately kicked out a pane of glass to get even. I'll keep it out of her wages!"

"You know I told you that the lock on the basement door was out of order?"

"Never! Never heard the slightest allusion to it!"

"And you said I should send for a locksmith?"

"Never! Never!"

"And the bill is 40 cents."

"Forty cents! Forty cents for two minutes' work! And if that lock was out of order how came it so? Did that cook, in order to get even with me again, stand there with a crowbar and whack and jab and pound until she broke the lock? That's 40 cents more out of her wages! Are these all?"

"Yes. If you don't feel like paying them I'll do it out of my weekly allowance. The whole thing only amounts to $4.20."

Rank Presumption.

"Your weekly allowance?" he repeated. "Mrs. Bowser, have you a weekly allowance from a royalty or an estate?"

"You said you'd give me one, you know."

"Never! If I said anything at all touching the subject it was to the effect that if you had an allowance you'd pay a dollar a pound for sausages."

"Then you can send mother $5 and pay these bills with the rest," she suggested.

"Mother! Five dollars! You may or may not have a mother, Mrs. Bowser. I do not know or care. But why should I sent her $5?"

"You—you said you would."

"Never! It has never occurred to me in the last fifteen years to ask if you had parents or were an orphan. It seems you've got a mother and want me to send her $5 a week on top of all the waste and extravagance. It is high time that we paused and asked ourselves whither we are drifting. Every night for the last month I have dreamed that we were on the way to the poorhouse."

"I had planned to spend a pleasant evening with you."

"Even as I was thinking of buying you a costly present as a surprise you—you"—

"I handed you these bills," interrupted Mrs. Bowser. "I said I would pay them out of my own pocket."

Fighting For Principle.

"Yes, you handed me those bills. I do not complain of that. I do not complain of the amount, which is insignificant. What I want you to understand is that there is a great underlying principle in this matter.

"Mrs. Bowser," he went on as his thumbs went up to the armholes of his vest, "it is needless to say more on the subject. If you cannot discern the great underlying principle talk is idle. I will retire to my library, and should any one call you can say that I am busy—very, very busy—and that it is quite likely you may shortly go home to see your mother. Good night, Mrs. Bowser; good night."

Mrs. Bowser sat there for an hour and tried to figure it out, and the nearest she could come to it was: Never present a bill to your husband when he's good natured. Wait until he's "off" and the bills can't make him much "offer."

That Was Going Too Far.

The fellow who tells unbelievable stories came into the office the other day and started in to talk.

"My two sisters are just back from three months in Europe," he announced.

That seemed reasonable, so we were polite about it.

"They are just kids, you know, and this is the first time they were ever across. They had a great time."

We believed it, and said so. Was the man's invention failing that he handed out commonplaces like that?

"Yes, sir, they went every place and saw everything. But here's a funny thing. Neither one of them sent a single picture postcard from anywhere and"—

Superior Wisdom.

"Sir, I can't find it," said the amateur fireman, looking for a fire in a farmyard, an alarm for which had roused the village fire brigade.

"You can't find what?" asked the captain.

"The fire," replied the fireman.

"Then go and strike a light and look for it, but don't keep poking about in the dark in that foolish way," said the captain, conscious of his importance.—Chicago News.

Between Two Evils.

"What's a dilemma?" asked one small boy.

"Well," replied the other, "it's something like this: If your father says he'll punish you if you don't let your mother cut your hair, that's a dilemma."—New York Independent.

"I'm a meat inspector," answered the man addressed.

Van Albert—No. I mean to say that I never enjoyed one.

BE SURE IT'S THE 'AUBURN HAIR GIRL'

She Represents Parisian Sage An Invigorating Hair Tonic. Quickly Removes Dandruff.

You can use nothing better than Parisian Sage to make the hair soft, fluffy and abundant. It stops itching head, cleanses, cools and invigorates the scalp, and removes dandruff with one application.

If your hair is getting thin, or is harsh, dull and lifeless, do not despair—follow the example of others whose hair you admire—give it daily attention. A thorough brushing and frequent applications of Parisian Sage well rubbed into the scalp will do wonders.

If you have dandruff it is because the scalp is too dry and flakes off. Nourish the scalp with Parisian Sage and dandruff disappears.

When the hair splits, is dry, brittle, and thin, soften it up, make it grow. Surely use Parisian Sage—it supplies hair and scalp needs. It is faintly perfumed and free from grease and stickiness. Parisian Sage really does make the head feel fine—the scalp perfectly healthy and gives the hair that enviable gloss and beauty you desire. Money back from—a—if you are not satisfied. The "Girl With The Auburn Hair" is on every 50 cent bottle. Sold at drug and toilet counters everywhere. Try it now—you will surely like Parisian Sage.

AMAZONS OF THE ALPS

Big and Brawny, They Do the Roughest Kind of Heavy Work

On the mountainous slopes of the Bardomecchian district of the Alps there is a curious race of powerfully built people. For some reason best known to themselves they build their dwellings in spots inaccessible to ordinary mortals. The people of the neighboring valleys are quite a different class of beings and are looked upon as weaklings, which they certainly are compared with the sturdy men and women who ascend the steep and rugged roads leading to primitive cottages. The men are rough of mien and boast a physique that is extraordinary, but they are not so remarkable as the women, who may be described as peaceful Amazons.

Most marked is the difference between the women who live in this portion of Italy and the French ones whose home is but a few miles away in the valley of the Isere, between Chambery and Modane. The latter are ordinary peasantry, but the former attract the attention of the visitor immediately by reason of their size, strength and powers of endurance.

There are several types of women in this district of the unfrequented Alps. Dark complexions suggestive of southern Italy, brunettes and blonds may be seen working side by side. All, however, are tall, well built and muscular. The work these women are capable of and which they do cheerfully is enough to terrify any average laborer in the British isles. It is not a little gentle farming or milking or anything that can be done with comparative ease, but hard, laborious work of all kinds, requiring much physical strength and sustained effort.

To see women carrying loads of a hundredweight and more for miles along rough roads and up steep inclines is quite common, and that a stranger should comment upon the feat is to them incomprehensible. They have been accustomed to work since the days of their girlhood and cannot imagine the delicate ladies of the big towns.—London Standard.

SKOBELEV, THE MADCAP.

Millet Thought Him Almost a Reincarnation of Napoleon.

A few days before he sailed for Europe on the trip which ended with his death on the Titanic, Frank D. Millet said to a friend in his studio:

"Skobelev! How well I remember him! We used to call him the Madcap. That was when he swam the Danube against orders, dashed into Plevna without re-enforcements and committed other little indiscretions of that sort which only a madman or a genius would attempt.

"Later I came to recognize him as almost a reincarnation of Napoleon. His ambition was literally about the same as Napoleon's. He wanted Russia to conquer the world. I stood with him once on the heights above Constantinople—it was in March, 1878, just before the treaty of San Stefano—when he outlined to me his schemes, which began with the absorption of the Ottoman empire, then extended to a conquest of India and concluded with piratical designs on England in Europe.

"It was unbelievably naive, and I should have dismissed the talk as the veriest moonshine had I not been a witness during the preceding months to the man's rise from an inferior position, where he was under a cloud, to a lieutenant generalship, with which he had become the hero of the war. He was then the practical hand which Russia held on Turkey's throat. He died only a few years later, miserable, wasted, futile. A strange man, a great man; I think the most remarkable man I have ever known."—Richard Barry in Century.

Doubles of Famous Men.

Tennyson, who resembled Dickens, had, despite disparity of years, an almost perfect "double" in Sir Leslie Stephen. Perhaps it is similarity of occupation or interests that breeds resemblance, for Professor Schrader was so like Huxley that even their intimate friend Grant Duff mistook one for the other, and Sir Laurence Alma-Tadema was scarcely distinguishable from his brother artist, Du Maurier. The theory, however, hardly accounts for the ludicrous resemblance of Edmund Yates and the late shah of Persia.—London Chronicle.

Real Pleasant.

Widowed Father (to his ten-year-old daughter)—Do you know, Minnie, that your governess is going to get married? Minnie—I'm so glad to get rid of the hateful thing. I was afraid she was never going to leave us. Who is she going to marry? Widowed Father—Me.—London Telegraph.

Just Accident.

"I don't see what claim you have for this accident insurance," said the agent. "You were thrown out of a wagon, I admit, but, on your own statement, you were not hurt."

"Well, wasn't it by the merest accident I escaped injury?" suggested the claimant.—Puck.

A Wider Field.

"I think I'll be a trained nurse. I see many nurses marry millionaires."

"I would earnestly advise you to try the stage. Of course some millionaires go to hospitals, but more of them go to the musical comedies."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

EXPLOSIVE BURGLAR ALARM.

A Great Scheme if You Don't Mind Fireworks in the House.

Here is a most ingenious method of making a house burglar proof. It is the idea of a French chemist, who submitted it to the laboratory of La Nature, where it was tested and found to work according to specification. It consists in sprinkling upon the floor of the hall or vestibule a powder that will explode as soon as it is stepped upon, even if the intruder be shod with felt.

A very little powdered iodine is dusted over the floor. Ammonia is sprinkled over it in quantity sufficient to moisten the powder. This evaporates quickly and leaves a new substance, iodine nitrate, which will explode or detonate at the slightest touch.

A rat running across the floor, will set up a series of tiny explosions that will scare it into seven fits. A burglar treading on it will think he is walking over bunches of firecrackers. The noise will arouse the house.

This novel burglar preventive should not be used on parquet floors, as it may injure them, but it is ideal for use upon stone, concrete or tiled floors. —New York World.

RHEUMATISM DURING MARCH

Victims Can Cure Themselves With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

During the month of March people who are afflicted with rheumatism begin to have unpleasant reminders of their troubles. The weather is changeable—balmy and springlike one day, cold, raw and piercing the next. It is such sudden changes of weather that start the pangs and tortures of rheumatism, lumbago and sciatica going. But it must be borne in mind, that although weather conditions start the pains, the trouble is rooted in the blood, and can only be cured through the blood. All hte liniments and lotions in the world can't cure rheumatism. Rubbing may seem to ease the pain while you are rubbing, but there its value ends. Only by treating the disease through the blood can you cure rheumatism. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured so many thousands of cases of this trouble. The new, rich blood these pills actually make drives out the lumago and kindred troubles are banished. Among the many sufferers from rheumatism cured by this medicine is Mr. R. J. Sinclair, of Goshen, N. S., who says: "About two years ago I was laid up with rheumatism. For two months I could not walk and had to stay in an invalid's chair. My feet were badly swollen and my arms seemed to be paralyzed. I had been using doctor's medicine for a long time, but it did not seem to help me, and the doctor finally told me that the only thing that would cure me would be a change of climate. At this time I decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial and got a supply. After I had taken them for a while I found they were helping me, and I got a further supply, and they completely cured me, and I have not been sick one day since. I strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for this trouble."

If you suffer from rheumatism, or any other disease of the blood or nerves, begin to cure yourself to-day with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which under a fair trial will do for you what they have done for thousands of others. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

An Exalted Position.

"He used to be at the top of his profession, but one day he fell, and he will never again occupy his former exalted position."

"You surprise me. What was his position?"

"He was the apex of a 'human pyramid' with a team of acrobats."

Easily Explained.

"I wonder what is the matter with me?" he said. "I have a feeling of depression and I can't throw it off, no matter how I try."

"I know what is the matter," his wife replied. "You have an engagement with the dentist at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning, you know."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are not a new and untried remedy—our grandfathers used them. Half a century ago, before Confederation, they were on sale in nearly every drug or general store in the Canada of that day, and were the recognized cure in thousands of homes for Constipation, Indigestion, Biliousness, Rheumatism and Kidney and Liver Troubles. To-day they are just as effective, just as reliable as ever, and nothing better has yet been devised to

ARTIFICIAL DAYLIGHT

New Process Revolutionises Many Trades by Permitting Night Work.

The new process of making artificial daylight at night is quite simple, according to Arthur St. George Joyce, who writes on this subject in The Technical World Magazine. All that is needed, he explains, are two color screens and a strong incandescent light. Then the artificial light rays are passed through the screens, which draw out the excess of colorings that are foreign to daylight, and there remains true, pure and unvarying daylight.

Various cabinets, lamps and lights to produce daylight have been manufactured, but none has stood the test, continues the writer. In this latest invention a cabinet is employed. The cabinet is constructed in various sizes, but the one which is most convenient is 18 inches deep, 30 inches wide, and 28 inches high.

An incandescent gas light is placed at the top of the cabinet. There is a metal reflector to throw the light downward through the delicate screens which filter out the rays of red, orange and yellow, which are foreign to daylight except in a small way. In other words, the screens extract from the light excess of these colors.

The invention has a great field of usefulness in surgery and certain industries. Surgeons depend upon the color of the tissues to tell whether they are diseased or not. A great deal of surgery is done at night. In artificial light the tissues have not their true color. The invention will remedy that, in that operations may be performed by aid of daylight at any hour of the night.

In textile manufacturing, dying and color printing daylight at night will have many uses. In color printing, for instance, the presses can be run only so long as the ink put in by daylight lasts. With the aid of the invention presses can be run all night. In the sorting of cigars it is impossible to tell their color by artificial light. Likewise in dental work the exact color of artificial teeth cannot be determined at night. In paper manufacturing and in the manufacture of flour daylight is needed to differentiate the various grades.

Gossip In the Club.

Only one thing is fatal to the happy social life of any country community, and that is gossip. If the women in their clubs cannot find in the wide field of housekeeping, chicken raising, preserving, care of children, public schools, music, art, reading, public improvements, good government, health, sewing, entertaining and all other delightful household tasks enough material to lift the meetings above petty personalities, then the little club or whatever it is called is doomed. Whenever gossip is allowed to creep into any organization people will begin to break up into little cliques or circles or groups, and the whole thing fails.—Hilda Richmond in Farm and Fireside.

Bread Cast Upon Water.

When it came to his turn to give his mite in the Sunday collection, says The Glasgow News, he fumbled among his pocket's contents (a florin and some pennies) for the customary copper and, dropping it in, passed the open box to his neighbor. As he handed the box over he noticed, to his horror, his shining florin among the coins it contained. He had given it in mistake for a penny. Without a moment's hesitation he seized the box ere it had gone too far, picked out the two shilling piece, substituted a penny for it and, blushing, but relieved, allowed the collecting to proceed. Later, on making a chance inspection of his money, he found he had two florins.

Harding Soft Iron.

To harden soft iron wet it with water and scatter over its surface powdered yellow prussiate of potash; then heat to a cherry red heat, which causes the potash to melt and coat the surface of the soft iron, then immerse quickly in cold water and repeat the operation. A white heat must not be used, as this would not harden, but oxidize the iron. Care must be taken not to use red prussiate of potash instead of the yellow; it will not answer.

Mother Earth.

When Junius Brutus and the sons of Tarquin asked the famous Delphic oracle who was to succeed Superbus on the throne of Rome they received for an answer, "He who shall first kiss his mother." As the two princes were hastening home to fulfill what they thought was meant Brutus fell to the earth and cried out, "Thus do I kiss thee, O earth, the mother of us all!" This is perhaps the earliest recorded instance of the use of the term "Mother Earth."

Eggs Scalloped With Meat.

Take three eggs, three tablespoonfuls bread or cracker crumbs, one-half teaspoonful of mixed mustard, one tablespoonful butter, two of hot milk, salt and paprika. Put about three tablespoonfuls of this dry mixture aside and mix the remainder with half the butter, the mustard and enough milk to form a thick paste. Butter individual dishes, one for each egg, and fill with the paste, leaving a hollow in the centre for the egg. Carefully break an egg into each of these hollows and shake over the top of each egg some of the dry mixture laid aside. Put bits of butter on top of each and bake.

Their First Meeting.

"I am very glad to meet you again, Miss Dowsley," he said when they had been introduced to each other.

"Again?" she replied. "Why, have we met before?"

"Well, perhaps we haven't exactly met before, but you tickled my chin with your feather for about an hour one evening in an elevated car."

DRYDOCK PLAN IS GOING AHEAD

On Saturday, R. H. Fraser, C. E. Government Engineer, was in the city arranging for the completion of the transfer of the land, seven acres in all, expropriated a few months ago for the dry dock at Lock 6.

The land includes ground for a spur line from the C.P.R. The property will accommodate besides the dry dock and spur, basins, warehouses and repair shops.

THE WILL OF DEAN COTY

Nearly all of His Estate is Left to Charity

Hamilton, March 16.—The will of the Very Reverend Joseph Henry Coty, formerly the priest in charge of St. Patrick's parish, has been entered for probate. The will disposes of an estate valued at $6,129.51, made up as follows: Household goods and furniture, $25; book debts, $586.47; bank and other stocks, $35; cash in the bank of British North America, $4,268.59; books, $200; and clothing and personal effects, $75.

Out of his small fortune the deceased father remembered the church and kindred societies as liberally as his means would allow. To his brother, Louis Vincent Coty, he left $200 and such of the deceased's personal effects as he desires. To the executors of the estate, in their official capacity, he left a legacy of $600 for masses. He left $100 to the St. Vincent de Paul society of St. Patrick's conference, Hamilton. The executors are to take such books as they may desire and the remainder are to be sold, the money to be applied for masses. The Catholic church extension society, Toronto, is bequeathed $100. The bulk of the estate, which is valued at $5,000, is left to the reverend mother of St. Joseph community, Hamilton.

ROAD MASTERS POUND KEEPERS FENCE VIEWERS

Ennismore Council Passes By-law Making the Appointments.

STATUTE LABOR.

At the last meeting of the Ennismore Council, a by-law was passed appointing roadmasters, poundkeepers and fence viewers for the township as follows:

Roadmasters—Thos. Colvert, Wm. J. Clarke, Richard Nurse, John Conway, Lawrence Twomey, Clayton Telford, Michael Geary, Joseph Doran, Edward O'Donaghue, Jas. Sullivan, Daniel Crough, Daniel Holland, James Guiry, Wm. Haggart, John Brick, John Young, Cornelius O'Reilly, Patrick M. Twomey, Thos. Cavanagh, John Geary, Frank Scollard, Edward Harrington, Jas. Cadigan, Eugene Murphy, Michael Holland, Patrick Y. Crowley, John K. Galvin, Richard Killen, Wm. J. Crough, Michael Gannon, Maurice O'Connor, Thos. Flood, jr., John J. Hickson, Wm. Fence Viewers—Eugene Moloney, Edward Harrington, Patrick Twomey, John K. Galvin, Eugene Murphy, Thos. Flood, Joseph Doran, David Quinlan, Wm. J. Clark.

It was moved by Mr. Perdue, seconded by Mr. Guiry, that any person assessed for statute labor, shall be permitted to commute the same by payment of $1 for each day's labor; provided he shall pay his commutation in full to the overseer of the division to which he belongs, on or before the time such overseer shall call upon him for or to notify him to do his labor; or if the work is not done or the commutation be not paid, he shall be charged $1.25 per day in his taxes.

HIBERNIANS AT CHURCH.

Yesterday morning, at the eight o'clock mass at St. Peter's Cathedral, the Ancient Order of Hibernians were present, and received Holy Communion in a body. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, who celebrated mass, spoke a few words commending them on the good work they have done in the city, and also for their large turn-out.

TWO MEN SENT BACK TO JAIL

Police Chief Wants to be Sure Before Allowing Them to Go.

James Maloney and George Brickley, the two strangers arrested here recently on the charge of vagrancy were further remanded this morning by Magistrate Dumble until next Monday. It was at first supposed that Maloney was the man wanted in Michigan, Ind., for murder. Word received on Saturday was to the effect that he was not the man. Mr. D. O'Connell appeared this morning for the prisoners and asked that they be released on bail of $100 but Chief Thompson asked for the remand.

LEFT $13,700 FOR HUSBAND AND CHILDREN

Mr. J. H. Renwick Will Share Equally With Brothers and Sisters.

Toronto, March 16.—At her death on 13th August, Mrs. Jane Rennick, who lived in this city, left to her family property valued at $13,700.51.

The estate included furniture $200, mortgages $5,614, $26.11 of a bank account, and equity as shown in the following real estate: No. 135 Sunnyside Avenue, $1,817.86, in Nos. 122 and 124 on the same street, $2,775.56, and No. 45 Harbord Street, $3,266.98.

No will having been left, administration when granted would apportion the husband, Hancock Rennick, one-third of the estate and the balance equally among the children: John, organist, Peterborough; Mary, wife of P. C. Henry Richmond, Isabel Richmond, Vancouver; William F., Merchant, Toronto; Alice, Helen and George.

FOUND THAT VICTIM WAS INTOXICATED

Fatal Fire in Lindsay Partly Due to Dirt of Premises.

Lindsay, March 16.—The adjourned inquest into the cause of the death of John Madison, one of the victims of the fire which occurred here on 11th instant, was resumed before Coroner Wood, and the authorities were severely criticized for their laxity in allowing such conditions as were shown to exist in the Madison household. After the proceedings terminated, Mrs. Madison and her mother, Mrs. Perrault, were taken to the House of Refuge. The one child who survived, it is understood, will be cared for by the Children's Aid Society.

The jury found John Madison came to his death as the result of burns sustained while in an intoxicated condition in his residence, on the 11th instant. The fire was caused by the head of a match falling among a lot of inflammable material consisting of rags, paper and other litter. It was held that the condition of the premises and the surroundings generally, were unsanitary, and that the authorities should have taken action to remedy the same.

ASQUITH'S REPLY TO REQUESTS FOR DETAILS OF HIS LOCAL OPTION SCHEME FOR ULSTER

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, March 16. — The Prime Minister, in the Commons to-day, replying to a number of requests for further details of his Ulster local option scheme, by which Ulster counties may remain out of Home Rule if the majority of the electors so decide, said he did not feel much encouraged over the reception of his proposal. He added, "I am anxious in the interests of agreement and peace, that the main principles of our proposals be considered on their merits without being encumbered with minute details liable to draw the discussion into backwaters."

Bonar Law declared it was impossible to debate the proposals without details being given. Asquith then promised to give the House a chance to discuss his refusal to give details without demanding to know whether or not the Opposition would accept the main principles.

HAVELOCK MAN AWARDED $725 FOR CHILDREN'S DEATH

He Asked Damages of $5000 From the Corporation of Havelock

John Robinson, of Havelock, who claimed $5,000 for the death of three children because of a cave-in at property owned by the corporation of Havelock, has been given judgment for $725. Mr. Justice Kelly gave his decision at Toronto on Saturday.

The jury hearing the case at the Winter Assizes brought in a verdict for $725.

PRISONER WAS SCORED BY JUDGE

Evidence Against Joseph O'Toole Not Sufficent to Convict

In the case of Joseph O'Toole, who appeared before Judge Huycke this morning, his Honor held that the evidence was not sufficient to warrant the prisoner being convicted, and O'Toole was discharged. O'Toole was charged with a serious offence against a seventeen-year-old girl.

G. N. Gordon offered no defence on behalf of the prisoner.

"You are one of the most contemptible curs I have ever seen," was the phrase applied to the prisoner by his Honor in dismissing him.

Continuing, Judge Huycke expressed himself that it was one of the most unsavory cases he had ever heard. During all his experience he had never felt so indignant over such an affair as heard this morning. The only evidence taken worth while was that of Detective Newhall, but that was insufficient to convict. There was not the slightest doubt, however, of the prisoner's guilt and his procuring the girl for unlawful purposes, whether for his own use or others. He stood by and watched others wrong her. If this young man had been found guilty he would probably have received five years and on second conviction, lashes.

His Honor expressed his deepest regret that he could not find the prisoner guilty. "There is not sufficient words in the English dictionary to express what I think of you," he said. "After this let girls alone and I hope this will prove a lesson to you. You are discharged.

The case of Vincent O'Toole was allowed to stand over till three o'clock.

He was also discharged.

LOCAL MAN PROMOTED

Mr. Rogers has been with the Canadian Pacific Railway for some years. He left for his new sphere of work to-day.

THE JAGSHIP OF THE TRENT

The Review publishes the "Jagship of the Trent" again by request.

Hurrah for the Bessie Butler,
Hurrah for her gallant crew,
As spick and span a little craft
As ever the Grit flag flew.
Whenever the "boys" got thirsty,
And all their money was spent,
They boarded the Bessie Butler,
The Jagship of the Trent.

The cargo she took was precious,
And they stowed it all below,
Rum and whiskey and lager,
Right down in the hold would go;
And never was crew so handy,
With never a thought of care,
And the tools they carried were corkscrews,
And each man had a pair.

There was gin for the gallant captain,
And beer for the Bo'sun bold;
They spliced the main brace every hour
When the weather was hot or cold;
They sang and played the piano
From eve until break of day,
And the theme of the song was Stratton,
And the chorus was Laurier.

Hurrah for the Bessie Butler,
The boat so smart and trim,
Loaded with beer and vittals,
She did great work for "Jim."
She did her duty nobly,
Wherever she was sent,
The good old Bessie Butler,
The jag-ship of the Trent.

FATHER MINEHAN TO SPEAK HERE

Well Known Priest Will Speak on Temperance.

The Total Abstinence Society of the Church of the Sacred Heart have attarned such a success in their campaign to bring in new members that Rev. J. J. O'Brien, the spiritual adviser, has procured Rev. L. Minehan, pastor of St. Peter's parish, of Toronto, to speak next Sunday. Rev. Father Minehan is known from coast to coast for his work along the temperance line and the subjet of "Temperance," on which he will speak at both masses in the Church of the Sacred Heart next Sunday will no doubt be very instructive. Rev. Father Minehan will also speak at Vespers.

ONE CASE OF MISFORTUNE

Plucky Woman Works Hard to Provide for Children and Sick Husband

Some people are born and followed through life with hard luck of the worst character. A Review reporter was acquainted with the case of a woman who is triving night and day to keep the wolf away from the door and so provide for her sick husband and four small children.

About seven years ago this particular family came to Canada and resided in the vicinity of Stirling. The husband one day mysteriously disappeared from his home and was not heard of for three or four years, when he was discovered in a Toronto hospital, where he was suffering from injuries received by a cave-in of a sewer, where he was working. He was removed to this city, where he has since been cared for by his wife. The man is not able to work, therefore the duties of supplying the household devolve on the wife. Last week, after a serious illness, the man fell and injured his leg, and this injury necessitated the attention of a medical man, and, as a result, more confinement to his bed.

STORM AND TIDAL WAVE IN RUSSIA

More Than 250 People Have Perished In Disaster Which Has Befallen Communities on the Sea of Azov---Telegraphic Lines Are Down and Details Are Meagre

EKATERINODAR, Russia, March 16.—More than 100 persons perished yesterday in the inundation of tha towns of Stanitza and Achtyrekaja by a tidal wave from the Sea of Azov. The wave struck the towns during a violent hurricane which swept the Province of Kuban.

Over 150 persons also were drowned in floods in Yasenkaja.

A dam collapsed in the town of Temryuk, situated on the Taman Penisula, 98 miles northwest of this city, flooding the greater part of the city and drowning many persons.

The sea washed away 380 buildings in Achtyrekaja.

Temryuk is a historic town with a population of 16,000. It once was the seat of the Turkish fortress, Adass.

The towns of Stanitza, Achtyrekaja and Yasenkaja do not appear on most of the maps but are small communities bordering on the Sea of Azov.

The Province of Kuban, in which the stricken towns are located, is in Southern Russia, and has coast lines on both the Black Sea and the Sea of Azov. The population of the province aggregates about 2,000,000 persons, of whom two-fifths are Cossacks. The country is extremely fertile and extensively used in the culture of grain. Cattle breedings also is carried on on a large scale.

Storm Break Communication.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 16.—The hurricane which swept the Province of Kuban, Southern Russia, on Saturday, was so violent that all the telegraph lines were badly damaged, making communication almost impossible. Meagre despatches deceived yesterday reported that 1,500 lives had been lost as the result of the tidal wave from the Sea of Azov, but no reliable details of the disaster came through.

Dust In Snowstorm.

TIFLIS, Russia, March 16. — An unusual phenomenon occurred here and in adjacent towns yesterday. The sky was covered early in the morning with dark yellow clouds and fog. Later there was a heavy snowfall mixed with dust, which covered the ground in a thick layer of pasty mud. The phenomenon is attributed to storms in the Baku district, where the wind raised such tremendous clouds of dust.

CHURCH OF THE IMMACULATE CONCEPTION IS NAME OF NEW EDIFICE FOR EAST CITY PARISH

For the past year or more preparations have been under way for the formation of a new Catholic parish in the city and as the plans have matured, a meeting was held yesterday afternoon in St. Alphonsus Lyceum, of the Catholic men of East City. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., presided and Very Rev. Dean McColl was also present. At this meeting it was decided to erect a church and the location selected was on the St.Joseph's Hospital property, facing Rogers street.

On account of general demands, of the steady growing local parishes, which will have to be met, it was deemed advisable for the present to finish only the basement. This will be properly fitted and will serve to meet the requirements of the congregation for the next few years. If, however, East City parish grows with the same rapidity as has the parish of the Sacred Heart, where a third mass on Sunday will soon be inaugurated, the church will soon be completed.

There are at present 225 Catholic families in the domains of the new parish and when completed the new edifice will afford accommodation for 1000 persons. It will be as large as the church of the Sacred Heart, and of Romanesque design.

Simultaneously with the new church, a rectory will be erected and every attention will be given to the spiritual welfare of the parishioners. The church will be dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary and will be known as the Church of the Immaculate Conception, the parish will also bear the title. The new parish embraces that section of the St. Peter's parish which lies east of the Otonabee river.

Contract to be Let.

The contract for the erection of the new church has not as yet been awarded, but will be in the course of a few days and the work will be commenced immediately. It is expected that everything will be in readiness for the opening of the church some time in October, the month which is dedicated to Our Lady of the Most Holy Rosary.

The meeting also decided to go ahead with the renovation of the new Separate school in East City and to have it completed by the opening of the September term. It is anticipated that some four rooms will then be occupied. As was recently announced, the lot at the corner of Concession and St. Luke streets has been purchased by his Lordship Bishop O'Brien and it will be used for House of Providence purposes.

DAMAGES OF $5000 ASKED BY MR. M. CARTON

FATHER SAYS KINBERLEY WAS AT HIS HOME

Word is Received From Police Authorities in England.

Chief Thompson received some particulars from Lt.-Col. H. Watkins of Worcestershire, England, to-day in connection with the Kimberley confession of murder. The communication gave a few facts regarding the case, and also a statement from Kimberley's father to the effect that his son Alfred Kimberley slept at home the night the murder took place. His reason for forbidding his son to remain at home after the murder was on account of his intimacy with a married woman.

GOOD SALE OF SHAMROCKS; RECEIPTS TOTAL $862

Parishes in the Surrounding Country Have Yet to Make Returns

BISHOP GRATEFUL

The united efforts of the Ladies' Aid Societies of St. Peter's and Sacred Heart parishes coupled with the generosity of the general public, caused Shamrock Day to be a grand success. Not having a precedent in this city, the idea was something new and doubts for its success were at first entertained, but the citizens responded readily to the request of "Buy a Shamrock for the orphans," and success was met.

The sum realized in the city totalled $862, but surrounding parishes were also assisting and it is estimated that when all the returns are in the total will be over $1,000. In speaking of the success yesterday morning at St. Peter's Cathedral, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, thanked the Catholics of the city for the assistance they rendered, and also stated that he was indeed thankful and grateful to all citizens who helped greatly in bringing about such grand results. He was pleased to learn that the ladies were shown every courtesy. There was evidence that the strife and hard feelings only too often prevailing in a city of this kind, were covered up and forgotten, and warm hearts of all creeds greeted such good causes as Tag Day and Shamrock Day.

The committee whose untiring efforts made Shamrock Day what it was, was composed of the following ladies: Mrs. N. T. Laplante, Mrs. J. Coughlin, Mrs. Dunn, Mrs. W. Merrill, and Mrs. T. McGrath. The ladies who had charge of the refreshments in St. Alphonsus Lyceum, which were given the ladies selling the Shamrocks, were: Miss Croft, Miss Nevin, Mrs. Shaver and Mrs. R. Sheehy.

The proceeds, as stated before, will go toward the upkeep of the St. Vincent's Orphanage, House of Providence, and St. Joseph's Hospital. The ladies are very grateful to the Children's Aid Society for their kindness in allowing them the use of their cash boxes.

Sixty-One Hurt In Wreck.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 16.—Miss Julia Highberg, 22, of Minneapolis, was killed and more than 60 other passengers were injured, several fatally, when two coaches of a nine car passenger train on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, & Omaha Railway Saturday night left the rails and rolled down an embankment at Mendota, Minn. The first part of the train remained on the tracks and came to St. Paul with the dead and injured. The train left Omaha for St. Paul early Saturday.

BUST OF COL. BY THE WORK OF MR. KARL SIMPSON

Saturday Night says:—The Women's Canadian Historical Society, of Ottawa, was inaugurated in the year 1898, by the late Lady Edgar, President of the Women's Canadian Historical Society, of Toronto. The president of the Ottawa organization this year is Mrs. J. B. Simpson.

At the present time the Society is working for two great objects. One is a suitable memorial to the birth of our Dominion, a worthy national aim for so distinguished a society. Secondly a fit memorial to Colonel By, the founder of Ottawa, a municipal object meriting the highest praise and also success. In regard to Colonel By, an event of peculiar interest occurred recently in Ottawa, when a bust of Colonel By was put on view in the window of the Grand Trunk Railway office. This was declared an excellent likeness of the Colonel and is the work of Mr. Karl Simpson, formerly of Ottawa, now of Peterborough, the son of Mrs. J. B. Simpson. This young artist based his work on a careful examination of the painting and silhouette in Miss Read's possession, the only known likeness of the Colonel.

A statue to Colonel By on Connaught Square would be very appropriate, says the Ottawa Journal. Montreal has its statue of Maisonneuve on the Place D'Armes; Ottawa should have Colonel By on the Square. An equestrian statue showing the Colonel on his famous old charger would be an adequate representation. The base should be composed of the historic stones bearing the crest of the Royal British Engineers with the date of completion of the Rideau Canal, now being carefully preserved for the Public Works Department in the Archives from the demolition of the old Sappers' Bridge.

Colonel John By was a most remarkable young lieutenant in the Royal Engineers, who came to Canada in the year 1802, remained at Quebec for nine years and then went out to Portugal for the campaigns of the Peninsular War. In 1826 he came to Canada again to superintend the construction of the Rideau Canal. That work is still a testimony to his skill and persistence, but above all, this pioneer, soldier and engineer should be remembered as the founder of our Federal Capital.

NEW GENERAL SECRETARY APPOINTED FOR Y.M.C.A.

Mr. C. N. Meserve of Kingston Will Succeed Mr. A. A. Hainsworth in May

Kingston, March 16.—It has been learned with surprise and regret that C. N. Meserve has tendered his resignation to the board of directors of the Y.M.C.A. as general secretary in charge of local work. It was subsequent upon his acceptance of the offer of the general secretaryship of the Peterborough association, and will take effect on May 1st.

From the directors and the senior, intermediate and junior membership of the local "Y" the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Meserve calls for expressions of appreciation of their worth. The Kingston association has enjoyed a period of progress, during the present general secretary's term of office, the co-operation of the membership, through the channels of the young men's cabinet, the Bible classes, the glee club, the physical department and the numerous boys' clubs, had never reached the present harmonious state. Mrs. Meserve has been a member of the ladies' auxiliary, and a moving figure in connection with the social events of the young men.

Mr. Meserve succeeded E. F. Trimble here in March of 1912. After a number of years' experience in New York state, he came to Kingston from the Genesee branch of the "Y" at Buffalo. Though, of course, an American, he declares himself much in love with Canada and Kingston, and while regretting that the offer he has accepted at this time in a sphere which he feels allows for greater usefulness, he is pleased that it is in Canada. His relations here have been most harmonious. The Y.M.C.A. work at Peterborough is in a state of advancement, supported as it is with an up-to-date building, which Kingston at present lacks.

Ill health, it is understood, is responsible for the resignation of Mr. A. A. Hainsworth. The directors are also endeavoring to secure a successor for Mr. J. J. Thompson, physical director, whose resignation goes into effect May 1st.

ANNUAL MEETING OF CURLING CLUB

The annual meeting of the Curling Club will take place to-night in the Curling Rink at eight o'clock. The election of officers for the ensuing year will take place as well as distribution of the prizes won this season, so every member is urgently requested to be present. The secretary's financial statement will also be received.

STARTING AFRESH?

German Paper Says Dr. Rudolp Diesel Is Now In Canada.

BERLIN, March 16.—The Abend Zeitung, Munich, publishes, under reserve, a statement that Dr. Rudolf Diesel is not dead, but, according to letters received, has begun life anew in Canada.

Diesel was the inventor of the motor bearing his name and which is being applied successfully for ships using oil as motive power. He disappeared some months ago while journeying on a Diesel motor-driven ship, and at that time it was thought he had deliberately committed suicide, or fallen overboard during a fainting spell and had been drowned. It was reported later that his financial affairs were not in good shape.

Lashes For Wife-Beater.

GUELPH, March 16.—Peter Driscoll, who lives on Bay street, it is alleged, went home drunk a few nights ago and beat his wife into insensibility, so badly that she was unable to appear against him in court until Saturday. She pleaded hard for her husband's release, but Magistrate Watt gave him ten days in jail and to get five lashes of the cat-o'-nine-tails, and if he appears before him again on a similar charge the dose will be doubled. The Driscolls have nine children, the youngest an infant of [illegible] months.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, MARCH 16, 1914.

A WORD FROM MR. ROLLINS.

THE SERMON of Rev. James Rollins yesterday evening was timely. Although many might not agree with everything he said, yet the general tenor of his discourse had an application to local affairs that citizens would do well to consider. What he was aiming at was to impress on the citizens of Peterborough the importance of beginning now to cope with problems that are arising at the present time and will arise in the future. He referred to city planning, to improvements such as parks, baths, sewage disposal, unsanitary housing and factory conditions, and, above all, the importance of the city as a factor in national life. When one considers the fact that the city vote in the United States is greater than the country vote, when the flow of people from rural to city municipalities is considered, when we remember that the budget of the city of Toronto is greater than that of the Province, besides numerous other striking facts, the importance of city problems is realised. The Review recently referred to the building of a Union Station for Peterborough — something which may or may not be needed now, but which will be a problem of this city's near future. Some work should be done at the present time in regard to these problems. Data could be gathered which would facilitate matters in the future and in drawing attention to this point Mr. Rollings is to be commended.

What he said in regard to new subdivisions of property was not, however, very clear. A law recently passed by the Ontario Legislature provides that plans for the subdivision of property within five miles of a city of 50,000 will have to be properly ratified. The law should be amended so that it would apply to cities like Peterborough. As to public ownership, he apparently extended the principle beyond that of a public utility. We must be careful not to restrain private initiative and industry if we wish to avoid the weaknesses of socialism.

PREMIER BORDEN AND THE SENATE.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER raised the objection in the House the other day that it would be unconstitutional to increase the membership of the Senate. Section 21 of the B.N.A. Act limits the number to seventy-two, while Section 28 fixed the maximum number at 78. Commenting on Section 21 of the Act Hassard says in his book on constitutional law, "There is now no limit to the number of Senators, but this section has never been repealed," and he makes a similar statement in regard to Section 28. At the present time there are 87 Senators.

No valid constitutional objection can therefore be raised to Premier Borden's plan to increase the representation in the Senate. Any objection that is made, such as Sir Wilfrid raised, can only be a temporary objection, not in keeping with the spirit of the constitution, and designed only for party purposes. Sir Wilfrid cannot hope to block, for very long, the legislating power of the House of Commons by making a handle of the Senate. Premier Borden has said that the Senate can never be above the Canadian people, and there are numerous precedents for means to secure that end. When the Reform Bill of 1832 and the Parliament Bill of a year or so ago was blocked by the House of Lords, in England, an increase in their number was threatened if the bills were thrown out. Sir Wilfrid's obstructionist tactics, while necessitating Premier Borden's proposition, have delayed the passage of much useful legislation.

A STRONG MAN.

JAMES BRYCE, once the British Ambassador to the United States, and author of that famous and excellent work, The American Commonwealth, has a chapter in that book, telling why great men do not become President. Mr. Bryce wrote with a long experience and profound knowledge of American politics. The advent of President Wilson, may, however, furnish an interesting contradiction to Mr. Bryce's conclusions. Stepping from the presidency of a leading American University to the governship of the State of New York, and thence to the presidency of the Republic, he was undoubtedly an unknown quantity in politics. His administration however, seems to show that a strong man is at the helm. His position on the Panama tolls question is an individual and interesting one. The President persists in demanding the repeal of the tolls as an infraction of treaty rights. The Senate and House of Representatives have held out strongly for the maintenance of the tolls.

Two strong factors are working for the President. One is the Congressional elections next November and the other is the present troubled condition of foreign affairs, in relation to the responsibility of the United States in Mexico. Nothing in Canadian politics resembles the power of the President of the United States in the congressional elections, in the fact, that the President controls a tremendous power known as the patronage.

It is hardly to be expected that members of the House or Senate will go to their constituents in opposition to the administration of President Wilson. In exercising his great power in a statesmanlike manner to secure the ends of good government he is setting an object lesson to the world. He is demonstrating that politics having ideals, is a greater game than merely catering to party expediency however shrewdly it be done.

THE GLOBE'S ACCOUNT.

THE GLOBE'S account of the T.V.C. exposure, in that journal on Saturday is very fair, even if somewhat belated. But the Globe must remember, that if some of the matters had not come to a head under the Tory regime, they would never have been detected.

It would then have been a case of looking into old pigeon-holes, which have been described as a partisan attempt to scent scandal, nor can scandal always be denounced when first suspected. To be nailed for certain it must be allowed to mature. We are not anxious to denounce Liberal humanity as worse than Conservative humanity.

It is time that otherwise sensible people should throw off the shackles of partisanship that hold them prisoners while the treasury is looted. Political predjudice is the disease of the high-minded and the hope of the plundered. It is often not suspected until it has gone too far.

The Globe notes that the evidence of the witnesses was the plain ground of the report made against them.

A TIP TO EXPRESS COMPANIES.

IF THE introduction of parcel post in Canada has the same effect as it has had in the United States, in compelling, at least, one of the express companies to go out of business, no one will be sorry, for have we not for years been compelled to pay excessive rates for parcels. For many years the United States Express Company paid its shareholders splendid dividends, but with the introduction of parcel post, and the reduction of express rates ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the dividends have been almost eliminated, and consequently they contemplate liquidation after 60 years of operation, for the stockholders are not the kind of men to leave their money where they can't secure ample returns. The express companies operating in Canada should take worning, and not wait for an order from the government to further reduce their rates, or until parcel post has become so popular that the express companies will have little or no business to do.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE POOR OLD Globe has finally to admit that there were reprehensible practices in connection with the Trent Valley Canal, but tries to crawl out of the matter by stating that they were continued under the present government. This is only half the truth, which is customary with The Globe, for did not the government cause an investigation to be made, and the guilty ones dismissed as soon as their guilt could be proven. The Globe finally woke up, and printed a portion of the report on Saturday—nearly a week after The Review had given it to the public.

Winners in Their Class.

There are some good stories in Reginald Lucas' biography, just out, of Lord North. One tells of an amusing blunder. Lady North was no beauty. It is said that one night at the opera somebody asked:

"Who is that plain-looking lady in the box opposite ?"

"That," said North, "is my wife."

"I did not mean her," came the obvious rejoinder. "I meant the lady next to her."

The New Liberalism.

Toronto Weekly Sun.

We would commend common sense to those social reformers who wish to turn the Liberal party from fiscal and economic problems to what they are pleased to call an advanced policy of social reform for the common people of cities, including better housing, cheaper rents, workmen's compensation and the single tax. There has been no problem of poverty here during the past 10 years. Else, why have all these common people flocked into the Canadian cities from all corners of the earth ? They came for high wages, and high wages made high rents.

MONDAY

By Walt Mason

On Monday, after Sabbath rest, a man should go to work with vim, roll up his sleeves, pull down his vest, and show there are no flies on him. If happy fortune he deserves, he'll laugh to scorn "Blue Monday's" woe, and he will say, "Now, watch my curves, and mark the swath that I shall mow." Get started right on Monday morn, nor pause with grouches to condole; go, paint the fence or shell the corn, and work with music in your soul. Go forth among the busy men, and show them you can do your share, and when the Sabbath comes again, 'twill find you right side up with care. Ods bodikins ! Beshrew the skates who start the week with idle hands ! The Master of the Vineyard waits and for our labor makes demands. Tradition says that Monday's blue, but that to us should seem a joke, if we have useful work to do, and strength to bear our padded yoke. The man who has an honest task should never to a roar give vent, nor hide his face behind a mask of grouchiness and discontent. No mortal has a right to kick unless he has no work to do, or, having work, is too blamed sick his daily duties to pursue.

Birthdays Note

MONDAY, MARCH SIXTEENTH

Lieut.-Col. Lennox Irving, who was born fifty-one years ago to-day in Pembroke, Ontario, was in his student days at Queen's University a noted athlete. He was captain of the championship football team of 1886 and a member of the first Queen's hockey team, said to be the first hockey septette in Ontario. To him belongs the honor, if such it may be considered, of having scored the first recorded goal in a hockey match in the province. To-day he has settled down into a country barrister, living in the town of his birth. Here he has taken an active interest in military affairs and was for several years commanding officer of the 42nd Regiment.

Fox Leaps Forty Feet

An unusual incident marked a run with the Cheshire Hounds. A fox found at Cocleston, when pressed, got on to the railway and jumped from a viaduct, a distance of forty feet. He was unhurt, but only escaped suicide to die when the hounds got up to him at Elworth Boneworks.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

CLOSE AT USUAL HOUR.

Editor of The Review :

Dear Sir,—Should Dollar Day occur again, we think a wiser and more considerate measure—where the store clerks are concerned—would be for all the stores to close at the usual hour. Aside from the increased amount of business to get through on the one day, the necessity of returning to the store for the evening, is too great a burden, if employers consider their clerks' efficiency on the days following Dollar Day, to be of any account.

This staying open to a late hour dates back to the last century and is not in keeping with modern merchandising methods.

The writer voices the opinion of every one in the institution of which he is a part, in sying that Dollar Day should end at the ordinary hour of every day business; and that there should be a union of store clerks.

Very truly yours,
Max Schleuter,

SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANT.

To the Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir,—I notice that surveyors in the employ of the city are engaged in locating a site for a sewage disposal plant across the river from the Street Railway Wharf. This will indeed be sad news to the working classes who have been in the habit of spending their summer evenings on the river at this point, and who are unable from lack of time and small incomes to go far afield for fresh air. The erection of such a plant in that vicinity will certainly mar the pleasure of thousands of our citizens, to say nothing of adding another unsightly disfigurement to our beautiful water front. Surely the pre-election champions of the interests of the working man in the City Council will rise to the occasion and see that this injustice is not carried into effect. It may be said by those in favor of the project that the plant will be perfectly sanitary and odorless, and those who have never had to face a whiff of singed smells from the smoke-staff of the incinerator for which the same claims are made, will possibly believe the statement, but take it from the writer or anyone who has ever had occasion to visit the vicinity of the small experimental plant in Toronto, the offensive odors are right there unless you have taken the precaution to plug your nostrils with Limburger or some other mild disinfectant. One thing is sure, if the City Council persists in erecting the plant at this point it will have scores of actions for damages to property on its hands. It will certainly spell ruin to a host of small property owners who looked forward on the erection of a bridge in the near future, to selling their holdings as suburban property.

Yours truly,
CAMPER.

U. S. Senators Shocked.

WASHINGTON, March 16. — The new carpet on the Senate floor is causing all sorts of trouble and merriment.

The carpet generates electricity. When the pages run about the chamber they become storage batteries and shock Senators whom they touch.

"No, sir, Senator, I did not stick you; it must have been a little electric shock, for this carpet is full of electricity," replied the page.

Read what one of the GREATEST NEWSPAPERS IN AMERICA has to say on this subject:

"The manufacturers of Castoria have been compelled to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to familiarize the public with the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. This has been necessitated by reason of pirates counterfeiting the Castoria trademark. This counterfeiting is a crime not only against the proprietors of Castoria, but against the growing generation. All persons should be careful to see that Castoria bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, if they would guard the health of their children. Parents, and mothers in particular, ought to carefully examine the Castoria advertisements which have been appearing in this paper, and to remember that the wrapper of every bottle of genuine Castoria bears the fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, under whose supervision it has been manufactured continuously for over thirty years.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Letters from Prominent Druggists addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Conger Bros. of St. Paul, Minn., say: "Fletcher's Castoria is certainly full of merit and worthy of recommendation."

C. G. A. Loder, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "For 20 years we have sold Fletcher's Castoria and are pleased to state that it has given universal satisfaction."

The Scholtz Drug Co., of Denver, Colo., says: "Fletcher's Castoria has surely become a household word. Seemingly every family where there are children uses it."

Hoagland & Mansfield, of Boston, Mass., say: "We have nothing but good to say about your Castoria and we do not hesitate to give it our unqualified endorsement."

Riker's Drug Stores, of New York City, say: "Fletcher's Castoria is one of the oldest and most popular preparations in our stores. We have nothing but good to say about it."

Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., of St. Louis, Mo., says: "Of the thousands of patent medicines for which we have demand there are a very few of them that we can conscientiously recommend and your Castoria is included in this few."

D. R. Dyche & Co., of Chicago, Ills., say: "The increasing demand for your Castoria shows that a discriminating public is not slow to seek out a remedy of merit and once convinced that it does all and even more than claimed they do not hesitate to recommend it to their friends."

The Owl Drug Co., of San Francisco, Cal., says: "We have always been a believer in the 'original man protection' and have been particular never to sell anything but the genuine and original Castoria (Fletcher's). We have many calls every day for this article from people who say they would not be without it in their homes."

Clayton noticed that she did not return his familiar salutation, but he felt no misgivings on that score. She had been through so much. This was no time to force his love upon her, he quickly realized.

"I am already repaid," he laughed, "just to see you and Professor Porter both safe, well and together again."

The girl bowed her head. There was a question she wanted to ask.

"Where is the forest man who went to rescue you? Why did he not return?"

"I do not understand," said Clayton. "Whom do you mean?"

"He who has saved each of us—who saved me from the gorilla."

"Oh!" cried Clayton, in surprise. "It was he who rescued you? You have not told me anything of your adventure, don't you know. Tell me; do."

"But the woodman," she urged. "Have you not seen him? When we heard the shots in the jungle, very faint and far away, he left me. We had just reached the clearing, and he hurried off in the direction of the fighting. I know he went to aid you."

Her tone was almost pleading, her manner tense with suppressed emotion. Clayton could not but notice it, and he wondered vaguely why she was so deeply moved, so anxious to know the whereabouts of this strange creature. He did not suspect the truth, for how could he?

In his breast, unknown to himself, was implanted the first germ of jealousy and suspicion of the ape man to whom he owed his life.

"We did not see him," he replied quietly. "He did not join us. Possibly he joined his own tribe, the men who attacked us."

He did not know why he had said it, for he did not believe it. But love is a strange master.

The girl looked at him wide eyed for a moment.

"No!" she exclaimed vehemently, much too vehemently, he thought. "It could not be. They were negroes. He is a white man—and a gentleman!"

Clayton was a generous and chivalrous man but something in the girl's defense of the forest man stirred him to unreasoning jealousy, so that for the instant he forgot all that he owed to this wild demigod, and he answered her with a half sneer upon his lip.

"Possibly you are right, Miss Porter," he said, "but I do not think that any of us need worry about our carrion eating acquaintance. The chances are that he is some half demented cast away who will forget us more quickly, but no more surely, than we shall forget him. He is only a beast of the jungle, Miss Porter."

The girl did not answer, but she felt her heart shrivel within her. Anger and hate against one we love steel our hearts, but contempt or pity leaves us silent and ashamed.

CHAPTER XVII.

SLOWLY Jane turned and walked back to the cabin. She tried to imagine her wood god by her side in the saloon of an ocean liner. She saw him eating with his hands, tearing his food like a beast of prey and wiping his greasy fingers upon his thighs. She shuddered.

She saw him as she introduced him to her friends—uncouth, illiterate, a boor—and she winced.

She had reached her room now, and as she sat upon the edge of her bed of ferns and grasses, with one hand resting upon her rising and falling bosom, she felt the hard outlines of the man's locket beneath her waist.

She drew it out, holding it in the palm of her hand for a moment with tear blurred eyes bent upon it. Then she raised it to her lips and, crushing it there, buried her face in the soft ferns, sobbing.

"Beast?" she murmured. "Then heaven make me a beast, for, man or beast, I am yours!"

She did not see Clayton again that day. Esmeralda brought her supper to her, and she sent word to her father that she was suffering from the reaction following her adventure.

The next morning Clayton left early with the relief expedition in search of Lieutenant d'Arnot. There were 200 armed men this time, with ten officers and two surgeons and provisions for a week.

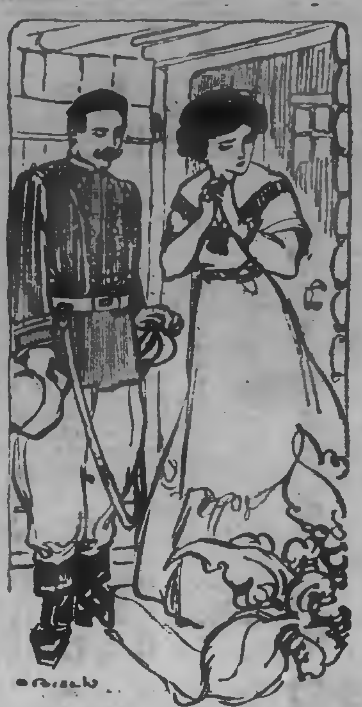
They carried bedding and hammocks, the latter for transporting their sick and wounded.

It was a determined and angry company—a punitive expedition as well as one of relief. They reached the scene of the skirmish of the previous expedition shortly after noon, for they were now traveling a known trail, and no time was lost in exploring.

From there on the elephant trail led straight to Mbonga's village. It was but 2 o'clock when the head of the column halted upon the edge of the clearing.

In a few minutes the village street was filled with armed men fighting in an inextricable tangle. The revolvers, carbines and cutlasses of the Frenchmen crumpled the native spearmen and struck down the black archers with their bolts half drawn.

Soon the battle turned to a wild rout and then to grim massacre, for the French sailors had seen bits of D'Arnot's uniform upon several of the black warriors who opposed them.



"He is only a beast of the jungle, Miss Porter."

They spared the children and those of the women whom they were not forced to kill in self defense, but when at length they stopped, panting, blood covered and sweating, it was because there lived to oppose them no single warrior of all the savage village of Mbonga.

Carefully they ransacked every hut and corner of the village, but no sign of D'Arnot could they find. They questioned the prisoners by signs. Only excited gestures and expressions of fear could they obtain in response to their inquiries concerning their fellow.

At length all hope left them, and they prepared to camp for the night within the village.

The prisoners were herded into three huts, where they were heavily guarded. Sentries were posted at the barred gates, and finally the village was wrapped in the silence of slumber except for the wailing of the native women for their dead.

The next morning they set out upon the return march. Their original intention had been to burn the village, but this idea was abandoned, and the prisoners were left behind, weeping and moaning, but with roofs to cover them and a palisade for refuge from the beasts of the jungle.

Slowly the expedition retraced its steps of the preceding day. Ten loaded hammocks retarded its pace. In eight of them lay the more seriously wounded, while two swung beneath the weight of the dead.

Clayton and Lieutenant Charpentier brought up the rear of the column, the Englishman silent in respect for the other's grief, for D'Arnot and Charpentier had been inseparable since boyhood.

It was quite late when they reached the cabin by the beach. The dead and wounded men were tenderly placed in boats and rowed silently toward the cruiser.

Clayton, exhausted from his five days of laborious marching through the jungle and from the effects of his two battles with blacks, turned toward the cabin to seek a mouthful of food and then the comparative ease of his bed of grasses after two nights in the jungle.

By the cabin door stood Jane Porter.

"The poor lieutenant?" she asked. "Did you find no trace of him?"

"We were too late, Miss Porter," he replied sadly.

"Tell me—what had happened?" she asked.

"I cannot, Miss Porter. It is too horrible."

STYLE TIPS ON SPRING FOOTWEAR.

The vogue of the buttoned boot has continued into this spring with increased favor for this very attractive and convenient fashion. The lines of the new boot, as shown in this model, with patent leather vamp and gray twilled cloth upper, are still slender, with long vamp and receding toe. This sort of heel, half Louis, half Cuban, or better, spool, built of leather rather than of wood, is meeting with increased favor.

FICHU NOVELTIES.

Up to Date Accessories to the Toilet.

EMBROIDERED FICHU.

Fichus still form an attractive and popular feature of many smart gowns. They are made of lace, of net, of all manner of filmy fabrics.

A novelty is the shawl fichu of embroidered satin which forms an accessory to the artistic gown of velvet and malines which is illustrated here. The fichu is edged with fur.

Pretty collars, to be worn on blouses as well as outside coats, are seen now in the shops, and few are so intricate that they cannot be fashioned by the girl with a taste for needlework.

The upstanding frills tacked inside low round collars are very dainty and are a charming finish to the bare neck under a coat.

An attractive round collar to be worn with a Dutch necked blouse can be made of a quarter of a yard of fine batiste. One seen recently was in the shape of a crescent moon, and the pointed ends and side that were laid down on the back of the blouse were embroidered with a scallop drawn with a ten cent piece—just a plain scallop, nothing more, but so carefully and beautifully embroidered that the stitches fairly melted together.

DECORATIVE BUTTONS.

They Are Important In the Embellishment of Smart Dresses.

Fancy buttons are about the most important detail on the newest gowns. Braid buttons, braid motifs, medallions and tassels play an important part upon suits and wraps. Though braid buttons are not a novelty, there are many new and lovely designs.

Perhaps the most striking of the new button designs, however, are those of carved ivory. The exclusive shops have many exquisite designs in ivory of all sizes. Some of these are in black and white, the white being elaborately carved with black knobbed center and black edge. On a black coat or dress these are very smart, and as they come in graded sizes, from the size of a half dollar down, they may be used with excellent effect.

Quaint, too, for blouse or house dress are the old fashioned hand painted buttons, newly rejuvenated. The most artistic of these are of black enamel, painted with dainty little floral designs in color.

Glass buttons, too, are decorated with tiny conventional designs in bright colors, or the glass itself is colored. For the cloth suit there are many new designs in black bone buttons, such as that shown in the sketch. These are all black, but are elaborately cut into fancy effects.

Tortoise shell buttons carved as intricately as the hair combs are also very beautiful. The more expensive of these shell, ivory and mosaic buttons are sufficiently rare and lovely to make suitable Christmas gifts. Handsome buttons may be used over and over again. One may buy bead fringe for gown or lampshade. It is used on both with equal profusion.

Wireless Telephony a Success.

AUGUSTA, Sicily, March 14.—It is announced that the tests in wireless telephony made during the past week between warships of the Italian fleet by William Marconi on board the battleship Reina Elena, flagship of the Duke of Abruzzi were entirely successful. The Duke of Abruzzi presided over the experiments and expressed his admiration of the results attained.

SHAW ON HOME RULE.

Irish Writer Says Carson Didn't Know When To Let Go.

LONDON, March 14.—George Bernard Shaw had a sparkling article in The New Statesman yesterday under the heading "Wake Up, Ulster." After last Monday, says Shaw, all that can be said of or to Sir Edward Carson and Bonar Law is that they have been and gone and done it. They have engaged in a tug-of-war without remembering that the most effective move in that game is not the strongest pull but the adroitest let go. The oversight was unpardonable because everybody knew beforehand that Asquith had made up his mind to let go. Now Sir Edward and his leader are sitting forlorn in mud with the rope in their hands and little else to do except hang themselves with it, for they are now cut off from Ulster as completely as they are cut off from Waterford.

As to the proffered county option of exclusion for six years, the article points out nothing worse could happen to Ulster than to let the Nationalists have six years start of them in the Irish Parliament.

MURDERERS STILL HAVE THEIR LIBERTY

Slayers of Montreal Constables Twice Fool the Police.

MONTREAL, March 16. — After fooling superior numbers of police twice when the gang might have been caught with comparative ease, the Montreal gunmen have now "enjoyed" five full days of liberty, and the whole detective force of the city is at a loss to know if or when or how they will capture the bandits.

The three wanted men were said to have been sighted at Three Rivers, 80 miles east of here, but the three were found to be simply out of works beating their way to Montreal. An unknown man, who threw himself into the St. Lawrence Saturday and refuse to save himself when a rope was pitched to him, is said to have been one of the fugitives.

Chief Campeau will consult Mayor Lavallee to-day with a view of offering a reward for information that may lead to the arrest of either Foucault, Beauchamp or Bourret.

Sent Back to Montreal.

CORNWALL, March 16. — Joseph Adelard Berthieume, the young man arrested here on a charge of vagrancy, has been released from jail and sent back to Montreal. Berthieume had been actly strangely here for several days, and was locked up for safe-keeping. He claimed to have escaped from Longue Point Asylum two years ago, where he had been a patient for eight years. He said his home was in Sorel, Que., but enquiry made there by Chief of Police Smyth elicited the fact that he had not been there for the past twelve years. He came to Cornwall from Montreal. He was supplied with a ticket and sent back.

Man Burned In Raid.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 16.—One man was burned to death and another was seriously wounded when a band of raiders, believed to be Mexicans, attacked a general store at Tecate, 45 miles from this city, Saturday night, and escaped.

Tecate is just over the border on the American side. A woman who saw the attack reported to the commander at Fort Rosecrans that troops were needed, and the populace were terrorised.

Government Vessels Would Pay.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Statements that Government vessels would be compelled to pay tolls if the Sims bill repealing the exemption clause of the Panama Canal Act were enacted were characterized yesterday as "monstrous perversions of the truth and most foolish folly enunciated since fools were discovered" by Representative Adamson, chairman of the House Interstate Commerce Commission.

Japanese Leader Dead.

TOKIO, March 16.—Sumitaka Haseba, who was elected President of the House of Representatives recently, in succession to Ikuzo Oaka, died suddenly yesterday from heart disease. M. Haseba was formerly Minister of Education, and had been a member of the House of Representatives for years. He sat as President of the House from 1908 to 1911. In 1906 M. Haseba visited the United States to study its industrials.

KING GEORGE IN APPROVAL

Expression of Gratification at Postponement of Bisley Rules.

LONDON, March 16.—At an adjourned winter meeting of the National Rifle Association on Saturday Lord Cheylesmore stated the King had expressed heartiest approval at the postponement of operation of the new War Office Bisley rules until next year, which will allow ample time to consider the whole situation both as affecting Canadian riflemen and rifle clubs at home. His Majesty has, he said, added to the fund for carrying out the Empire match at Melbourne at the end of the year with a subscription of $250, and it was decided to send out a British team in charge of Col. Barlow to take part in the competition.

After encountering strong opposition from various religious organizations the Bisley ranges were Saturday for the first time opened for rifle practice on the Sabbath day. The reason which led the council of the National Rifle Association to this decision was that many men who desire to become proficient in rifle practice have no opportunity for practicing except on Sundays.

Lakes May Be Open Early.

FORT WILLIAM, March 14.—Local marine men are of the opinion that with continued mild weather navigation will open here a week or ten days earlier than last spring, when the first steamers departed on April 25. There will not, however, be any shipping before April 15, when the marine insurance goes into effect.

Latest reports are to the effect that the ice on western Lake Superior extends from 20 to 35 miles from shore. Last year at this time, according to some reports, the lake was frozen from shore to shore.

Imprisoned For Pamphlet.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 16.—Prof. Ivan Alexandrovic Baudoin de Courtenay, a member of the faculty of St. Petersburg University, who often has represented Russia in foreign congresses was sentenced Saturday to two years' imprisonment in a fortress for having published a pamphlet advocating federalism.

Russian Leaders Confer.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 16.—Premier Goremykin and his Cabinet Ministers Saturday held a secret meeting with the leaders of the chief parties of the Duma and 65 members of the Duma. The newspapers declare the conference concerned the situation between Russia and Germany and national defence.

EDUCATIONAL SUNDAY IN METHODIST CHURCH

Assistant Pastor of Forty Years Ago Preaches in Charlotte Street Church—He Misses Old Familiar Faces

On Sunday morning Rev. Dr. Rose, of Toronto, preached in Charlotte street Methodist church on behalf of the Educational Fund, to a very large congregation.

As a prelude to his sermon he stated that it might be news to many before him, that he considered himself almost the father of the church, as some forty years previous—a frightfully long time it now seemed—he had been the assistant pastor of the church. When he was yet a young man, and he remembered very vividly the many kindnesses shown him then. On looking over the congregation, however, he failed to recognize many of those who then occupied prominent places in the church. He missed the late Mr. Cox, Mr. Cluxton and many others. He remained in Peterborough to see George street church almost completed and congratulated the people on the growth of Methodism here since.

Educational Needs.

In his sermon the doctor spoke at length on the needs of the educational fund, stating that there is a strong demand for a better educated ministry and this cannot be gratified without the expenditure of a great amount of money. When it is considered that it requires about $5,000 to complete a young man's course of about seven years, which someone has to pay, it makes it difficult to get young men to enter the ministry, especially when they have to face a salary of about $500 a year for the first years of their work, and then to go into debt for a house and its appurtenances, besides other expenditures, and are worried by debts which they are unable to pay. Men so situated are unable to preach their best, and should not have to be in such a position.

Salaries Too Small.

"You do not pay your preachers enough salary to get their best out of them," said the preacher. He knew lots of able men, who were so worried by the debts they had contracted when young men securing their education, that they were unable to preach and work as well as they otherwise would if they were not so situated. It was to meet the necessities of imparting a good education that the church established the education fund, and he appealed to the people on these grounds.

Dr. Rose preached in George street church in the evening. Rev. W. G. Clarke, of Beleville, took the morning service at George street and the evening service at Charlotte street.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, March [illegible]—Corn was the speculative leader today on the board of trade. The Argentine harvest had been hit by wet weather. Farm offerings were scarce and there was sharp bidding by feeding centres. As a result the market, despite heavy profit-taking by holders, closed firm at ¼c to 3-8c net advance. Wheat finished the same as last night to ¼c higher, and oats varying from a shade off to 1-8c up. In provisions, the outcome was 5c to 12½c decline.

LOOKING AHEAD FOR THE PETERBORO OF TOMORROW

Rev. Jas. Rollins Sees Evils Which Should be Remedied Now---No Comprehensive Scheme For Streets, Sewers, Parks or Anything Else, With the Future in Mind --- The Question of Sub-divisions

There was a large attendance at St. Andrew's Church last evening, when the Rev. James Rollins, B.A., preached on the subject "The City of To-day and To-morrow." His text was from Revelation, 20-1. "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away." God gave a vision of what ought to be and the wisdom necessary for its accomplishment. Thos. A. Edison is perfecting a machine to show in five months, the growth of a tree from a small acorn to one 100 years old. Such an invention will revolutionize scientific and nature studies. If we could see in five minutes the growth of our city, from the time it had 200 families, until now; if we could see the growth of factors in the development of the city, such as schols, hospitals, streets, parks and police; if we could see the business development, the coming of banks and saloons and amusements the coming of evil, social vice, the first downfall, the spread of evil, the consequences to the guilty and to the innocent; if we could witness these, the broken hearts, then we would realize something of what the city problem is for a city of 20,000 people.

Twenty Years Hence.

In 20 years time there will be twice as many people living here than now. Old problems will be accentuated; land values will increase and with it the temptation to put two houses where one ought to stand, unless some combination of persons takes action and smashes the evil

We all want our city to grow. Growth seems to some men so much in the way of money, for a newcomer is a new customer.

Streets, houses, factories are the plant of a city. Cities have grown in any old way in externalities. There is no comprehensive scheme of streets, sewers, parks or anything else. Mr. Rollins then outlined some of the evils resulting from sub-divisions of property, that would eventually become part of the city. The new sub-divisions he stated, were planned not under the approval of the city, but of the township council. Often the new streets would not line with the city streets, were too narrow, and presented difficulties in sewer construction. Lots were too small, causing crowding. The problems accumulate before the city has anything to say about it. There should be a comprehensive scheme in such matters, for a city of at least 50,000 people. The two reasons for the lack of such a scheme were first: The jurisdiction of the township council and secondly, the method of allowing the future to take care of itself, especially if it costs money. The widening of Yonge Street in Toronto has cost millions, it should have been done 100 years ago. The man who employs men and women in insanitary surroundings is merely an exploiter of the people. Education and religion must have the co-operation of the industrial factors in the country. There are some industries that should not be given standing room.

Municipal Ownership.

Some will be managed by the people for the people, for example, water and electric light are now usually publicly owned. There was a time when roads were owned by private companies, such as toll roads. The principle of public ownership will have a wider application in the future. There is no reason why people should not make bread, and deliver it to themselves at cost, also fuel, not below cost as we get coal now. The city of to-morrow will stop the suicidal policy of commercializing the people's pleasures, which should be in their health and interest. The place for educational pictures (motion pictures) is in the school room, the equipment is mostly there now. Pictures could be shown there from four to six, and from eight to ten, for entertainment with little increase in the overhead charges.

Pollution of Water.

It was a monstrosity for a city to pour its sewage into a river like the Otonabee. There is no reason under Heaven why this should be so, except that the tax rate must be kept down. The city of the future will not commercialize the weaknesses of the people, such as the tendency for drink. Vice will not be left to the police alone, but the Health Department will co-operate in dealing with this problem. There is no reason why jewellers should issue marriage licenses—the health officers should co-operate. If persons have to be free of certain diseases, to secure insurance, they should also be free of certain diseases to secure the privilege of marrying. Before condemning what he said, we should ponder well. All could agree on the result, which was the betterment of human conditions and opportunities.

Laid Down Their Tools.

NEW YORK, March 16.—A hundred thousand men and women dropped their tools Saturday as a tribute to George Westinghouse, whose genius gave them the means of livelihood. The great inventor of the air brake was buried here on Saturday, while machinery stood idle in a dozen factories in America and Europe. Twenty-five thousand Westinghouse employees laid aside their tools in Pittsburg alone.

REV. T. J. MANSELL

A Tribute From a Member of His Church

The Angel of Death has visited our congregation, and he whom we all loved, "a Prince and a great man in Israel" has fallen.

The thin veil that separates the Mortal from the Immortal, and time from eternity, has been lifted, and through its parting folds, a faithful leader—a tender husband and father has entered into rest.

The numbing shock, in all its suddenness was felt wherever he was known. On Wednesday, we gathered at the Church he loved so well, to see him once again and say farewell. When we had gathered there one spoke of him, whom we all loved, and said he was a "Toiler," who was now at rest, and we knew his words were just for he had toiled so long—and—ard—and never spared himself.

Another spoke of the sweet spirit within him, we knew how sweet, how loving and how patient he had been with us.

Another, from another flock and congregation, spoke of him as "modest, kindly, all accomplished, wise, with sublime repression of himself," told how he was known and loved in Montreal, and we knew the words were spoken truly for he would be loved—everywhere. One came, too, from a distant city and told how close he got to hearts of people there, and we know how close he got to ours. Another from a town quite distant came and said of him that he was one of "God's noblemen."

And our hearts said, he whom we mourned, was Nobleman and Prince. One whispered to his neighbor, and told how on that Sabbath night, he died, before he left the church, while suffering great pain, he stopped to ask how fared, a little month-old child, that had been sick of late. Another told his neighbor how he had visited a little child, that died so many times, and brought such joy to her, when she was sick.

Another whispered, how often he had come to comfort a mother who was very old and could not walk.

Another spoke of how he helped the poor when they were in sore need.

Another said he was so wondrous, kind and comforting when death came to their home.

And we, who heard these things, all said their words were true and just and much more might be said, for we all loved and honored him in life, but of us none saw how great, how good, how noble he had been, till he had gone from us.

Our Church will miss him, and will mourn his loss, but will pray earnestly for her, who more than all others has just cause to weep for him, that God may bless and comfort her and her two sons as He alone can.

We laid his body to rest where the mighty St. Lawrence bears its waters to the sea, at the little village of Moulinette.

The bell of the village church was tolling its sad tribute of respect, as our train rolled in.

Loving hands had lined his grave with sprigs of fir and hemlock, loving hearts and tearful eyes were all about us, in the fading light of that February afternoon, we laid his princely form to rest beside the blue waters of the old St. Lawrence that he loved so well.

Faithful and true in his life, valiant and brave in his death, he has gone to meet his "Pilot face to face," he has crossed the bar.

About the surest way for a man to gain a woman's respect is not to merit it.

Windsor police officers have been given substantial increases in salary.

MANY SHINING LIGHTS AT PARK STREET CHURCH

Nearly all Morning Congregation Promise to let Their Light Shine Among Men—Services Continued This Week

Will you let your light shine?

To this appeal from Evangelist Pugsley, nearly all the congregation at Park Street Baptist Church, Sunday morning, made their way to the choir railing and joined in prayer with the pastor, Rev. F. A. Conners.

The evangelist had been speaking on the Sermon on the Mount, but he dealt particularly with the verse, "Let your light so shine among men that they may see your good works and Glorify your Father, which is in Heaven."

Mr. Pugsley is not unlike many evangelists. He can't keep still. He puts his whole heart into every point he wishes to impress upon his hearers. He admits he is nervous. Yesterday morning he called upon young lady volunteers to take charge of the babies in the congregation. The young ladies responded and to their credit be it said, there were no interruptions during the address.

"God wants you to shine," said the speaker. "You have to do more than come here and sing songs. He wants you to be shining lights to warn men. He pointed out that this verse was for all people. It was not like the case in one church where the minister was asked not to speak against certain members in the congregation. When the preacher asked as to what he should speak about, he was told "to hit the Jew, as there wasn't a Jew in the house.'

"We must not ask other people to give up what we are unwilling to do ourselves," he said. "We must be as shining lights in the home, in the factory and in all places."

Address to Sunday School.

After the opening exercises for the Sunday School, the young people numbering nearly three hundred were addressed in the main auditorium by Mr. Pugsley, who spoke on Little Things, basing his discussion on the Feeding of the Five Thousand. He showed what wondrous things God can wrought when the life is consecrated to his service. He said that God used little boys and girls in saving souls and promoting the interests of His Kingdom. He exhorted them to surrender their lives to God, to dedicate themselves to His service. In response to the invitation, sixty members of the Sunday School went forward, confessing Christ.

Satan in Church.

The church was filled to the gallery for the evening service, and for a solid hour Evangelist Pugsley held his audience almost spellbound as he defined and depicted Satan, showing the subtle way in which he carries on his work. The evangelist said that the devil was not a hideous creature that he is pictured to be with horns, hoofs and a tail, but that he appears in the most attractive forms and often as an angel of light. He went to church and sometimes occupied the pulpit. Mr. Pugsley declared that Satan worked most efficiently through church members who were deceived and deceiving and that some of the imps wore long coats and white ties.

One of the greatest agencies of the devil in the world was a stylish church with a preacher who criticized the Bible and denied the divinity of Christ. He warned all to be aware of the adversary of souls and assured them that the only safety was in Christ, who had conquered Satan for them.

At the after meeting a number arose and said that they were glad they had heard the sermon, declaring it to be the strongest they had ever heard on the subject. One or two were converted at the evening service. Up to date seventy persons have professed conversion. The meetings will continue all this week.

FROM SICILY TO CANADA

Signor Marconi's Wireless Telephony Achieves Triumph

ROME, March 16.—Marconi has achieved notable successes with long-distance wireless telephonic communication. The inventor has been conducting a series of experiments from Italian warships on the high seas. During these experiments he used his newly-devised high sounding receivers and connection with his phonographic registers and repeaters. On the first day while on warships off the Sicilian coast Marconi received very clear messages from Clifden, 1,750 miles away. Next evening the fleet received signals from Canada, 4,062 miles distant, by means of wireless telephony. On the last day radio telephonic conversation between warships in motion succeeded perfectly with a minimum expenditure of energy.

Communication under these conditions was kept up between vessels 45 miles apart and up to 15 miles where land interposed between communicating vessels. Conversation kept up without a break, and was a great success for a spell of twelve hours.

Daniel Mills, brother of the late Hon. David Mills, is dead at Palmyra.

TIME COUNTS IN THE BIG CONTEST

NEXT TWO WEEKS WILL BE MAKING OR LOSING OF BIG PRIZE FOR CANDIDATES.

The successful candidate will realize that this offer may be the means of them winning the grand prize, which some one will have for his own in the next few days. Utilize your time, candidates; don't let a moment go by that is not put to the best advantage, get every subscription possible between now and Saturday evening. Just think and bear in your mind all the time that with one too less you will never be able to win the grand prize auto. It is better for you to have one too many subscriptions than to have one too few. You will never be in all probability in a like competition again, so it is up to you to show your friends that you have the proper qualities to conquer.

Use a Little System.

Don't forget to call on the party who at the beginning told you to call at some later date. Impress upon him the necessity of his help and show the results you have for your effort, explain to them how the very goal of success is within reach of you if your friends give you a little help now when you need it, at the end of this great struggle for fame and fortune. By experience we learn that the person that promised to help you and you showed the proper effort becomes the most enthusiastic supporter and in a great many cases the very ones that a candidate thinks will not give him a subscription will when the candidate goes to him and shows the results that he has accomplished and how near success he really is, that instead of giving a one year subscription, in a great many cases, will help this candidate with a two years' subscription. Try this little suggestion out, candidates. It will not cost you anything to try and suppose you are successful, look what it will mean to you and your friends. It is safe to say that there is not a person in this city, stranger or friend, but would give any candidate a subscription to the Review if they felt sure that in so doing he would make the candidate the winner of the grand prie.

Remember the old motto: "It is better to fail trying than not to try."

Remember, Candidates, the last vote offer closes March 21, after that date there will be one week of just regular votes which is given in the advert. of this paper. The Contest will close at 5 p.m., Saturday, March 28.

SUBSCRIBERS AND CANDIDATES.

Owing to the very good success of the contest, the Review, in appreciation of the same, has decided to increase its prize list by adding another Diamond Ring and Gold Watch to it, showing the candidates and its readers the appreciation of their energetic work throughout the contest, which will close Saturday night, March 28.

DECORATED CATHEDRAL

Suffragettes Painted Mottos on All But the Altar.

BIRMINGHAM, March 16.—Worshippers in the cathedral yesterday found the walls and floors of the edifice covered with suffragette proclamations painted in white letters a foot high, reading "Votes for Women."

"The clergy must rise in our behalf and stop the torturing of women in prison."

Every foot of space except the altar had a sign painted on it, including the pews.

The work is believed to have been that of women who concealed themselves in the cathedral on Saturday night. It is thought it was done for the benefit of the Judges of the Assizes who attended the services yesterday.

Chanted Prayers for Militants.

LONDON, March 16.—Suffragettes yesterday chanted prayers in Westminister Abbey, Yorkminster and the Brighton parish church for their imprisoned colleagues.

Sylvia Pankhurst has written the Dean of Westminster, acquainting him with the intention of the East London suffragettes to march to the abbey next Sunday and participate in the evening service and pray for the success to their cause. In her letter she said she would be present personally and that she desired the dean to adapt the service to a special occasion for the suffragettes.

Chanted in Cathedral.

GLASGOW, March 16.—A band of suffragettes rose in the cathedral during the service yesterday and chanted "Oh, Lord, we beseech Thee to save Emmeline Pankhurst, Helen Crawford, and all the brave women who are suffering for their faith."

The congregation took no notice of the demonstration.

The less hair a woman has on her head the more she has on her dresser.

There's nothing more attractive and more numerous that unreasonable women.

TORONTOS WON FIRST GAME WITH VICTORIAS

Blue Shirts Lead at Every Period, Score Was 5-2

Toronto, March 16.—Superiority in goal, combined with more aggressive back-checking enabled Torontos, winners of the N. H. A., to defeat Victoria, the Pacific Coast champions, Saturday night at the Arena before 5,300 spectators in the first game of the world's series, and one which was played under N. H. A. rules, with the exception that the fine system was abolished and a five-minute penalty substituted for a minor and a ten-minute penalty for a major. In both cases substitutes were allowed. The Blue Shirts led at the end of every period, being ahead 1 to 0 at the end of the first, 2 to 1 at the end of the second, and 5 to 2 at the finish.

The teams:

Victoria—goal, Lindsay; defence, Genge, Patrick; centre, Dunderdale; right, Poulin; left, Kerr.

NEILL RINK WON FINAL

Last Game in the Bonspiel Won by Single Shot

PLAYED EXTRA END

On Saturday afternoon the semi-final in the consolation of the local club's bonspiel resulted in a win for Neill over Stubbs by a score of 17—9. The winning rink went into the finals with the rink of Dr. Wightman in the evening and then the game of games occurred. At the fourteenth end the score was a tie 11—11, and an extra end was played. It was Neill's last shot that counted and his quartette won 12—11.

The following were the rinks:

Dr. Tennant	W. J. Padgett
W. R. G. Higgins	F. Bartlett
W. Henry	J. W. Firth
Dr. Wightman	R. Neill

MANY NEW FACES WITH RED SOX

Brantford Has Three Left-Handers From National.

Here they are! Some you know and some you don't. They are the 1914 Red Sox, and they have all signed. Their signatures repose on the president's war chest. They may make god, and they may not. Anyway, they will make a brand new outfit, and that is the first step. When the spring training trip comes it will be a case of show something to Brantford fans. The loyal bunch of rooters this year are from Missouri.

Catchers—Lamond, Harvey Price, Meriden, Conn.

Pitchers—Gero, L. Gehring (Southern League), Deneau, Raymond Connell (Rochester), One lefthander from Chicago, and two from St. Louis Nationals.

First base—Ivers, Deneau.

Second base—Wagner, Roy Lattime, Rochester.

Shortstop—Albert Honeck, Rochester, N.Y.

Third base—Lloyd Pitchart Tiffin O., Nelson (1913 Red Sox).

Outfielders—Fred Sandusky, Rochester, Albert Houeck, Rochester, Ernest Halback, Meriden.—Brantford Courier.

P.C.I. GRADUATE HAS MADE GOOD

Freddie Wilson Plays Great Hockey for Cup Holders.

The fame of another Peterborough boy and an ex-member of the old P.C.I. hockey septette, that of Freddie Wilson, of the Regina Allan Cup winners from Winnipeg Monarchs, is being heralded throughout the West.

Wilson is well known here by older members of the old P.C.I. stalwarts of the gridiron and hockey days, and since his connection with amateur hockey in Western Canada he has certainly made good. In commenting on a recent game, the Winnipeg Press says the work of Wilson at rover for the visitors was exceptionally brilliant.

PETES' GAMES WITH THE TORONTO CLUB

The Peterboro Canadian League team will play in Toronto on June 1, 2 and 3, and August 13, 14 and 15, the latter date being a Saturday. The Leafs will play at Riverside Park June 8, 9 and 10, and July 27, 28 and 29.

The Leafs have eight Saturdays at home.

GIOLITTI RESIGNS.

Italian Premier Makes Remarkable Move Despite Majority.

ROME, March 16.—Giolitti, the most powerful Italian statesman since Cavour and Crispi, has fallen from power after exactly three years, since by the raising of his finger he had a majority in the Chamber to overthrow the Cabinet of Lizzatti. In these three years the Piedmontese Premier brought to a conclusion two great events, the conquest of Libya (Tripoli) and the granting of universal suffrage, including illiterates

The peculiarity of Giolitti always has been that of leaving power without losing his majority, and even now be had just received a vote of over 200 majority on appropriations for the occupation of Libya. He himself suggested to the Radical groups belonging to his supporters to take such action as would justify his resignation from the Cabinet, as he thinks the program which he has undertaken and accomplished, and his longer presence in a Government of the same men with the same political situation, would be sterile of fruitful results.

Italy will therefore have a repetition of what has already happened twice before when he left power. A Cabinet will be formed, bu Giolitti, although not at the helm, will be real master of the majority, so that those in power will retain such only as long as suits him. When the situation seems to him favorable for a new Administration under his leadership he will come forward and the supporters of the then Cabinet will vanish. Baron Sonnino, the cleverest and most obstinate head of the Opposition against Giolitti, has experienced this twice. Giolitti himself suggested his rival to the King as the only man fitted to form a Cabinet, and one hundred days after he overturned him he made use of the same manoeuvre when Sonnino was again in power, and again defeated him after one hundred days.

The wooden erection used for the purpose of itcket collecting at Kilmaurs Stations has been burned down to the ground.

THE HUMAN MATCH ON ERIE ROSTER

Our Old Friend LeRoy Osborne With the Yankees.

Erie, March 16.—The baseball colony of the Erie Yankees continues to grow, but Manager Smith isn't going to waste time in getting strings on new men who will don the Yankee uniform this summer. Eighteen men have so far signed the contracts of the local club.

In both the infield and the gardens Smith has collected a lot of ball tossers who should travel well over the circuit. His backstops are good, but he is still looking for receivers and more pitchers. The men on the roster are:

INFIELDERS.

Frank Gygli, first base.
George H. Smith, second base.
Charles F. Behan, shortstop.
S. Peue, shortstop.
Leo E. Wiltse, third base.
Owen Harris, infielder.

TORREON TO BE ATTACKED

Indications Are That Villa is Preparing an Assault.

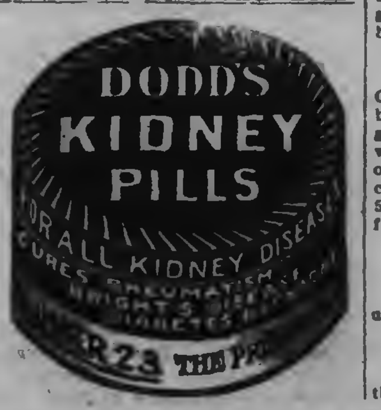
EL PASO, [illegible] March 16.—Coupled with the arrival here yesterday of Gen. Flipe Angeles, Secretary of War in the Carranza Cabinet, were persistent rumors that Gen. Villa would leave Chihuahua next Monday night for the south and that the attack on Torreon might be expected to begin soon after.

Angeles is one of the most expert artillery men in Mexico, and was especially requested by Gen. Villa to forsake his political and administrative duties long enough to command the big gun arm of the service in the impending attack on the Federals' stronghold at Torreon.

That Gen. Villa purposes an early move received additional credence here when it became known that Geo. C. Carothers, special agent for the State Department, said he expected to leave for Chihuahua in a day or two. Carothers is an old friend of the rebel general and his particular, though unofficial, duty is to look to the interests of foreigners during the campaign in those places where there are no regular consuls.

Rebels Sacked Town.

MEXICO CITY, March 16.—Monclova station, on the International Railroad between Ciudad Porfirio Diaz and Monterey, was taken Saturday by rebels, who burned the railroad shops and three hundred cars and sacked the town. Minister of War Blanquet minimized the destruction wrought by the rebels, and insisted that the Federals had repulsed them when attacked. The Minister said he assumed that he rebels intended to move from Monclavo toward Monterey.



THE FOLLOWING IS THE FIRST OF A SERIES TWELVE TALKS TO OWNERS OF FORD CARS

Explaining in a Simple a Manner as Possible, the Reasons, W hy a BOSC MAGNETO Fitted to These Cars, Makes Such a Wonderful Difference in the Running of Same

"THE BOSCH MAGNETO EQUIPMENT ELIMINATES COMPLICATED WIRING"

With the Coil Equipment you have the following wires:

From the	generator to the Coils	1
" "	Coils to the Timer ..	4
" "	Coils to the Plugs ..	4
" "	Battery to the Coil ..	1
" "	Battery to the Frame	1

in all eleven (11) cables, with a total length of 299 feet.

With the Bosch Magneto Equipment you have:

From the	Magneto to the Plugs	4
" "	Magneto to the Switch	1
" "	Switch to the Frame	1

in all six (6) cables, with a total length of 149 in., eliminating therefore, half the wiring necessary with the Coil equipment.

The wiring of the Coil equipment is certainly as simple as it can be made, but the wiring of the magneto is much more simple than that.

Simplicity in the wiring system has four strong advantages—

(1) The wiring is generally the most leaky part of an ignition system, and, therefore, a simple wiring system will generally ensure a better working spark at the plugs.

(2) It is much less likely to cause trouble by deterioration and short circuit, because there is not so much of it to keep insulated from the engine and frame.

(3) If a fault does develop it is much easier to examine and test six wires which are all easily get-at-able than eleven wires, some of which are not.

(4) The equipment has a much neater appearance.

When considering the relative merits of the wiring systems, it should be borne in mind that all of the additional wires required for the Coil equipment are low tension wires, and it is much more difficult to locate a fault in the low tension wires than in the high tension. The high tension wires in both cases are the four which deliver the current to the spark plugs, and short circuit or leakage from one of these uusally makes the seat of the trouble immediately visible and audible by the jumping of the spark there, but a low tension cable may become chafed against some metal part until the insulation is cut through, and then it will silently short-circuit and produce no audible or immediately visible evidence except that the motor stops or misfires intermittently in a manner which might easily be caused by several entirely different troubles, either in the ignition or carburation.

The only way to find such a trouble in the low tension cables or to be quite sure it does not exist is to examine each one carefully from end to end; therefore the fewer there are of them the better.

Another possible trouble with cables is the breaking of the wires inside the insulation. With a high tension cable this does not as a rule interrupt the regular operation of the ignition at all until the jumping of the spark across the break burns through the insulation. It can then be immediately seen and smelt, but if a low tension wire breaks inside the insulation, the current will not jump the break. Usually the motor just stops. Sometimes, when the vibration causes the broken ends to keep touching and separating, it causes the motor to fire and misfire in an uncertain manner, and if the motor stops it is usually found impossible to start it again unless the break is in a wire that affects only one cylinder. Such a fault may easily take hours to locate, especially if you do not at first realize what it is.

The occurrence of these faults in the two low tension wires of the Bosch equipment is, of course, equally possible, but they cannot create the same amount of trouble because the work they have to do is different. With the Coil system the low tension wires must carry the current to run the motor. With the Bosch equipment they must carry it properly to stop the motor. Therefore if any fault is suspected in the low tension wires of the Bosch equipment, it is only necessary to detach the connection from the one low tension terminal on the magneto and run the engine without them, stopping it when necessary by means of the throttle and brake, until the repair can be effected with the same ease and convenience that you always experience with a Bosch equipment.

From the State or Guerrero various rebel successes were reported today. The rebels continue threatening Tampico, but as yet have not attacked the city.

The gunboat Tampico, which recently joined the rebels is declared by Minister of War Blanquet to have gone ashore in the harbor of Topolobampo.

Mexican Prisoners Try to Escape.

FORT BLISS, Texas, March 16.—Gen. Hugh L. Scott Saturday night began an investigation of a report given him that Mexican prisoners were attempting to tunnel a way out of captivity. The work was slow because every tent in a canvas city of 5,000 persons had to be examined for the entrance to the tunnel.

THE SCOTLAND WOOLEN MILLS TO OPEN BRANCH HERE

Well Known Tailoring Concern Will be Open for Business on Saturday

The Scotland Woollen Mills will open a branch store in Peterborough under the management of Messrs. Hourigan and MacLean premises 161 Hunter Street, formerly occupied by J. R. Bell, grocery.

The new firm will need no introduction to many of the citizens of Peterborough, as they are one of the oldest established and most reliable tailor establishments in Canada, and are now conducting business in fifteen cities in the Dominion.

The new firm will also handle a complete range of gents' furnishings, and the public can be assured of receiving nothing but the latest and best goods, as the stock will be shipped direct from the leading wholesalers and no doubt the new firm will share in a large portion of the Spring and Easter orders.

RETURN OF QUO VADIS TO GRAND

A Photoplay That Holds the Audience for Over Two Hours.

Another opportunity to witness the presentation of Quo Vadis, is to be given the public of Peterborough on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday of this week. A matinee and night performance will be given each day at the Grand Opera House. There will not be any change in the prices.

The presentation of Quo Vadis, in a Kleine photoplay must not be confused with the average feature film in moving pictures. The Kleine pictures have a distinct individuality. No doubt the average reader has smiled at the press notices when it is explained how the pictures are obtained, only at enormous expenditure. But another view is taken when the eight reels giving the story of Quo Vadis are seen. It is really marvelous how such a story can be told in this way. And it is a continuous program of exactly two hours and a quarter.

The story deals with the rule of Nero, his persecution of the Christains and all is as clear is if presented on the stage, with living characters.

"THE RED ROSE"

Full of Good Comedy and Tuneful Music.

"The Red Rose," John C. Fisher's musical comedy success, which is announced to appear at The Grand Opera House next Thursday, March 19th, is a most joyous composition, a happy riot of melody, adapted to the scenes of light lovemaking and exuberant frivolity pulsating with life, but always characterized by a power to bewitch the senses and woo us away from everyday cares. It is seldom indeed that the plot of a musical comedy or a comic opera contains such a cleverly devised series of incidents so well suited to the purposes of comedy and so deftly worked out as they are in these three acts of delicious comedy and exquisite harmony.

POLICE HURT IN RIOT.

Capt. White, Leader of Unemployed, Charged With Assault.

DUBLIN, March 14. — Leading a march on the lord mayor's home at the head of an army of unemployed, Captain White, son of the late Field Marshal Sir George Stuart White, defender of Ladysmith, during the Boer war, met a baton charge of the police so fiercely that five charges of assault were laid against him. Capt. White, wielding a large club, inflicted severe wounds on Inspector Purcell, who led the police. Many heads were broken, including that of Capt. White.

Captain James Robert White, formerly of the 1st Gordon Highlanders, resigned his commission to organize a Nationalist force to uphold the authority of the crown and government of Ireland on the same lines as the Ulster force which Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader, was organizing. Capt. White went through the South African war with distinction, receiving the Queen's and the King's and the distingushed order service medals.

Mannish.

Mr. Dubley—How awfully mannish she is!

Miss Smart—She is, indeed.

Mr. Dubley — Yes, and the funny part of it is she thinks people admire her for being that way. It's queer she doesn't realize that people are only laughing at her.

Miss Smart—Well, she's mannish even to that extent.

Scene from "The Red Rose," John C. Fisher's Big Musical comedy at "The Grand" next Thursday. The sale opens to-morrow (Tuesday) morning.

NO SOLUTION IN SIGHT FOR POLITICAL IMPASSE IN BRITAIN; THE DEADLOCK IS COMPLETE

Both Parties Insist There Can Be No Receding From Their Respective Positions and Unionists Say They Will Put Their Threats Into Practice

LONDON, March 16. — A settlement of the Irish Home Rule difficulty apparently has been little advanced by the British Government's great concessions to Ulsterites, and taking the assertions of both political parties at their face value, the deadlock yesterday remains as immovable as before Premier Asquith's conciliatory offer was made in the House of Commons on March 9.

The signers of the Ulster covenant declare strongly that nothing less than the permanent exclusion of the Protestant counties from Ulster from the Irish Government at Dublin instead of the proposed six-year option will be considered by them.

The more radical covenanters demand not only the exclusion of the four counties — Antrim, Armagh, Londonderry and Down — in which the Protestants are in the majority, but they want the entire Province of Ulster excluded. Anything else, they say, would be the desertion of their comrades in counties where Protestants are in the minority and would be treason to their covenant.

Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Ulster Unionists, yesterday sent a message to Belfast, saying:

"So far as our preparations are concerned, the pronouncement of the Government, if anything, necessitates a still more forward movement this year. We are going to make good in action all we have been saying and preparing for during the past two years."

On the other side the Government newspapers assert that Premier Asquith's scheme is the absolute limit of concessions and is not a basis for further negotiations.

Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, speaking at Bradford, Yorkshire, Saturday, said:

"It seems to me that in principle —I don't speak of details—that it is the last offer His Majesty's Government can, or ought to make."

Sir Edward Russell, who is a close friend of Premier Asquith, writing in The Liverpool Daily Post, of which he is editor, takes a different view. He writes:

"In non-political clubs everybody is confident that Premier Asquith has made up his mind to let the Nationalists go: that sooner or later he will tell Mr. Redmond that the only feasible home rule is one with the entire exclusion of Ulster."

Irish Nationalist newspapers declare that John Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader in the House of Commons, and his colleagues, could not possibly support a bill containing further surrenders from the original scheme of Home Rule. Some of the Nationalist organs bitterly denounce the Nationalist members for submitting to Premier Asquith's terms.

The London newspapers are filled with pictures of Ulstermen in civilian clothes and with rifle and cartridge belts, executing skirmish and other drills like trained soldiers.

Winston Spencer Churchill, commenting Saturday in his Bradford address on the preparation being made in Ulster to resist Home Rule, said: "The first British soldier or coast guard who it attacked and killed by the Orangemen, will raise such an explosion in this country as the Tories little appreciate, and it will shake the foundations of society."

Percy Holden Illingworth, the chief Liberal whip in the House of Commons, speaking at the same meeting, said there would be no general election until the Home Rule for Ireland, the Welsh disestablishment and the plural voting bills had been passed by Parliament.

SIX HUNDRED ESCAPE.

Girls In Newark Factory Climb Down Ladders In Safety.

NEWARK, N.J., March 16. — Six hundred panic-stricken girls fled for their lives yesterday in a fire which, starting in the factory of the Baker Printing Co., 251 Market street, threatened the destruction of the entire building block, which takes in many factories and printing establishments.

Many persons, trapped on the upper floors by the rapidly spreading flames, were rescued by policemen and firemen and carried down the fire escapes to safety.

There was an excited rush for the windows, stairways, and the roof. Some of the frightened girls threatened to jump, but were held back by the crowds in the street. The fire by this time had spread through to the front of the building. Ladders were quickly raised and a number of the girls were rescued in this manner.

The building was completely destroyed, involving a loss of upwards of $200,000.

TO TEACH ENGLISHMEN.

Department of Colonial History Likely in London University.

LONDON, March 16.—In a paper read before the British Academy some time ago Sydney Low referred to the "appalling ignorance of the average Englishman on matters relating to the laws, history and geography of the overseas Dominions," and suggested that a department of "Imperial studies" should be established in connection with the London University.

The Senate of the University have now appointed an influential committee to consider the best means of creating such a department. The names on the committee include Lord Rosebery, Viscount Bryce, Viscount Milner, Sir Krishna Gupta, Sir Harry Johnston, Sir Charles P. Lucas, Prof. Sir John MacDonnell, Prof. F. J. C. Hearnshaw, Sydney Low, J. H. Morgan, Dr. Parkin, Prof. Pollard and W. Pember Reeves.

NOT COMPULSORY TO DRESS FOWL FOR MARKET

Vendors Must Display Name and Address in Readable Form—Veal Must Show 15 lbs to the Quarter—All Fowl Must be Weighed

The Property Committee last night turned down the proposition to have only dressed fowl sold on the market, and unless the Council takes a different view the farmers will continue to bring their fowl to market in the same old way.

The committee passed favorably on the recommendation of the Sanitary Inspector that each vendor display his or her name and address in readable form on baskets.

Approval was also given to the suggestion that a small space be set apart for the Inspector, in the market hall, where he would be in a position to hear and deal with complaints.

Weigh All Fowl.

All fowl must be weighed, either before entrance to the market or on the scale provided in the market hall. A ticket giving the weight must also be on view.

The Police Chief will be asked to instruct his men to enforce more strictly the by-law prohibiting spitting and the officers will also look after the smokers and loafers.

The market by-laws will be posted up in conspicuous places, for the convenience of those who care to take the time to read them.

The Sale of Veal.

Veal weighing less than 15 lbs. to the quarter must not be sold on the market or in the butcher shops.

The market clerk will be asked to pay strict attention to the market floor and see that it is kept clean.

The Sanitary Inspector said he had been instructed to ask that the floor be scrubbed once a week. This was too much for the committee, and the Inspector was also willing to allow the scrubbing operations to extend over a greater period of time

Ald. Duncan brought out the point that tenders for the market tolls were due on the 18th, and the tenderers should have known all about these changes so that they could figure accordingly.

Clean Market Square.

The Inspector also wanted the market square cleaned before 8 a.m. on market day, and when the whole question of cleaning up seemed to be going against him, he said: "If the market hall and square isn't cleaned as we want it, we'll go ahead and clean it and charge it up to the city."

"Who's we?" inquired Ald. Duncan.

"The Board of Health," answered the Inspector.

Mr. Spence also suggested that the horses be taken from the farmers' wagons, but no change was made. Such action is taken by a number of farmers.

The question of better ventilation will be taken up with a view to bettering the conditions.

GROUND FLOOR BUILDING TO SERVE AS MARKET HALL

Property Committee Hears Suggestion From Mr. Vincent Eastwood

How would you like to see the market arcade closed up, and new stores added at this property, the entrance to the market hall from Charlotte street and along the pavement from off Simcoe street ?

And what do you think of doing away with the present market hall and providing a ground floor building on the market square ?

Or perhaps you would like to see the market removed from the present site and located on the Wolstenholm property, where the woodyard stands.

Providing the market were removed, what do you think of the present property as a site for a new City Building ?

These questions were briefly discussed at a meeting of the Property Committee last night, when Mr. Vincent Eastwood, member of the City Trust Commission, was present.

But Mr. Eastwood spoke as a citizen. As previously stated, the City Trust has in mind the building of stores in the space now occupied by the market arcade.

In speaking of ground floor building on the market square, Mr. Eastwood felt that encouragement would be given the farmers to attend market. The again, two or three market days could be held each week and in this building everything necessary to the upkeep of the home could be sold. Meat, for instance, would be cut up by the farmers and altogether, the people in the purchase of produce and all household needs, would receive education in the matter of buying and they would receive more for their money.

Mayor Buller questioned if such a propositoin would be fair to the grocers and butchers.

MR. H. R. H. KENNER.
The new President of the Peterboro Curling Club.

MET DEATH IN HIS CAR

The Victim, Sir John Murray Was Born in Cobourg

Edinburgh, Scot., March 17.—Sir John Murray, the noted naturalist and oceanographer, was killed yesterday near his home, Challenger Lodge, Wardie, Edinburgh, in a motor car accident, which occurred while his daughter, Rhoda was driving. Sir John was returning from a visit to Glasgow, accompanied by his daughter and chauffeur. Miss Murray, who was at the wheel, took a road, which was used as a short cut to the lodge. The car swerved, climbed a high bank and turned over. The occupants were thrown out and Sir John was instantly killed. The chauffeur was only slightly injured, but Miss Murray was conveyed unconscious to a hospital. An examination, however, showed that her injuries were less serious than at first feared.

Sir John Murray was born in Cobourg, Ont., March 3rd, 1841, educated in London, Ont., High School, and at Victoria University, Cobourg, and Edinburgh. In 1899 he was given the honorary LL.D. degree at Toronto University. He was knighted (K.C.B.) in 1898 and in the same year was created a knight of the Prussian Order Pour le Merite. He had also received numerous medals for discoveries, and was an honorary member of a great number of British and foreign scientific societies.

REV. DR. HENDERSON WOULD RATHER BE METHODIST PASTOR THAN PREMIER OF CANADA

St. Catharines, March 17.—"I have a son, a mere lad, over in Toronto, who in a commercial position, is getting a better salary than I am getting, or ever expect to get," said Rev. Dr. Henderson at Welland avenue Methodist church Sunday night during his sermon to young men. "Yet I still think the old man is the better of the two, even yet. I may say truthfully that I would rather be a humble Methodist preacher than the Premier of this country."

Dr. Henderson was urging upon the young men the desirability of going into the ministry, which furnishes a far better return in the end than any other calling the world has to offer. At the same time, it is hard, a busy life and no man need study for the ministry expecting that he is going to have an easy time afterwards. But is was a noble calling and one which gives a man the sense of duty well done.

FOUR LOSE LIVES WHEN HOTEL BURNS

Brechin Hotel is Destroyed and Proprietor's Wife, Six Year old Son, Baby and Servant Met Death

Canadian Press Despatch.

Brechin, Ont., March 17.—Mrs. Thos. McCauley, her six year old son, John, and Josephine Callaghan, a servant, lost their lives early to-day, when the Brechin Hotel was destroyed by fire. It is feared that another child was burned, but this cannot be confirmed.

About two o'clock Thomas McCauley was awakened by the smell of smoke in his room and rushing out discovered the entire lower part of the building in flames, which in a few minutes engulfed the entire frame building. He made a desperate attempt to rescue his wife and other occupants of the building, but was prevented by the flames.

The fire was carried by a stiff breeze across the street and destroyed the residence and office of Dr. Gilpins.

Three hundred residents of the village were practically all on the scene of the fire with a line of buckets, the only available means, but at four-thirty the fire had burned itself out.

The body of Mrs. McCauley was found in her bed, not burned, but she had been smothered by the smoke. Other bodies could not be found and were either completely burned or buried under portions of the ruins. Mrs. McCauley slept on the ground floor, while Miss Callaghan and little John were on the upper floor. The fire started in the basement, presumably from a defective furnace. The destruction of the hotel and outbuildings means a loss of ten thousand dollars, while Dr. Gilpins' loss is five thousand dollars.

Brechin is a small village ten miles north of Beaverton, and fifteen miles south-east of Orillia.

LATER.

Brechin, Ont., March 17.—Mrs. McCauley's ten months' old baby also perished in the fire. A boarder named Victor Adair, discovered the fire and after making his escape, broke in the door and rescued McCauley, afterwards dragging out Mrs. McCauley, but she was dead from suffocation. Neighbors rescued several others. The bodies have not yet been recovered.

GOES TO CENTRAL PRISON FOR SIX MONTHS' TERM

John Lowry Has Been Living at the Expense of His Land Lady and the Climax Came Last Night—Was $100 in Arrears

John Lowry's life of ease was cut short this morning by Magistrate Dumble, when he was sentenced to six months in Central Prison on the charge of having no visible means of support.

Lowry pleaded guilty, claiming that he was unable to get work. Police Chief Thompson, however, produced his landlady, a Mrs. Peters, an aged widow, who said that Lowry owed her for eight months board, amounting to $100. Lowry had been a boarder at her place for nearly two years. When the Cordage works shut down he was thrown out of a job, and she kept him on as he promised to pay up as soon as he got work. Lately she had ordered him to leave the place but he had refused, and she did not wish to have trouble.

"What do you want us to do with him? Jail is far too good for him," said Magistrate Dumble.

Continuing, the witness told how Lowry had gone to her home last night in an intoxicated condition and broken a number of dishes and wrecked other things. He tried to choke her, but her daughter interfered, and they sent for the police. During the melee Lowry had fallen against the stove and his face presented a sorry spectacle this morning.

TWO ARE KILLED

One is Probably Maimed for Life and Another is Burned

All Received Shocks When Turning on Electric Light

Canadian Press Despatch.

Calgary, March 17.—The presence unexplained on the city's electric light lines last night of unwarranted high voltage had tragic effects. Charles Cotter, a baker, aged twenty, while attempting to turn on an electric light in the pantry, received a shock which killed him. A few blocks away William Woods, stable helper, reached up to turn on the light. Others in the stable who heard him groan, rushed to his side and found him dead. Fourteen-year old Robert Taylor turned on the light in a bath room and had his hand and foot badly burned, and may be maimed for life.

James Thomas, a baker, had his hand burned. The power had to be turned off for a time, leaving a portion of the city in darkness in order to allay panic.

FIRE DESTROYS COLLEGE HALL WITH BIG LOSS

College Sessions Are Suspended And Girl Students Go Home.

LOSS IS $1,500,000.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Wellesley, Mass., March 17.—Two hundred and fifty Wellesley students and one hundred others, including professors and servants, fled for their lives when fire early to-day destroyed the college hall, the largest building of the college group.

Nobody was injured, but the loss is estimated at a million and a half dollars. College sessions are temporarily suspended and all girl students have gone to their homes.

DEAF AND DUMB MAN SECURES M. A. DEGREE

London, March 17.—Cambridge university has just conferred the degree of master of arts on Armand MacKenzie, the first deaf and dumb man who ever won the master's hood in a British university. MacKenzie, who was born deaf and dumb, paid the university fees out of his scanty earnings. He married a deaf wife.

MAN WANTED FOR MURDER OF MONTREAL POLICEMAN TAKEN AS HE KNEELS WITH MOURNERS

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, March 17.—Joseph Beauchamp, wanted for the murder of Constable Bourdon last Wednesday morning, was arrested this morning in St. Vincent de Paul Church, St. Catherine Street.

He was kneeling among the mourners attending the funeral of a little girl.

Constable Choquette saw him going into the church and followed him, and when Beauchamp knelt, the constable threw himself upon him.

Beauchamp drew a revolver, but Choquette disarmed him and threw the weapon up the aisle, alarming the funeral party, who scattered, but being reassured, returned to complete the service.

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANIES NOW OUT OF BUSINESS

The following is a list of Fire Insurance Companies which retired from business in Canada during the year 1913 :

Alberta Canadian Fire Insurance Company, Edmonton, Alberta, Can., merged with Central Canada Insurance Co., Brandon, Manitoba.

Canada-West Life Insurance Company, Winnipeg, Manitoba, absorbed by North Empire Insurance Company.

Crown Fire Insurance Company, Toronto, Ontario, re-insured in Rimouski, Fire.

Nova Scotia Fire Insurance Company, Halifax, Nova Scotia, re-insured in Home Insurance Company, New York.

Ontario Fire Insurance Company, Vancouver, B.C., Can., ordered to cease business by the Superintendent of Insurance.

Saskatchewan Insurance Company, Regina, Saskatchewan, Canada, merged with Central Canada Insurance Co., Brandon, Man.

Sovereign Fire Insurance Company, Toronto, Ontario, re-insured all Canadian liability in Phoenix of Hartford, United States Liability re-insured in Globe and Rutgers.

Western Union Fire, Vancouver, B.C., in liquidation.

In addition to the above list of companies no less than thirty-eight (38) companies retired or were forced out of business in the United States during the same period and have wended their way to the Insurance Grave-yard.

STEAMER ON ROCKS

City of Sydney, off Her Course Owing to Fog

Canadian Press Despatch.

Halifax, March 17—The steamer City of Sidney, from New York for Newfoundland, is on the rocks at Sambro Hold, a few miles from the harbor, where she struck in a thick fog early to-day. She has a crew of forty and a number of passengers.

THE OTONABEE RIVER ON FIRE

Spectacular Scene is Witnessed by Number of People.

The Scriptures tell how Moses saw the burning bush, but Detective Newhall relates in perfectly honest faith to-day how he witnessed the Otonabee river on fire on Sunday afternoon about three o'clock. No doubt the river has been the victim of many freaks of nature, but the latest is certainly phenomenal.

Detective Newhall said about three o'clock on Sunday afternoon he noticed a black cloud of smoke or similar substance shoot out of a hole in the river near his residence, just below the end of the street car line and remain in the air for the space of ten minutes or so. The black cloud then disappeared and was followed by a gush of flame which burned steadily for about three-quarters of an hour. During which time it reached about ten feet in the air and burned with an amazing rapidity.

After the final scene was rung down and an examination of the place, Detective Newhall found a thick substance similar to crude oil, scattered over the ice. This gradually disappeared. To-day the same coating is greatly in evidence. Detective Newhall is of the opinion that it is due to the accumulation of combustible substances which concentrated and resulted in the combustion.

The ice at this particular point is full of a number of holes, as Dick Thirnbeck is sounding the depth of water for the sewer which is to be constructed this summer. Mr. Thirnbeck witnessed this startling revelation a few days ago, and told Detective Newhall about it, and the officer had the satisfaction of seeing the affair for his own benefit. The incident caused considerable talk, and a number of people stood on the bank watching the flames shoot skyward.

THREE NEW OFFICERS ARE ADDED TO POLICE FORCE

One is "Jack" Deanard Who Was a Team Mate With Detective Meagher on Local Rugby Teams— Parks to Receive Attention of the Police

Mayor Buller Renews the Question of Appointing a Police Matron

At the meeting of the police commissioners, last evening, Mayor Buller, brought forward again, his suggestion that a matron be appointed.

The Police Chief remarked that he was looking into the matter with a view to recommending one or more suitable persons for the position. The only name he mentioned was that of Mrs. McElheney.

It was decided that the Chief should continue his investigations and bring in a report at the next meeting.

The New Officers.

The Chairman, Judge Huycke, read a number of applications for positions on the police force. On the recommendation of the Police Chief, W. S. Brown, F. Burnham and John Deannard were appointed, their duties to commence immediately. Brown and Burnham have been residents of the city for a number of years and Deannard all his life. The latter is one of the former heavy weights of by-gone rugby teams.

Mr. Dumble was somewhat afraid that his weight was somewhat against him, but the Police Chief said they would soon take some of it off him.

One of the new men will fill the gap made by the absence of Seargeant Adams, who will not be able to take up his duties again.

Bicyclists Beware.

"This will enable you to get the men off the front streets, said Magistrate Dumble to the Chief who gave assent. Chief Thomson also said he would put two men after the bicycle riders, who disregard the by-law when it's dark, when they think they will not be discovered.

Police in the Parks.

The matter of police protection and supervision of parks will be taken up with memers of the Nicholls Trust.

Magistrate Dumble and in fact the Board as a whole feel that the police should have full power to act in the parks and say when people should leave. Jackson Park, has had it's reputation blackened considerably. The same can be said of Nicholls Oval.

With the police in full control, shady characters would be in the minority and young girls and their escorts would be told to move on.

POWER COMMITTEE TO DEAL WITH THE LIGHTING SYSTEM

The Power Committee will meet to-night and probably come to some decision regarding the new lighting system.

For some time only half the number of lights have been used, and it is felt by some that the smaller number of lights gives a service that is all that could be desired, and it is unnecessary to put the city to further expense.

NEW MEDICAL REGISTRATION BILL PROPOSED

Massachusett's Board of Registration in Medicine agreed to make a change in the proposed new medical registration act so that it will not apply to those who heal by mental or spiritual means, as a public hearing given at the State House by the Legislative Committee on public health.

The change was made at the request of former Governor, John L. Bates, representing the directors of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston.

Mr. Bates said that the change was to the effect that the act shall not apply to any person who ministers to or treats the sick or suffering by mental of spiritual means without the use of any drug or material remedy. — From The Christian Science Monitor.

FIVE NEEDLES THRUST INTO CHILD'S BRAIN

Victim Carried Heavy Life Insurance—Step-Parents Are Arrested.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Edmonton, March 17.—Dr. Campbell, called in at the death of a four-year-old negro child named Lowe, living with negro step parents, became suspicious, and called in the coroner, Dr. Forin, who found five needles thrust into the brain through the skull. The child carried a heavy life insurance. The step-parents have been arrested.

TO TAKE SECRETARYSHIP OF EPWORTH METHODIST CHURCH IN NORFOLK, VIRGINIA

The Departure of Mr. A. A. Hainsworth Will Mean a Loss to the Y. M. C. A. and also the City---His Work Here has Brought Great Results

A clipping from an exchange which appeared in The Review yesterday stating that Mr. A. A. Hainsworth, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. of this city had resigned his position, was confirmed by Mr. Hainsworth in an interview with a representative of the Review to-day. Mr. Hainsworth's resignation will take effect on May 1st, the Board of Directors having accepted the resignation with much regret at a recent meeting. Mr. Hainsworth will go from here to Norfolk, Virginia, where he will become Social Secretary of Epworth Methodist Church, one of the largest and most influential churches in the south. His duties will be Social Service work. This is a broader field of service than the Y.M.C.A. afforded, and the possibilities of the work are unlimited. There is a demand for competent men, and Mr. Hainsworth is well qualified for the duties which will devolve upon him.

Here Two Years.

Mr. Hainsworth has resided in Peterboro two years, during which time he has not only transformed the Y.M.C.A., but has won the confidence and respect of the entire community. "The boys and young men of the city will miss a careful counsellor and a faithful friend.

In an interview to-day he very modestly reviewed his career. He was born in Halifax, Nova Scotia, where he attended the public schools Owing to circumstances he was obliged to begin work at the early age of eleven. The fire of ambition burned within him and he was not to be thwarted in his determination to succeed in life. At the age of fifteen he joined the Methodist Church and from that time has been actively engaged in Christian work. He was a careful student and while others were enjoying sweet slumbers he was burning midnight oil at boarding schools and later at seminary and college. When seventeen years of age he entered Gospel Wagon Mission work, during vacation period and later was engaged in Missionary work in Newfoundland. He was pastor's assistant at Brunswick Street Methodist Church, Halifax, where his ability as a public speaker was recognized.

In 1907 he started in Association work at the Y.M.C.A. in Winnipeg, Man., and has met with success. In 1908 desiring to further equip himself for his work he attended Springfield College, taking two years in one, where he led in many of his classes. Although married, with a family, he borrowed sufficient money to take this course at Springfield. He has also taken a complete course in American Law and Procedure for the express purpose of helping young men who might come to him for counsel and advice.

Before coming to Peterboro he was General Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. at Batavia, N.Y., where he succeeded in raising $52,000 in ten days for a new building, which has since been erected. The Y.M.C.A. in this city has steadily progressed during his administration. Many changes that had taken place had caused the work to be run down, and financially weak. Shortly after coming the new secretary launched a financial campaign that was successful in wiping out the debt, having the building completely renovated, and adding many improvements. The Review joins in the general regret at losing Mr. Hainsworth, and wishes him all success in his new field.

PATRIOTISM AND AMERICAN GOODS.

THE LAST ISSUE of Industrial Canada contained the folowing :

"Consistency, thou art a jewel." Everybody who is producing or manufacturing in this country is willing to be helped by the "Made-in-Canada" slogan so far as selling his own goods is concerned, but how few, oh, how very few, allow it to influence them in their every-day buying! Trade statistics show that we sleep in imported beds, we shave and wash ourselves with imported soaps (and never happy till we get them), dress ourselves in Scotch woollens and United States boots, breakfast off cereals prepared in Michigan and bacon cured in Chicago, drive to the office in a foreign-made car, write our letters with a United States typewriter on English bond, go to a baseball match where the home team are practically all Yankees, tickle our dinner appetite with Worcester sauce, French peas, Spanish wine and Swiss cheese, and after lighting a Havana cigar settle down to a quiet evening's reading from a New York magazine !"

The above extract is doubtless true and would seem to indicate a sad want of real patriotism for patriotism was the title of the editorial from which the above extract was taken. It would have been interesting had the writer pursued his investigations to the shop in which his editorial was printed.

It is dollars to doughnuts the editorial was set up on machines made in New York, that it was printed on a press built in Chicago, that type and paper made in the United States are used in that shop, not to mention, American printing ink, typewriters, folding machines, stapling machines, and so on through the whole list of an up-to-date Canadian printing establishment. When we proceed to stores we find American goods for sale, but why go further into details when the custom returns show the millions of Canadian money spent to purchase American goods ? Industrial Canada and other journals may prod our patriotism because we do buy American goods, but what is the real honest reason for doing so ?

Just so soon as the Canadian manufacturer makes as good an article as the United States produces just so soon will Canadian goods dominate the market. The competition is not of the lowest but of the highest kind. Canadian products must equal or surpass rival American products. The same or greater economies of production must be effected. It is not a case of patriotism at all, but a case of insisting on a high standard of quality. Why a Canadian should be satisfied with an ugly hat or an antiquated machine just for his patriotism when a good stylish hat or an improved machine may be imported is beyond us.. Canadian printers buy American presses because of their quality and efficiency. They would buy Canadian built presses if they could get them as good. It is not a matter of patriotism but of pure business.

THE BRITISH NAVAL EXPENDITURE.

THE PROBLEM of maintaining the British Navy is reaching an acute situation. The supplementary estimates which came up in the British Cabinet a few days ago, amounted to the enormous sum of $257,000,000. This sum transcends imagination, yet that is the price Great Britain pays for her armed peace. In the Cabinet Mr. Lloyd George strenuously objected to the proposal to provide for the ships that Canada was supposed to build, owing to the heavy expenditures upon health insurance, old age pensions, education and other measures to uplift the British masses. The Cabinet has decided to assume, possibly on advices from Ottawa, that Canadian Ministers may before the end of March, 1915, see their way to fulfill Canada's offer. Four new battleships will be laid down in 1914-1915. The action of the Canadian Senate has already brought the British tax-payer within face of an additional expenditure of over $42,000,000. Canada must certainly assume her share in maintaining peace, and the defence of the Empire. When one considers how much the United Kingdom is doing for Canada, without considering the protection afforded by the British Navy, the dignity of the Canadian people can only be maintained by the prosecution of such a naval policy as Premier Borden has proposed. The Premier's proposal to increase the representation of the Senate, may possibly be executed before the Naval Aid Bill again comes before the Upper House. If we read between the lines, Premier Borden is determined that Canada shall assume her share in the defence of the Empire, and that the Senate will not again be able to thwart the will of the Canadian people. The next few days are expected to reveal some important facts, when the Honorable Winston Churchill speaks in the British House.

TRAGEDIES OF MODERN LIFE.

THERE APPEARED in the daily press the other day the shocking story of a young man, Isaac B. Eastrem, murdering his sweet-heart and attempting to take his own life. The affair took place in Toronto, and we have read of at least two similar catastrophies occurring at or near Ottawa. The truth is, such events happen every little while some place within the confines of the Dominion, and it is time for people to ask why such a tragic act should take place as that which occurred in Toronto last week.

We thought we only read of Othellos, of Romeo's and Juliets, of Hamlets, of Leonoras, in Shakespeare and Verdi, yet here is a case in our own day of "one who loved not wisely but too well." The drama did not end in a prison or a duel, but in a hospital, yet all the elements of a great tragedy were there in sad reality.

Critics of the affair may dissect it as they will. They may sift out the motives, they may find a deficiency of some mental or physical quality, a lack of control of a particular kind, an incapacity to rise above environment, a tendency to yield to some hereditary impulse, or assign the deed to other causes as the case may appear, but the fact remains that great tragedies of passion have happened in all ages and furnished lofty and profound studies in human frailities and psychology. Aside from their dramatic or poetic value, such episodes should teach parents the importance of developing self-control in their children, and in keeping a protecting care over their friendships.

THAT NEW BRUNSWICK RAILWAY.

THE TORONTO GLOBE has been in a great hurry to charge the Borden Government with corruption in regard to a connecting link of railway, thirteen miles long from Millville to the river St. John; New Brunswick. If there has been dishonest dealing in the building of this small railway, the Globe is quite right in calling the attention of the Government to it. It is quite wrong however, in blaming the Government for such deals, before the Government has had an opportunity of making an investigation. Where the Laurier administration was guilty of negligence was not so much in the scandals themselves, but rather in not taking any action to bring the guilty parties to justice. If there has been any wrong doing in regard to this New Brunswick railway, we are quite confident that Mr. Borden will give the matter the attention it deserves, and that he will not pigeon hole the misdeeds of Conservatives for another Government to probe as the Laurier administration did in the Trent Valley Canal and Grand Trunk Pacific scandals.

Western Freight Rates.

Industrial Canada.

Curiously enough, those who are most insistent for free wheat are the very people who are loudest in their demands for a reduction in freight rates. Within the past few months evidence has been submitted to the Board of Railway Commissioners to show that any material reduction in Western rates would be practically fatal to at least two of the systems operating in that territory, by reason of the large overhead expense and the meagreness of the traffic to be moved. Lower rates might reasonably be expected to come in time, as the volume of traffic increases, but the advocates of free wheat desire to secure their reduction from the companies whose business they propose to curtail. The substitution of a short haul to the boundary in place of the present long haul to Fort William would so impair the earnings of the railways that they would probably be forced to compensate themselves by the imposition of higher rates on merchandise moving from the East to the West.

A Sentence and a Warning.

Montreal Gazette.

The Supreme Court of the United States has refused to review the finding of the Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago, which confirmed the sentences passed in the District Court at Indianapolis on President Ryan, Vice-President Clancy and twenty-two other members of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Workers of America, convicted of carrying dynamite used in a long list of outrages on property and attended by over a hundred murders. The punishment the men concerned should now undergo is light considering the gravity of the crimes with which they were associated; but it may serve the purpose. It will teach such men as need the lesson that the law backed by the people is stronger than any section that can be concerned in defying it.

A Warning to be Heeded.

Montreal Gazette.

There are quarrels, it appears, between the different sections of losers by the Farmers' Bank failure as to the division to be made of the money Parliament is expected to vote for their relief. The participants are not wise. If they by their behavior set the people thinking of what the proposed vote will mean in the taking of public money to pay private business losses, there may be no money paid.

Death of George Westinghouse.

Hamilton Herald.

The death of George Westinghouse deprives the world of one of the most fertile inventive genuises of the age. When a boy Mr. Westinghouse perfected a rotary engine, and before he was of age he had invented the famous air brake with which his name is associated—an invention which has been the means of saving countless lives and property of incalculable value. To him are due also in large measure, the utilisation of the alternating electric current for power plants, the development of the gas engine and the conveyance of natural gas through pipes. The world is richer and mankind happier by the activities of this great inventor.

Via Vitae.

Ernest Blake, in English Review.

Do you see the road a-winding through the dear green fields below ?
Hear the bridle-bells a-jingle on the horses as they go ?
Then beside blue flashing rivers, where the tall reeds softly sing
Plaintive songs of early autumn, lyric carolings of spring.
Down the slopes wild pines rush headlong, tossing each his ragged plume,
Plunging all its life and glory in a shadowland of gloom,
But the shadows—are but shadows—Hark, the bells are jingling still !
See, it ends the journey mounting where the sunlight's on the hill !

Lax Parental Authority.

Montreal Star.

The law against the sale of cigarettes to boys under sixteen should be enforced; and the penalties might well be made so heavy that no merchants would dare risk their application. That is the cure for most crimes of this sort—crimes difficult of detection—punish them, when proven, with the greatest severity. Make the risk of punishment so enormous that no sane man will take it. In Japan they punish the parents, too. That might well be tried in Canada; for parents are very largely to blame. The proper parental authority would relieve the state of the necessity for a lot of this vexatious and often ineffective legislation.

Progress in the Post Office.

Toronto Mail and Empire.

The Post Office Department had a surplus of $1,310,000 at the end of the last fiscal year. That is ample reserve for extensions in due time of the parcel post.

The Globe Should Reconsider.

THE GOOD APPETITE

By Walt Mason

If man enjoys his daily vittles, he is a happy nibs; he need not care if Fortune whittles a stick to prod his ribs. In times of stress and grim disaster, if appetites survive, then men just throw in steaks the faster, and pies in blocks of five. No woes or troubles can kerflummix the men who like to eat, who are equipped with modern stomachs that simply can't be beat. Should Fate, that grim and grisly spinner of grief, camp on my trail, if I can have a good square dinner, her buffets won't avail. The men who bow before disaster, who tremble and repeat, to whom woe sticketh like a plaster, are those who do not eat. Napoleon, to good fighters partial, once combed his scanty wool, and said, "Men can't be brave and martial unless their tanks are full." Let me but eat a roasted turkey, well stuffed, in farmhouse style, and, though the outlook's dark and murky, I still shall sing and smile. I may be victim of abuses, and woes may come in troops, but let me eat a pair of gooses, and I don't care three whoops.

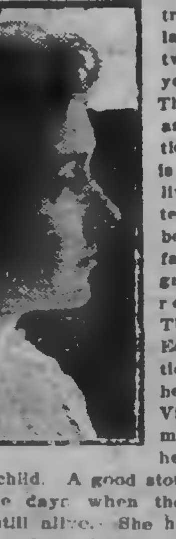
Birthdays Note

TUESDAY, MARCH SEVENTEENTH



H.R.H. Princess Patricia of Connaught, whose name is derived from that of the patron saint of Ireland, was born twenty - eight years ago to-day. The Princess Pat, as she is affectionately called, is one of the most lively and interesting members of the royal family and is a great favorite in royal circles. The late King Edward was particularly fond of her and Queen Victoria was much taken with her sprightliness as a child. A good story is preserved of the days when the great queen was still alive. She had occasion to reprove her vivacious granddaughter once for her habit of romping. "Little princesses should not caper round on their legs like that," said the Queen. The princess promptly stopped her play and sat down on the ground with her legs crossed tailor-fashion. "Now, listen," continued her grandmother, "little princesses ought not to cross their legs like that." The little girl thought for a moment and then asked, "What can little princesses do with their legs, then, grandma?"

Tarzan of the Apes

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS.

Copyright by the Frank A. Munsey Co.

She thought of what Clayton had said of the forest man's probable relationship to this tribe.

To him, too, suddenly came the thought of the forest man. The strange jealousy he had felt two days before swept over him once more.

In sudden brutality that was unlike him he blurted out:

"When your forest god left you he was doubtless hurrying to the feast."

He was sorry ere the words were spoken, though he did not know how cruelly they had cut the girl. His regret was for his baseless disloyalty to one who had saved the lives of every member of his party nor ever offered harm to one.

The girl's head went high.

"There could be but one suitable reply to your assertion," she said icily, "and I regret that I am not a man that I might make it."

She turned quickly and entered the cabin.

Clayton was an Englishman, so the girl had passed quite out of sight before he deduced what reply a man would have made.

"Upon my word," he said ruefully, "she called me a liar. And I fancy I deserved it. I'd better go to bed."

But before he did so he called gently to Jane Porter upon the opposite side of the sailcloth partition, for he wished to apologize, but he might as well have addressed the sphinx. Then he wrote upon a piece of paper and shoved it beneath the partition.

Jane Porter saw the little note and ignored it, for she was very angry and hurt and mortified, but she was a woman, and so eventually she picked it up and read it. It said:

> My Dear Miss Porter—I had no reason to insinuate what I did. My only excuse is that my nerves must be unstrung, which is no excuse at all.
>
> Please try to think that I did not say it. I am very sorry. I would not have hurt you above all others in the world. Say that you forgive me.
>
> WM. CECIL CLAYTON.

"He did think it or he never would have said it," reasoned the girl. "But it cannot be true. I know it is not true!"

One sentence in the letter frightened her—"I would not have hurt you above all others in the world."

A week ago that sentence would have filled her with delight. Now it depressed her.

She wished she had never met Clayton. She was sorry that she had ever seen the forest god—no, she was glad. And there was that other note she had found in the grass before the cabin the day after her return from the jungle, the love note signed by Tarzan of the apes.

Who could be this new suitor? If he were another of the wild denizens of this terrible forest, what might he not do to claim her?

* * * * * * *

When D'Arnot regained consciousness he found himself lying upon a bed of soft ferns and grasses beneath a little A shaped shelter of boughs.

At his feet an opening looked out upon a greensward, and at a little distance beyond was the dense wall of jungle and forest.

He was very lame and sore and weak, and as full consciousness returned he felt the sharp torture of many cruel wounds and the dull aching of every bone and muscle in his body as a result of the hideous beating he had received.

The incessant hum of the jungle, the rustling of millions of leaves, the buzz of insects, the voices of the birds and monkeys seemed blended into a strangely soothing pur, as though he lay apart, far from the myriad life that surrounded him and whose sounds came to him only faintly.

At length he fell into slumber, nor did he awake again until afternoon. Looking through the opening at his feet, he saw the figure of a man squatting on his haunches.

The broad, muscular back was turned toward him; but, tanned though it was, D'Arnot saw that it was the back of a white man, and he thanked heaven.

The Frenchman called faintly. The man turned and, rising, came toward the shelter. His face was very handsome, the handsomest, thought D'Arnot, that he had ever seen.

Stooping, he crawled into the shelter beside the wounded officer and placed a cool hand upon his forehead.

D'Arnot spoke to him in French, but the man only shook his head—sadly, it seemed to the Frenchman.

Then D'Arnot tried English, but still the man shook his head. Italian, Spanish and German brought similar discouragement.

After examining D'Arnot's wounds the man left the shelter and disappeared. In half an hour he was back with fruit and a hollow, gourdlike vegetable filled with water.

D'Arnot drank and ate a little. Suddenly the man hastened from the shelter, only to return a few minutes later with several pieces of bark and—wonder of wonders—a lead pencil.

Squatting beside D'Arnot, he wrote for a minute on the smooth inner surface of the bark; then he handed it to the Frenchman. D'Arnot read:

> I am Tarzan of the apes. Who are you? Can you read this language?

D'Arnot eagerly seized the pencil; then he stopped. This strange man wrote English. Evidently he was an Englishman.

"Yes," said D'Arnot, "I read English. I speak it also. Now we may talk. First let me thank you for all that you have done for me."

The man only shook his head and pointed to the pencil and the bark.

"Mon Dieu!" cried D'Arnot. "If you are English, why is it then that you cannot speak English?"

And then in a flash it came to him—the man was a mute, possibly a deaf mute.

So D'Arnot wrote a message on the bark in English:

> I am Paul d'Arnot, lieutenant in the navy of France. I thank you for what you have done for me. You have saved my life, and all that I have is yours. May I ask how it is that one who writes English does not speak it?

Tarzan's reply filled D'Arnot with still greater wonder:

TO DEVELOP ISLAND.

Newfoundland's Premier Will Try to Raise $2,000,000.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., March 16.—Much interest was expressed yesterday in the efforts of the colonial Government to negotiate a loan of $2,000,000 for railroad development to which the administration is pledged. Sir Edward Morris, the Premier, left for London Saturday by way of New York, and Governor W. E. Davidson will leave direct for Liverpool on Wednesday for the purpose of trying to raise the money.

Before Sir Edward left the appointment was announced of Richard Anderson Squires as Minister of Justice, succeeding Donald Morrison, who declined reappointment. Sydney Darius Blandford was also reappointed Minister of Agriculture. Both filled empty places in the Legislative Council, and took portfolios that have been vacant since Morrison and Blandford were defeated in the general election last November.

Woman Freed of Murder Charge.

CHICAGO, March 16.—Louise Van Keurin, who has been on trial for shooting and killing her husband, John D. Van Keurin, last June, was found not guilty of murder yesterday. Mrs. Van Keurin' defence was that she mistook her husband for a burglar.

The prosecution introduced evidence that Mrs. Van Keurin had been receiving the attentions of George Penrose, a jeweler, whose place of business was near the Van Keurin home. Penrose was made co-defendant with the woman, but the judge took his case from the jury and ordered him discharged.

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

Seeding has started on the experimental farm at Lethbridge, Alta.

Over forty per cent. of the men employed in the building trades in Halifax are out of work.

In future the St. Catharines license commissioners will not issue a license to a hotel proprietor or a bartender who is not a British subject.

Five armed robbers broke into the mail order branch of the Hartman Furniture Co., Chicago, yesterday, blew open the office safe and got $15,000 in cash.

Jacob Chambers, of North Easthope, Ont., was drowned Saturday. While assisting his son to do the chores at the barn, he fell into a cistern from which he was drawing water.

Smallpox conditions in South Texas, due to the influx of thousands of Mexicans who have crossed the border to escape the revolution, it is declared, have assumed serious proportions.

Daniel McLaughlin, of Brock avenue, Toronto, a teamster, was buried alive in a cave-in at the gravel pit at the head of Jane street, West Toronto, on Saturday afternoon, and perished.

There is a well-grounded belief in Halifax that the Murray Government will dissolve the House and go to the country at the end of the present session of the Legislature, probably about June.

Private detectives are scouring the Island of Montreal and the adjacent counties in search of a gang of expert forgers who have recently accomplished a $3,500 fraud by means of forged checks.

Clarence and Perry Crouse aged 15 and 18 years, of Lunenburg, N.S., were drowned Saturday. They left the shore in a dory to attempt the raising of a sunken boat, and, overturning the dory, they quickly sank.

F. B. CARVELL REVIVES CASE OF FARMER NOW IN U.S. PRISON

Government, Replying to New Brunswick Member, Says Every Effort Has Been Used Towards Securing the Release of Wm. J. Kelley.

OTTAWA, March 17.—The House spent the greater part of the day upon F. B. Carvell's motion for the production of papers relating to the case of William J. Kelley, of Carleton County, N.B.

The House followed with great attention and interest Mr. Carvell's story of which appears to have been an unusual case. According to Mr. Carvell, Kelley was illegally arrested by American authorities while on Canadian territory, taken to the United States, tried on charges of smuggling and assault with intent to kill, and was sentenced to fourteen years in prison. Although representations were made time and again to the authorities at Washington no clemency was granted and the man is still in prison.

It appears, according to Mr. Carvell, that the grand jury of Maine, some fifteen years ago, returned a true bill against Kelley for smuggling, but for some reason a warrant for his arrest was never issued. In April, 1903, Kelley, while driving a load of potatoes on the American side, was ordeerd to halt by a customs official. Upon refusing the officer fired twice, one of the shots taking effect, whereupon Kelley beat him into insensibility and escaped to Canada. The United States endeavored to extradite him, but failed.

From then on Kelley led an exemplary life. In the fall of 1908, however an agent of the U. S. Government who posed as a buyer named Black, called upon Kelley and bought a cow and some farm produce. He asked Kelley to deliver the purchases to him in the United States, but the man, in the presence of witnesses, refused to do so. It was finally agreed that he was to drive with them to the border. Accompanied by Black, he did so. When they were on a road which parallels the border line, they were set upon by American revenue officials. Kelley was arrested and taken to the State of Maine and lodged in jail.

In a sworn affidavit Kelley alleges that he was arrested on Canadian territory and photographs of the ruts made by the wagon are said to bear this statement out. But in spite of the evidence he was found guilty, not only on the old charge of smuggling, but also for the attempted murder of the officer who had shot him in 1903. For those offences he was sentenced to 14 years in the penitentiary.

Mr. Carvell charged that Prime Minister Flemming of New Brunswick had made no effort to have Kelley released, and that upon Mrs. Kelley's death two days before the general elections, he or his party sent a telegram which stated that Kelley had been released, which of course was untrue. The telegram Mr. Carvell characterized as the "most heartless and disgraceful election device" of which be had ever heard.

The Minister of Justice, in reply, stated that the Justice Department had done everything in its power to effect the release of Kelley. Personally he thought the man should be released. Representations had been made to the United States authorities but they refused to act in the matter, claiming that their investigation showed that Kelley had been legally on American territory.

Concluding, he hotly scored Mr. Carvell for attacking Hon. Mr. Flemming when that gentleman was not present to defend himself. He read communications received prior to Mrs. Kelley's death which conclusively proved that Mr. Flemming had interested himself in the case, and had written Ottawa regarding it.

Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine, and former Prime Minister and Attorney-General of New Brunswick, also took occasion to take Mr. Carcell to task. He hotly repudiated the attack made by Mr. Carvell respecting Mr. Flemming's inaction in the case. He said that the telegram read at the funeral of Mrs. Kelley was a telegram received from the United States Department of Justice, which asked particulars about Kelley's family and whether he would return to Canada if released.

At the opening of the House yesterday the Prime Minister named a committee to consider the resolution submitted last Monday by Mr. Andrew Broder (Dundas), which provides that the sale, use and importation of cigarettes in Canada be prohibited.

The committee is composed of the following members: Messrs. Broder, Marcil, Pacquet, Turgeon, Stewart (Lunenburg), Charlton, Cromwell, Lemieux, Kyte, Kemp, Barnard, McNutt, Perley, Schaffner and Morphy.

In answer to a question from the Opposition, Premier Borden said the Government was considering the advisability of granting a bounty for the discovery of radium-bearing ores.

LOST RACE WITH DEATH.

Frantic Rush To Hospital With Patient Was Unavailing.

WINDSOR, Ont., March 17.—A 60-mile-an-hour race in a special train from Woodslee to Windsor made by Mrs. Clifford Townsend with a two-mile dash in a motor ambulance to the Hotel Dieu at the end of it, and a wild drive in an automobile through the streets of Detroit by Dr. Ernest K. Cullen, the famous obstetrical surgeon, followed by a trip across the river in a car-ferry Sunday, failed to save the woman's life.

Mrs. Townsend, whose family physician had decided that only an immediate operation could save her life was already under an anaesthetic when Dr. Cullen arrived at the hospital and the operation was performed immediately, but the patient died under the knife.

Martial Law Proclaimed.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 17.—Martial law was proclaimed yesterday along the border for miles each side of Tecate, Cal., following the destruction by fire of the general store containing the United States postoffice and customs office and the murder of Postmaster Frank Johnston Saturday night by three men declared to be Mexicans.

James Gordon Bennett Ill.

LONDON, March 17.—James Gordon Bennett, owner of The New York Herald, is seriously ill aboard his yacht Lysistrata at Suez, according to a despatch received here last night. Mr. Bennett is reported to be suffering from a severe fever. He has been on a three weeks' cruise.

NEURALGIA

"Nearly Drove Me Wild, Until I Took Kephaldol."

Mr. Thomas Cooper, Ludley, Sussex, England, was almost frantic with Neuralgia, when he first took a KEPHALDOL Tablet.

"I am nearly 74 years of age and have suffered with Neuralgia nearly all my life. A friend told me about KEPHALDOL and I had my people get me a 2s. package. I took two tablets as soon as I got them and quickly received relief. It was a joy."

So great became the fame of KEPHALDOL Tablets abroad that their reputation spread to this country. The demand for KEPHALDOL grew so rapidly that arrangements were made to establish a Canadian office and supply all the druggists. These wonderful tablets, the prescription of Vienna's famous nerve specialist, Herr Doctor Stohr, have brought welcome relief to hundreds suffering from Neuralgia and Headaches, the ravages of La Grippe, Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago, Pain in the Back, and in fact any pain.

If you canont get the 50c. tubes at your druggist's, write Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

REFUSES TO GIVE DETAILS

Premier Asquith Disappointed at Failure of Terms of Settlement.

LONDON, March 17.—"I do not feel much encouraged over the reception of my proposals in regard to Ulster," said Premier Asquith yesterday in the House of Commons.

He was replying to a number of requests for further details of the scheme of local option, under whose provisions the nine counties of Ulster will be permitted to vote separately on the question whether they shall be left out of the control of the new Irish Government at Dublin.

Premier Asquith said he fully adhered to his proposals in the hope that they would form a "basis of settlement." He added:

"I am anxious in the interests of agreement and peace that the main principle of our proposals should be considered on their merits without being encumbered with minute details liable to draw the discussion into backwaters."

Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, took exception to the Premier's attitude. He declared it was impossible to debate the proposals unless details were given.

Premier Asquith then promised to give the House an opportunity to discuss his refusal of the details before knowing whether the Opposition would accept the main principle of the proposals.

PRIEST ENTERS ACTION.

Rev. Father Gnam Sues Archbishop McNeill for $50,000 Damages.

SARNIA, Ont., March 17. — Suit for $50,000 damages for alleged breach of agreement was entered yesterday morning for trial at the spring assizes against Archbishop McNeill of Toronto, on behalf of Rev. Father P. J. Gnam of Petrolea.

This action, which was entered against Bishop Fallon last year, was arranged at the time, the brief states, by his grace the archbishop agreeing to assume the costs of the court action to support Father Gnam during the interim and to restore him to his parish, which included Wyoming, Petrolea and Oil Springs.

The plaintiff, who still occupies the rectory at Wyoming, alleges that the agreement has not been kept by the archbishop. He claims that he has not been restored to his parish, as he claims was promised.

The suit will come up for trial at the assizes, which open in Sarnia on March 24.

Promises a Referendum.

MONTREAL, March 17. — Major George W. Stephens, in opening his mayorality campaign last night pledged himself to a referendum on any future contract to be made with the Tramways Company.

Major Stephens, who spoke chiefly in French, was supported by three hundred leading citizens of both races.

B. C. Cougar Hunt.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., Mar. 17.—Two cougars have been reported wandering aimlessly about the highly civilized municipality of Joint Grey, and a well-known hunter of those parts has departed on their trail with a gun and three dogs which are guaranteed to bring home the bacon, or the cougars, as the case may be.

Caught With the Goods.

LONDON, March 17. — A suffragette giving the name of Catherine Wilson was arrested in the lobby of the House of Commons last night. She was dressed in male attire and had a dog whip secreted in her sleeve. It is supposed that she was waiting to attack members of the Government.

Dr. Adami Highly Honored.

LONDON, March 17.—The Medical Society of London announces that the Fothergill gold medal for 1914 has been awarded to Dr. Adami of McGill University for his work on pathology and its application to practical medicine and surgery.

THE DOCTOR SAID "I CAN'T HELP YOU"

Suffered 10 Months with Kidney Complaint. Gin Pills Cured.

Dunvegan, Inverness Co.

I am perfectly cured of Kidney complaint after using Gin Pills. Six hours after taking the first Pill I obtained relief, and now after three months I feel as well as ever.

I suffered ten months and the Physician attending me advised me to go to the Victoria Hospital at Halifax, as he could do nothing more for me. I may add that I used a great deal of medicine, and strictly followed my physician's directions regarding diet, etc., but without avail, until providentially I learned of your most excellent remedy. I am recommending Gin Pills.

Spring Millinery Greets the Feminine World with Jaunty Shapes and Quaint Trimmings

The Second Floor Presenting a Pretty Selection of the Season's Latest Styles

So many people have remarked upon the beauty of the Spring Hats, the chief charm of which lies in the piquant tilt, that is caused by the extended bandeau beneath the brim.

This new order of things has made possible a host of smart trimmings, that are quite of a different nature to former styles, yet which are most becoming to women of every type.

So it naturally follows, that with most of the hats tilted to the right side; the under part of the hat figures as conspicuously as does the upper part, and is consequently tastefully adorned with flowers, feathers or ribbon.

One of the Smartest of Shapes

Is the "Peg O'My Heart" hat, which is somewhat flat and worn at a rakish angle.

There is one of these models that is made of Nigger Brown Tagel straw; the top side being covered with crepe of the same shade. It has a split ostrich band encircling the low, dome crown, and terminating in a small mount at the right side.

Beneath the brim, the high bandeau is prettily trimmed with rosebuds.

The price of this hat is $10.00.

The Hesitation Shape

In Virgin Blue Tagel straw, boasts a wreath of Forget-me-nots and foliage; while beneath the tilted brim, frayed tango silk and more Forget-me-nots are attractively placed. This smart little model is.... .. ..$8.75

MAY DISCOVER ISLANDS.

Stefansson's Men Are Doing Valuable Exploration Work In Delta.

OTTAWA, March 17.—A mail has just been received at Ottawa from the Northwest Mounted Police at Fort McPherson, which includes letters from Stefansson. He writes from Collinson Point, and give some details of the scientific work which the party there is doing. He asks the Department for additional supplies to be sent to Herschell Island as soon as possible this spring. These supplies are to replace those that have gone with the Karluk. Some of the supplies sent by the Naval Department will go down the Mackenzie river and the balance by way of Behring Strait.

Stefansson reports that the men are all in good spirits, and they are doing valuable exploration work in the Mackenzie Delta, which has never been before accurately delineated. If his plans hold good, which he outlines at the time of writing, Stefansson will be returning now from a 300-mile trip into the Arctic, where he hopes to discover some new islands.

MILL IS DESTROYED.

Laidlaw Lumber Company Loses $50,000 In Fire In Toronto.

TORONTO, March 17. — Between nine and eleven o'clock last night the planing mill at the corner of Eastern avenue and St. Lawrence street, owned by the Laidlaw Lumber Co., was destroyed by fire. The loss, including damage done to piled-up lumber by water, will amount to about $50,000. There is insurance in several companies, but neither Robert Laidlaw nor his son Robert, junior, could state last night the exact amount carried on the burned mill.

After the Laidlaw fire was well under control, Chief Thompson learned that a blaze had started in Frankel Bros.' metal and junk yard across the Don. Three wagons and half a dozen men were sent around by the bridge, and the budding fire was soon put out. It is supposed that it had its origin in a spark from the planing mill.

No theory as to the cause of the planing mill fire was advanced last night.

Explorer Met Death.

STOCKHOLM, March 17.—Baron Nordenskjold, son of the famous Arctic explorer who died in 1901, reports that his companion in an expedition in South America, Johnberg, had been killed. The despatch from Baron Nordenskjold came from Belem, Brazil. It gave no details concerning the death of Johnberg.

Reichsrath Needs Closure.

VIENNA, March 17.—The Reichsrath was again prorogued yesterday, the obstruction by the Czechs rendering business impossible. An official communication issued last night hints at the necessity of having recourse to administrative decrees in order to carry on the public business.

Mystery Cleared Up.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., Mar. 17.—The body of Dan McCarkill, well known in this city and up the Fraser river, who disappeared last December, and who was believed to have been drowned in the Fraser, was discovered Sunday close to the second pump station at Matsoui Prairie. The body was found by a half-breed named Felix McKay.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, March 16.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 69 cars, comprising 1261 cattle, 1144 hogs, 70 sheep and 65 calves.

Butchers.

Choice steers sold at $8 to $8.25; good, $7.40 to $7.60; medium, $7 to $7.25; common, $6.50 to $6.75; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; good cows, $6.50 to $6.75; medium cows, $5.50 to $6; common cows, $5 to $5.50; canners and cutters, $3.75 to $4.50; bulls, choice, $7 to $7.50; good bulls, $6.50 to $7; medium, $6 to $6.50.

Stockers and Feeders.

Stockers and feeders were none too plentiful. Prices of steers, 800 to 900 lbs., at $6.75 to $7; steers, 700 to 800 lbs., at $6.25 to $6.50; stockers sold at from $4.50 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers.

Receipts of milkers and springers were not large. Choice milkers and forward springers of good quality sold bring good prices, but common to medium milkers and late springers are slow sale. Two choice Holsteins sold at $100 each. The range of prices were from $60 to $100.

Veal Calves.

Receipts of veal calves were light and prices very firm. Choice calves, $10 to $11; good, $9 to $10; common and medium, $6.75 to $8.

Sheep and Lambs.

The sheep and lamb market was firm. Sheep, light ewes, sold at $6.50 to $7; heavy ewes, $5.75 to $6.25; rams, $5.25 to $6.25; heavy lambs, $8 to $8.75; choice lambs, $9 to $9.75.

Hogs.

Selects fed and watered sold at $9.10 to $9.25, and $8.90 f.o.b. cars.

MONTDEAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, March 16.—A stronger feeling prevailed in the market for cattle today and prices advanced 15c to 25c per 100 pounds, owing to a smaller supply, especially of choice stock, coming forward. Demand was improved, but buyers showed no disposition to operate freely. A few full loads of choice steers changed hands at $8.25; picked small lots at $8.40, and choice butchers' cows brought as high as $7 per cwt. A weaker feeling has prevailed in the market for milch cows of late, on account of the increased offerings, and prices have declined $10 per head, the top figure for choice milkers now being $100.

Hogs showed a decline of from 20c to 30c per cwt., owing to increased supplies coming forward. Ontario selected stock sold at $9.80 and Manitobas at $9.50, while sows brought $8.50 to $8.80, and stags $4.75 to $4.90 per cwt., weighed off cars. The trade in sheep and lambs was very quiet, but prices ruled firm, on account of the continued small offerings, but the demand for calves was fairly good and some extra choice veals brought as high as $25 each.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.25 to $8.40; medium, $6.00 to $7.50; common, $5 to $6; canners, $4 to $4.25; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; medium, $5.50 to $6.50; bulls, $5 to $7; milkers, choice, $90 to $100; common and medium, $70 to $80; springers, $60 to $90; sheep, ewes, $5.50 to $6; bucks and culls, $5 to $5.25; lambs, $8.50 to $9; hogs, $9.50 to $9.80; calves, $3 to $15.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, March 16.—Cattle—Receipts, 4100; slow and 15c to 25c lower; bulls, steady; prime steers, $8.75 to $9; shipping, $8 to $8.60; butchers, $8 to $8.25; heifers, $6 to $8; cows, $3.75 to $7.00; bulls, $6 to $7.00; stockers and feeders, $5.75 to $7.25; stock heifers, $5.25 to $6.75; fresh cows and springers, active and strong, $35 to $90.

Hogs—Receipts, 12,000; active; pigs, 15c higher; others, 10c to 15c lower; heavy and mixed, $9.20 to $9.25; yorkers, $9.10 to $9.25; pigs, $9; roughs, $8.25 to $8.50; stags, $7 to $7.75; dairies, $9 to $9.25.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 11,000; handy sheep and lambs, active; sheep, steady; lambs, 5c higher; lambs, $6.50 to $8.05; yearlings, $6.50 to $7.15; wethers, $6.25 to $6.25; ewes, $3 to $6; sheep, mixed, $6 to $6.15.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, March 16.—Cattle—Receipts, 18,000; market, steady; calves, 50c lower; Beeves, $7.20 to $9.80; Texas steers, $7 15 to $8.15; stockers and feeders, $5.60 to $8.75; cows and heifers, $3.75 to $8.50; calves, $6.50 to $9.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 53,000; market, active; light, $8.60 to $8.85; mixed, $8.50 to $8.85; heavy, $8.40 to $8.80; rough, $8.40 to $8.50; pigs, $7.25 to $8.70; bulk of sales, $8.76 to $8.80.

HEADACHES ALMOST DROVE HER WILD

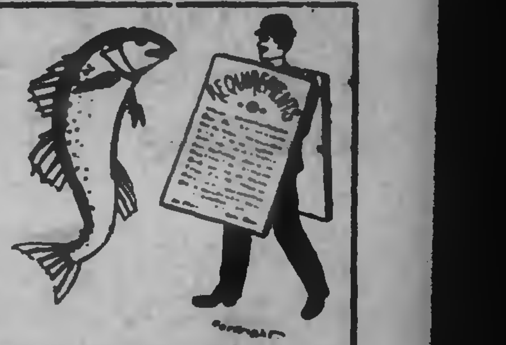
Until A Friend Advised Her To Use "Fruit-a-tives"

NEWBURY, ONT., May 29th. 1913.

"About four years ago, I was in a dreadful run-down condition, weak and hardly able to walk up stairs. Weakness peculiar to women was the chief trouble. I had Headaches that almost drove me wild, and most distressing constipation. I took many dollars' worth of medicine from the doctors without any good results.

A neighbor advised me to take "Fruit-a-tives" and they proved to be the best medicine I ever got and the only medicine to do me any good. Today, I feel as a young girl, and am able to go about my household duties as usual. My health is splendid and "Fruit-a-tives" is the cause of it". MRS. WM. CRIM.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.



We are anxious to give you any variety of fish we can procure, and always buy the best quality. Order early to be sure of good delivery.

[illegible]	Testing two varieties of Potatoes	2
29	Testing three grain mixtures for Grain production	3
30	Testing three grain mixtures for Fodder production	3

Each plot is to be two rods long by one rod wide, except No. 28, which is to be one rod square.

Any person in Ontario may choose any ONE of the experiments for 1914, and may apply for the same. The material will be furnished in the order in which the applications are received, while the supply lasts. It might be well for each applicant to make a second choice, for fear the first could not be granted. All material will be furnished entirely free of charge to each applicant, and the produce will, of course, become the property of the person who conducts the experiment. Each person applying for an experiment should write his name and address very carefully, and should give the name of the County in which he lives.

MANY PERSONS ARE KILLED BY EARTHQUAKE IN JAPAN; VOLCANO IS IN ERUPTION

Sixty Dead Bodies Found in Basin of River

TOKIO, March 16.—A serious earthquake occurred yesterday in the prefecture of Akita, Island of Hono. A number of persons in the city of Akita were killed and many houses destroyed or damaged. In the village of Kowakubi, which was ruined, there were many casualties. The disturbance badly damaged the railroad and telegraph lines.

The volcano Asama-Yama, ninety miles northwest of Tokio, is in eruption.

Full details of the disaster have not been received owing to the interruption of communication. Sixty dead bodies were found in the basin of the Omono river, where three hundred and twenty houses were destroyed. The village of Kitameno was burned.

As a result of the earthquake a copper mine at Tsunmdate collapsed. The fate of the three hundred workmen in the mine is unknown.

Simultaneous with the earthquake came terrific explosions and the bursting of flames from the volcano Asama-Yama, which terrified the inhabitants of that district.

Akita is a garrison town on the Sea of Japan. It does a considerable export trade, especially in rice. The population of the city is about 30,000. Asama-Yama is the largest active volcano in Japan. A majority of its active periods have been productive of only showers of ashes. Its last great eruption was in the year 1783, when several villages on the north side of the mountain were obliterated by huge streams of lava. The crater is about three-quarters of a mile in circumference.

GIRLS WHO ARE PALE, NERVOUS

May Find Help in Mrs. Elston's Letter About Her Daughter.

Burlington, Iowa.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured my daughter of weakness. She was troubled almost a year with it and complained of backache, so that I thought she would be an invalid. She was entirely run down, pale, nervous and without appetite. I was very much discouraged but heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound through friends and now I praise it because it has cured my daughter."—Mrs. F. M. ELSTON, R. D. No. 3, Burlington, Iowa.

Case of Another Girl.

Scanlon, Minn.—"I used to be bothered with nervous spells, and would cry if anyone was cross to me. I got awful weak spells especially in the morning, and my appetite was poor. I also had a tender place in my right side which pained when I did any hard work. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and my symptoms all changed, and I am certainly feeling fine. I recommend it to every suffering woman or girl. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Miss ELLA OLSON, 171 5th St., Virginia, Minn.

Young Girls, Heed This Advice.

Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should immediately seek restoration to health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Protect Us!

To the question, "What would you do if you found a member of your family unconscious from gas?" a first term high school student replied as follows:

"If I should find a member of my family unconscious from gas I would chaff the arms, loosen the clothing to quicken respiration and press the chest together. If two persons was working over them one would hit them on the head and the other would slap at their feet. If all your other efforts fail, use artificial respiration."

Declined With Thanks.

Speaking of burglars, there is a story of a man who prepared to meet possible burglars by purchasing a small revolver. It was a nice little affair, with "For Burglars" neatly engraved on the butt, and he was very proud of it, but one evening he forgot to take it upstairs to bed with him as usual.

When he came downstairs in the morning he found the house despoiled of all valuables and a note lying beside the revolver: "Thanks, but I always carry my own! The Burglar."

ONLY A SHORT TIME UNTIL CONTEST CLOSES

Race is Closest Ever Observed by Manager Who Has Had Charge of Many

Great excitement among contestants these last few days as the goal of the Review's great contest looms up with only a short time until the prizes will be awarded.

Saturday was a great day in the contest department. Many contestants were in the office, getting more subscription books and getting all kinds of information about the close. Nearly every candidiate is of the same opinion, that subscriptions are easier to procure now than at any other time of the contest.

If you have any promises, better get them in by March 21. That is the day the candidates will have to show their hands. They must have the subscriptions that day if they expect to be a winner.

Don't leave a stone unturned to get votes by Saturday, March 21. You may depend upon it that your most dangerous competitor will not do so. You may be equally certain that if you don't do everything in your power for your favorite whose fate is in this great race for fame and fortune is entirely in your keeping, you will find others forging ahead of your favorite, perhaps to your dismay.

It is all well and good to say that you are going to do this and do that, but in competition of this nature just as in anything else in life, results are what count, and deeds and actions count greater than words. This is the contestant's great climax. One single subscription might mean a victory or defeat. The race is the closest the contest department has ever had the opportunity of witnessing. Nearly every candidate in the contest is up in the race and it is a great question in the mind of the contest manager who will pick off the big plums at the closing night.

SUBSCRIBERS AND CANDIDATES.

Owing to the very good success of the contest, the Review, in appreciation of the same, has decided to increase its prize list by adding another Diamond Ring and Gold Watch to it, showing the candidates and its readers the appreciation of their energetic work throughout the contest, which will close Saturday night, March 28.

He frowned in perplexity on hearing once more that she was not at home.

"I wonder, Jimmy," he said bitterly, "if your sister realizes that I have treated her to three taxi rides and four concerts this month?"

"You bet she realizes it," said the small boy, grinning. "That's why she's keeping her engagement to Joe Johnson a secret."

"The Red Rose," John C. Fisher's tuneful and humorous musical comedy is coming to "The Grand" next Thursday, March 19, for one performance. The fame of its delightful melodies is world-wide and of its story too much can not be said, for delightful comedy runs through the entire operetta, not in vehement types or noisy climaxes, but the kind of polite and characteristic humor which belongs to the environment, and the story, which is French to the minutest detail. The authors, Robert Hood Bowers, Harry B. Smith and Robert B. Smith respectively, wrote the music and the book with rare good skill. It is one of the smoothest, most graceful and delicately entertaining comedies of melody and wit ever sent on tour. The seat sale opened this morning.

A wash for concrete, consisting of a dilute solution of hydrochloric acid, one part of commercial 20 per cent acid to five parts of water, has been found effective in cleaning the stains from the lock walls of the Panama canal. The surface of the concrete was brushed over with the solution and afterward was rinsed with clear water. The application and subsequent rinsing freed the concrete of all discoloration.

NOT ENOUGH ROOM AT CURLING CLUB ANNUAL

Prizes are Presented to Winners of the Local Competitions

OFFICERS ELECTED

List of Trophies Won During Season by the Peterboro Club

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club, held last night in the club quarters, at the rink, was one of the most largely attended and enthusiastic meetings the club ever held. During the past few years the club's membership has greatly increased and the room last night was found to be far too small.

Prizes Distributed.

The first work taken up after Mr. H. Foot, the President, called the meeting to order, was the distributing of the following prizes, won during the season:

Inter-Rink Competition — First prize, sweaters to each of the winning rink, composed of John Hill, F. Bartlett, H. Evans, J. H. Connal, skip.

Vice-Skips Bonspiel—First prize, suit cases to each of the winning rink composed of G. A. Wood, W. J. Padget., P. D. Fitzgerald, Geo. Hill, skip.

Second Prize, gold cuff links to each of the rink coming second, namely: R. Dobie, T. H. Hooper, J. C. Read, W. G. Read, skip.

The Local Bonspiel—Primary—First prize, cut glass berry bowls, won by A. P. McLean, W. H. Collier, Jas. Skinner and W. H. Taylor, skip.

Second Prize—Umbrellas, won by L. A. Potvin, M. C. Tooley, A. W. Archibald and W. M. McCracken, skip.

Consolation—First prize cut glass sugar and cream bowls, won by W. J. Padgett, F. Bartlett, J. W. Firth and R. Neill, skip.

The meeting then dealt with amendments to the constitution and by-laws. A notice of motion had been given to amend Section nine of the constitution, by striking out the words "the first Monday in," and substituting therefore the words "third day of." This was carried and the section now reads:

"The Committee of Management shall select the club skips on or before the third day of December, and the secretary-treasurer shall at once notify the skips of their selection."

An amendment and an addition to By-law No. Six was also carried. The by-law will now read: "Fees shall be due and must be paid on or before the first day of December. Any member who does not comply with the provisions of this by-law shall automatically cease to be a member of the club."

The report of the secretary-treasurer, Mr. F. Brownscombe, was then read and showed that the receipts were sufficient to meet all payments and leave a small balance in the bank. The report was readily accepted.

The Victors' Trophies.

Mr. H. F. Foot, the president, then gave his report briefly outlining the progress of the club for the past year and giving a list of the cups and prizes won.. The silverware added to the already well-filled case, included—

Neill-Sheppard Cup for competition between Orillia and Peterborough.

Waddell-Capon Cup for competition between Toronto Victorias and Peterborough.

Fitzgerald-Bottum Shield, for competition between Bobcaygeon and Peterborough.

District Cup, for Group No. 2, Campbellford Challenge Cup.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:—

Hon.-President—Mr. H. F. Foot.

President—Mr. H. R. H. Kenner.

Vice-President—Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald.

Committee of Management—Messrs. W. H. Taylor, W. G. Ferguson, W. D. Campbell and R. Neill.

Representatives for Ontario Curling Association—Messrs. Geo. Morrow and W. G. Ferguson.

The office of secretary-treasurer will be filled at a meeting of the Board of Management to be held in the near future.

CITY LEAGUE MAY REPLACE MERCANTILE BALL LEAGUE

The springlike weather of the past few days has caused quite a number to allow their minds to wander to baseball. The dope being mighty scarce on the local Canadian League team, the fans are wondering what's going to be doing in the amateur line. Last year the Mercantile League gave no small amount of amusement, but eight teams were too many, and correctly speaking, the league wasn't a howling success. This season, so claims the dopester, there will be a City League composed of four teams or perhaps six and this will replace the Mercantile League.

If a league were formed some well-balanced teams would enter and some first-class ball would be dished up when the White Caps were on the road. The C.G.E. and Bankers could muster a roster of players and it is safe to say, that two other teams could be found.

LINDSAY TO HAVE SOME BASEBALL

The advent of spring has started the baseball fans going, and already the lovers of this popular pastime are talking of the coming season's plans.

A meeting of baseballists was held recently when the prospects for the season were considered. The result of the meeting was that Lindsay would have at least one strong team on the diamond this year. Those behind the nine have gathered together a classy bunch of ball swatters, and expect to loom largely during the coming season. The officers of the new team will be elected later on.

It is also understood that Horn Bros.' team will hold an organization meeting this week. — Lindsay Post.

ARTIE LATHAM COMEDIAN UMPS

Side Partner of Germany Schaeffer to Work in Canuck League.

Another comedian "umps" is coming to the Canadian League. J. Ira Davis was the last, but his brand of humor didn't wear well, and the league let him out. Artie Latham, side-kick of "Germany" Schaeffer, the Washington comedian, is the new "umps." Latham is famous as a ball player and a comedian both on and off the stage. He has done a vaudeville stunt with Schaeffer for the last two or three seasons, and has also acted as an umpire in several other minor leagues. The new "umps" appointed are as follows: J. M. Flynn, Buffalo; J. J. Walsh, Wilkesbarre; R. E. Bedford, New York; H. Riley, Jamestown; J. Miller, Kansas City, and Artie Latham. Riley and Miller are International League "umps," and Bedford has had experience in the New England League. — Ottawa Journal.

BASEBALL

Brundage, who hit something like .750 the first three weeks of the 1913 season with Brantford, then fell off to .087 the next three, will be given a chance with St. Thomas this spring.

John McGraw will have a bunch of real giants among his athletes this year and many were the comments among those who watched the workouts at Marlin, Texas. Or the eight pitchers five are six-footers and their weight will average 175 pounds.

St. Thomas led the Canadian League from May 10th till July 15th last season, then flopped, eventually finishing third, one game in front of Peterborough. Ottawa, the pennant winners, did not get a smell of first place till June 28th. The rest of the journey they were always in front.

Frank Shaughnessy says Doc Reisling, the London leader, can still pitch good ball, and vouches for the statement the dentist will win several games on the mound this season. Shag says Reisling, at London, and Curly Blount, at Peterborough, are the pilots who will bear watching in the Canadian this year.

WIFE OF FRENCH FINANCE MINISTER SHOOTS THE EDITOR OF FIGARO

Rendered Furious By Bitter Campaign Against Her Husband

PARIS, March 17. — Gaston Calmette, editor of The Figaro, was shot yesterday by Mme. Henriette Caillaux, wife of Joseph Caillaux, the French Minister of Finance. M. Calmette died last night.

Mme. Caillaux went to the office of The Figaro to carry out an act of vengeance against M. Calmette, who had been waging a campaign characterized by great bitterness against the Minister of Finance. She fired at least three times, M. Calmette being wounded in the chest, in the side, and in the abdomen.

While the editor was being transported to the hospital, he said repeatedly: "I have done my duty. I have done my duty." Having committed the deed, Mme. Caillaux submitted to arrest, and while employes in The Figaro office were taking the pistol from her hands she said:

"Since there is no justice in this country, I take upon myself an act of justice. Take me where you wi[illegible]"

Mme. Caillaux was immediately removed to a police station, where she underwent a preliminary examination, the substance of which was communicated to the press at her desire.

"I am sorry," she said, "for what I was obliged to do. I had no intention of killing M. Calmette, and I would be happy to know that he will recover. I desired only to teach him a lesson."

In her statement to the police Mme. Caillaux explained that the campaign against her husband had become intolerable and she determined to stop it. She consulted an eminent lawyer, who advised her that legal proceedings would be futile—that they were often worse in the case of the innocent than in the case of the guilty. She decided then to take the law into her own hands. She bought a revolver, drove to The Figaro office and sent in her card.

It was officially announced last night that M. Caillaux had tendered his resignation from the Ministry of Finance, but that Premier Doumergue withheld his decision until today.

Mme. Caillaux is the Minister's third wife. She is 39 years of age and her maiden name was Henriette Rainouard.

CANADIAN SCIENTIST KILLED IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Canadian Naturalist Was 73 Years Old and Was Born in Cobourg

EDINBURGH, Scotland, March 17. —Sir John Murray, the noted naturalist and oceanographer, was killed yesterday near his home, Challenger Lodge, Wardle, Edinburgh, in a motor car accident, which occurred while his daughter Rhoda was driving. Sir John was returning from a visit to Glasgow, accompanied by his daughter and chauffeur. Miss Murray, who was at the wheel, took a road which was used as a short cut to the lodge. The car swerved, climbed a high bank and turned over. The occupants were thrown out and Sir John was instantly killed. The chauffeur was only slightly injured, but Miss Murray was conveyed to a hospital. An examination, however, showed that her injuries were less serious than at first feared.

Born at Cobourg, Ont., on March 3, 1841, John Murray received his early education in London, Ont., High School, and at Victoria University, Cobourg. Later he was graduated at Edinburgh University. At a comparatively early age he became famous as a scientist, and in 1868 visited the Arctic regions as a naturalist on board a whaling vessel. He was with the famous H. M. S. Challenger expedition of 1872-76 as a naturalist, and did valuable service in compiling reports of the great ocean basins. He participated in numerous other important explorations, including those in the Faroe Channel. In 1898 he received knighthood, and in that year was created a knight of the Prussian Order Pour le Merito. In the following year he was British delegate to the International Hydrographic Conference at Stockholm, and in the same year received the honorary LL.D. degree at Toronto University.

He published numerous books and articles on subjects connected with his special subjects.

OFFICERS ARE ACCUSED.

Graft Case Involving $2,000,000 Is Unearthed In Germany.

BERLIN, March 17.—One of the most important cases of graft ever unearthed in Germany will shortly engage the attention of the Criminal Court in Hamburg. It concerns allegations of embezzlement from the Hamburg South American Steamship Co. of nearly $2,000,000 and involving more than three hundred employes of the line, mostly captains and other ship officers.

The chief culprits, who have been in jail since September are chief inspectors of the company Sibbers and Stehr, head of the employment bureau. Their peculations, it is alleged, extend over a period of eighteen years.

Sibbers, who has been in the service of the company for a quarter of a century, is an influential official, and owing to the high estimation in which he was held at headquarters the captains and other officers stood in awe of him. They were accustomed, owing to fear of discharge, if they incurred his displeasure, to vouch unhesitatingly for padded pay rolls, which Sibbers, in collusion with Stehr, then proceeded to collect, pocketing for themselves the excess over the actual amount payable and the sums which they made the treasury of the company believe were due. Stehr confessed and Sibbers pleaded ignorance. Both officials have been living luxurious lives in Hamburg and Kiel for years.

MORE ADEQUATE QUARTERS FOR THE CURLERS

Plans Are Under Way to Give the Curling Club Better Accommodation.

Mr. R. Neill, representing the Curling Rink Company, informed the members of the Curling Club last night that additions were to be made to the rink, which would provide further accommodation for the members.

When the rink is completed, the local curlers will have winter quarters that will not be excelled in any part of the Province.

WEDDING—PERSONAL

Mrs. J. H. Reawick, 567 Aylmer street, will receive to-morrow afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock.

Mr. Harry Winch wishes to take this means of thanking his many friends for the great kindness shown Mrs. Winch during her long illness and stay in the Hospital. The beautiful flowers sent and the kind and frequent visits paid brightened her days and gave a cheer and comfort that tended to promote recovery. They were, and still are, warmly appreciated, and will long be a pleasant memory. Mr. and Mrs. Winch wish also to thank the Nicholls Hospital staff for their kind attention for many weeks.

Dr. Carruthers will reserve the third Wednesday afternoon from 3 until 6, at her office rooms in Bank of Commerce building, for those who wish to make social calls.

Major Horden, of Kingston, is in the city in connection with regimental business with the 57th.

Mr. C. W. Chesterton, of Montreal, is a visitor in the city.

Mr. W. H. Harvey, of Ottawa, is a guest at the Oriental.

Mr. Wm. Martin, of Buffalo, is a guest in the city.

St. Paul's Guild entertained George street young people to a social last night at St. Paul's, where a most enjoyable evening was spent. Refreshments were served.

Bright and fair, Saint Patrick's Day once more sails serenely into the annals of To-day and Yesterday.

The postman, laden with extra mail, distributed favors with a lavish hand, one little fat green pig, all the way from the "Ould Sod," arrived with a broken leg, and the little colleen who received it almost had a broken heart, in sympathy for "the dear wee piggie."

Sweetly pretty, as well as educative, were some of the Saint Patrick's Day cards, showing views of Old Ireland, "Eagle's Nest," Killarney, "The River Shannon," "Dinnis Island," etc., mounted on large mats with the legends "Erin go bragh," etc., in large gold letters, and no doubt were highly appreciated by warm Irish hearts. Shamrock Day, coming as it did, for the first time in our city, brought the day and its legend more prominently before us than ever.

Mr. Alex. Robertson, McDonnel Street, has returned from Toronto, where she was the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Birkes.

Mrs. H. C. Winch, who had been in Nicholls' Hospital since Christmas eve, with a broken leg, was sufficiently recovered to be taken to her home, 81 Crescent Street, last Thursday.

Master Harold Gollop, of the Snowdon House, who broke his leg while coasting on Murray Street hill some months ago, is sufficiently recovered to come downstairs.

Messrs. J. D. Patterson and F. Sedgwick, of Newark, N.J., J. McNabb, of Boston, and E. B. Boswell, of Hartford, Conn., were in the city yesterday.

Mr. R. W. Travers, local manager of Bank of Montreal, appears on the Advisory Board of Directors of the National Motor Club. Mr. Travers is an enthusiastic and popular motorist.

Mr. W. B. Sloan, of the Royal Bank staff, Burlington, Ont., arrived in the city yesterday to assume the position of accountant at the Royal Bank. Mr. David Bradshaw the former accountant, was transferred to Sudbury.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC ORCHESTRA MUSICALE.

A Musicale will be given on Friday evening, March 20th, at 8.15, in Conservatory of Music Hall, under the auspices of the Women's Art Association. This will take the place of the usual Saturday twilight. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of music. Silver collection.

WOOD-BLACK.

Last evening at 7.30 at the home of the bride, on Chamberlain Street West, Rev. H. J. Keith united in marriage Miss Christina Black and Mr. Arnold Evelyn Wood. The bride was assisted by Miss Doris Julia Wood, and Mr. Alfred Black supported the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood will reside on Western Avenue.

WILL LIKELY BE SENT TO ASYLUM

Magistrate Edmison has received the evidence, taken by John Hull, J.P., of Lakefield, as to the recently reported case of Miss Mabel Garland, thought to be insane. This evidence and the report of the examination by Doctors Graham and Fraser, proves the girl to be mentally defective.

His Worship has forwarded the evidence and report to the Inspector of Asylums for the Insane and in all probability the unfortunate young lady will be removed to some institution.

The girl, who is but 18 years of age, was brought to the city yesterday and Magistrate Edmison made arrangements with the jailer in the County Jail to have a suitable and comfortable place for her until such time as the officers arrive to take her away.

THEATRICAL

"Nobody's Daughter" was played before a small but appreciative audience at the Grand Opera House last evening. The company will shortly disband, as the leading lady, Miss Deidre Doyle, is returning to New York to undergo treatment for blood-poisoning, which she contracted following a mishap, when one of her fingers was jammed, while closing the lid of her trunk.

BISHOP IS INITIATED AS C. O. F. MEMBER

An Interesting Meeting For Catholic Order of Foresters.

At a largely attended meeting of St. Peter's Court, Catholic Order of Foresters of this city, held last evening in their hall on Hunter Street, His Lordship Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., was duly initiated as member of the order. The members were most enthusiastic over the fact that their beloved Bishop was becoming a member, and consequently turned out in force. The initiation ceremonials were splendidly put on by Chief Ranger Perdue, assisted by the officers of the court, and His Lordship was loud in his paise at the manner in which everything was carried out. After the initiation ceremonies were over, addresses made on the good of the order by the chaplain, Rev. C. J. Phelan, the Deputy H. C. R., J. P. Shevlin, Brothers McElderry, barrister, and J. J. Lynch, the first Chief Ranger of St. Peter's Court when it was formed 23 years ago.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien was then called upon and gave a very stirring address to the members. He told them how pleased he was to become a member of the order, and was delighted to know the great progress the order was making, both in Canada and United States. He exhorted them to be practical Catholics, gentlemanly and temperate in their habits, and to continue the good work they were doing.

St. Peter's Court has flourished during the past year, and has at present a membership of 282 in good standing. More are to be initiated at the next meeting. Now that the Bishop has joined the ranks, 1914 will be a banner year for St. Peter's Court, and Catholic Forestry generally.

WOULD BUILD AN ABATTOIR

Local Butchers Have Proposition for the City Council.

Messrs. Lumley and Porrin, butchers in business at 176 Simcoe St., waited on the Property Committee last night with the offer to build and maintain an abattoir.

They would permit the Council to set a scale of rates to be charged for killing. The abattoir would be operated by a company.

Mr. Lumley, who was spokesman was asked to submit his proposition in writing to the Council and this he promised to do.

PROF. MAVOR AT CANADIAN CLUB

He Will Deal With the Economic Position of Canada.

The members of the Canadian Club are reminded of the address to be given to-morrow evening, March 18th, by Professor Mavor, of Toronto University, head of the Department of Political Economy, on "The Present Economic Position of Canada." The subject is most timely, when one considers the enormous sums of borrowed money this country is using to develop its natural resources, to deepen its canals, to extend the steel to the uttermost parts in a mad rush to be ranked among the first of nations and incidentally swell the coffers of the capitalists, one might therefore reasonably be excused were he to stop for a moment to reflect on the present economic position of Canada and to question the stability of a country's prosperity and development based so largely upon money derived from the foreign investor and borrowed capital.

Professor Mavor is in a position to handle this subject with exceeding fitness and resourcefulness, for it has been his business throughout the years of his professorship to study this particular phase of the question of economics from the academic side, and his ideas, therefore, will be untrammelled and free from the bias of one actively engaged in commercial pursuits.

Professor Mavor is also an author of some note, his latest book being a history of the Political Economy of Russia. He is, too, a fluent and pleasant speaker, and the members are assured of a profitable evening. This being the last address of the season, it is hoped that there will be a large turnout to welcome the guest of the evening.

DUKE TO RETIRE.

Manchester Guardian Says He Will Leave Active Career This Fall.

LONDON, March 17.—The Manchester Guardian, which is generally judicious in what it publishes regarding exalted personages, gives prominence yesterday to a despatch from its correspondent in London, who declares the Duke of Connaught will definitely close his term as Governor-General of Canada in September. The Duke, however, may not return to England immediately, seeing he is going to visit the Yukon. His Royal Highness is likely to return home via the United States, taking leave of President Wilson at Washington and spending a few days in New York in private engagements. The Guardian's correspondent adds that the duke will, on the close of his Canadian term of office, consider his long public career ended.

As to his successor at Ottawa, this correspondent thinks the Duke of Teck will not likely accept, seeing he is due to command the First Life Guards.

"QUO VADIS"

Special Return Engagement Arranged.

"Quo Vadis," the superb photo drama reproduction of Henry Sienkiewicz's world famous novel, comes to "The Grand" for a special return engagement to-morrow (Wednesday), Friday and Saturday, and it looks as though Mr. George Kleine's remarkable production will establish a wonderful record.

Aside from the many spectacular features there is an undeniable fascination about the story of Vinitius' passion for the sweet Lygia, and the adage that the "course of true love never runs smooth, etc.," is proven as far back as A.D. 66 and 68 by this very picture romance. It is human and human nature is the same to-day as it was in the days of Nero and all the other Caesars and Roman Emperors. And that is what the public likes whether it is novels, dramas, paintings or photo dramas.

There has been much wonderment at the magnitude and beauty of some of the scenes, notably the interior and garden scenes. But the locale is Italy, where landscape beauty is still a world sight. The Cines Company of Italy is composed of many of the wealthiest men of Rome and the Bank of Italy is also said to be largely interested in the company.

SOMETHING DOING ON GEORGE STREET

But one Report is not Correct, the Review Learns

The rumor of Mr. M. Pappas purchasing the stores occupied by P. Connal, grocer, and the "Ten Cent Store" on George Street between Hunter and Simcoe Streets, is untrue, Mr. W. G. Ferguson says.

It is stated, however, that the moving picture man is endeavoring to locate and may figure somewhere in the vicinity.

There is another report that the rents have been boosted.

CALIFORNIA ORANGE DAY

On March 21st, the people of the State of California will celebrate what will be known annually as "California Orange Day," when the slogan will be "California Oranges for Health." The idea of the celebration is to bring before consumers one of the greatest industries of that state, the orange crop this year amounting to 40,000 carloads. The celebration will not be confined within the borders of California, for many of the eastern railways will feature the golden fruit on the menus of their dining cars for that day. The Grand Trunk have arranged to give prominence to California oranges on their menus on March 21st.

INVITATION TO REGIMENT OF BELLEVILLE

To Spend Victoria Day in This City.

Once more the season of the 57th Rangers is under way and promises to be very successful. To-night is the regular recruiting night for March, when recruits will be drilled under the direction of the Sergt. Instructor.

The regular regimental parades will commence on the first Tuesday of April. This year recruiting will be discontinued on the 1st of May. No recruits will be taken after that date.

An invitation has been extended to the 15th Argyle Light Infantry of Belleville, for a visit to Peterborough on the 25th of May. The 57th will go to Petawawa on the 1st of June for the anual combined training.

Arrangements are under way for the Regiment taking a trip on Labor Day instead of holding the usual sports. No decision has been arrived at yet in regard to destination.

FINISHING GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC

The progress of construction on the last part of the Grand Trunk Pacific is being watched with the greatest of interest from all parts of Canada, and the road will be in a condition to receive heavy traffic shortly after it has been opened. At present settlers are rushing into British Columbia in great numbers both via way of Prince George and via Prince Rupert and it is expected that agricultural development will be very rapid.

ESTABLISHED 1879. PETERBOROUGH, ONT., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 18, 1914. PRICE 2 CENTS

STRING OF RADIAL LINES FOR EASTERN ONTARIO

Mayor Buller Wants to See the Eastern Municipalities Wake up, Form an Organization and Get Busy in the Interests of the East---Make Peterboro the Hub

Mayor Buller is of the opinion that the municipalities east of Toronto should kick themselves several times, wake up and get busy, in the interests of Eastern Ontario.

They have a live organization in Western Ontario; they have a string of radial lines and now they are talking of municipal owned radials as a further extension of the Hydro-Electric scheme which has been such a great success.

Rip Van Winkles in the East.

Mayor Buller feels that the esatern cities, towns and villages could be connected with the radials with just as much success as is enjoyed in the west. Peterborough might be the hub. The trouble is, he says, that the people of the East have been sleeping.

His Worship believes that a live organization could be formed and he is quite sure that the municipalities should get busy right away and impress upon, not only the Ontario Government, but also the Dominion House, that Eastern Ontario is a land of promise and is worthy of consideration.

While they may have the mighty Niagara in the west, the east has the great Trent waterway, which also spells power.

Mayor Buller referred to this matter at the meeting of the Power Committee last night.

What the Act Says.

The Statutes of Ontario, 1913, page 150, chapter 38, provides for the construction of Hydro-Electric Railways by the Hydro-Electric Commission. The Act provides that the Commission may inquire into the feasibility and practicability of a line and report on same with probable cost, maintenance and operation and probable revenue. Please read the act for full information as it is under this act that we are proceeding to ask for Hydro-Electric railways.

Outside of the Act it has been explained that municipalities have simply to ask for a report by the Commission as to the feasibility of a railway, and the Commission is empowered to thoroughly investigate and report, and it has been explained that if the report is unfavorable, the Commission will pay the expense of the survey so that the municipality is at no expense unless the line is found feasible.

The Act is considered very advantageous for the construction of electric railways to be operated by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, and applications are pouring in from nearly all portions of the Province. It is explained that farmers can use electric power taken from the wires along these lines up to eight miles on each side of the line. It is believed that electric railways under this act will be become general throughout the Province of Ontario, greatly reducing the price of power to cities and town and farming districs along the line, and furnishing the cheapest and most useful transportation, greatly increasing the value of the land, creating intense farming, etc., etc.

KATHLEEN MAVOURNEEN PLEASINGLY PRESENTED

Dramatic Section of T.A.S. Play to Capacity House at the Grand

Amateur ability reached a high standard last night when the dramatic section of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society presented in the Grand Opera House that romantic Irish comedy drama in four acts, "Kathleen Mavourneen." The annual entertainment given on March 17th, is anxiously looked forward to and judging by the applause from last night's audience, the play this year was no disappointment.

The story revealed in "Kathleen Mavourneen" is but a repetition of the many stories told of the time when the lords and noblemen reigned supreme in Ireland. Kathleen O'Connor and her father are living in their little farm house and comparatively well fixed financially, yet not sufficiently so to afford Kathleen the luxuries befitting a lady. Hence when Squire Kavanagh asks for her hand, offering her all luxuires and grandeur, she is tempted to marry him, but the thought of leaving her true lover, Terence O'More, urges her to put the Squire off for a day for an answer. Terence O'More appears for his evening's "lark," but readily guesses there is something troubling his colleen and he leaves her. Tired out she arranges a rustic bed on the floor and goes to sleep.

During her sleep she has a dream. She has married the Squire, but his love for her soon grew cold. When he finds that the marriage performed by Father O'Cassidy cannot be broken he hires some ruffians to kill her. They select a very dark spot near the mountains but Terence O'More happens along and saves her life, but is forced to take the life of the Squire in self defence. Needless to say O'More is rushed to prison and sentenced to be hanged. Kathleen visits him for the last time and it is Father O'Cassidy's painful duty to take her away. The scene ends with her piteously begging the good priest to leave her with him till the last.

The last act is where she awakens to find it all a dream. Terence is due to call for his answer as is the Squire, and Kathleen picks Terence without any hesitation.

Miss Lillian Simons, playing the part of Kathleen is everything that could be desired. A buxom Irish lass, with the brogue and ready answer always on her tongue. Mr. Wm. Collins, as Terence O'More, needs no introduction. His acting last night was faultless and his singing was superb. With his fine tenor voice he rendered "When I'm Dreaming of Erin," and selections from "Terence's Farewell." He sang five or six times and always drew prolonged applause.

Mr. Vincent McCabe, as the Squire, handled a very hard part well, while Miss Annie Simons as his maid, "Kitty," and Mr. Egbert Kelly as her English sweetheart, created no small amount of amusement. Miss Simons further distinguished herself when she sang "Take Off Your Hats to Dear Old Ireland."

Mr. Ed. Hanrahan, as David O'Connor, in the first act, made a big hit by his singing of "Kerry Dance." Mr. Hanrahan also impersonated Black Rody, and took the house by storm, when he warned the Squire to watch out for "Jack" Deanard.

Miss Josephine Collins as Miss Dorothy Kavanagh; Miss O. Tangney as Meg. Marslogh; Mr. Elric White as Captain Clearfield; Mr. Ed. Boylee as Father O'Cassidy; Mr. C. Scully, as Red Barney; Mr. F. Grady, as Darby Doyle (the two assistants of Black Rody); Mr. Jas. Condon as the jailer, and Messrs. V. Scully and W. Hickey as soldiers composed the rest of the cast, and did exceptionally well.

Miss L. Simons and Messrs. S. Hoolihan and J. Hanrahan formed the general committee and can be justly given credit for the success attained.

Miss Marion Gorman, who acted in the capacity of musical director, and played the accompaniments for the singing, performed her task in her usual exceptionally good style.

Miss L. Simons was presented with a bouquet.

The furniture was supplied by McFadden.

At the close of the performance a flashlight was taken by Orme.

The young people who presented "The New Minister" at Knox church lecture hall, will repeat the performance in Lakefield next Tuesday night, under the auspices of the Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church.

A special train may be secured for the trip.

THE KING'S SUPPER

The Subject of Address To-night at Murray St. Church.

The success of the mission of Rev. C. G. Smith, of Belleville, at Murray street church, is assured. Last evening the congregation was very large and when the meeting closed promptly at nine o'clock many expressed the wish that it had continued longer. This, however, is always the case when one listens to a person possessing the peculiar gifts of Mr. Smith. He is humorous, but not frivolous, interesting, but not weak, broad, but full of conviction, joyous, but serious. The subject to-night is to be "The King's Supper," the story of King Edward's coronation banquet to which Mr. Smith was an invited guest Increased seating accommodation will be provided to-night.

DEEPEN THE ST. LAWRENCE RIVER

Peterborough may be represented on the deputation to wait on the Dominion Government, urging among other matters the improvement of the St. Lawrense River.

Such work as this would be of assistance to the Trent Valley Canal. The deputation is to be heard on the 26th of March.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF PEACE

Public Meeting to be Held on Thursday, March 26th.

A meeting in the interests of the celebration of Hundred Years of Peace, of which mention has been previously made, will be held in this city on the evening of March 26th.

Notice of the meeting has been sent to all parts of the County, Lindsay, Port Hope and other places.

Full explanation of the scheme will be made at this meeting.

RAILWAY CO. BILL IS PASSED BY THE HOUSE

Canadian Press Despatch

Toronto, March 18.—A bill was passed to-day permitting the Peterborough Radial Railway Co. to raise the bond issue from twenty thousand dollars to thirty-five thousand dollars per mile. Chairman Hendrie remarked that the Hydro engineers had reported that municipal railways would cost forty thousand dollars per mile, so the company's request was not unreasonable.

JAS. R. BELL IN HIS NEW STORE

Moves to New and Up-to-date Premises.

To-morrow Mr. Jas. R. Bell, one of this city's youngest and most progressive grocers, will be at home in his new premises, which have been known as the Noble Temperance House, on Hunter Street West.

Mr. Bell has gone to large expense in altering the building and providing two new stores on the first floor, but he believes it to be money well spent, as he will be in a position to carry a larger stock and give better satisfaction to his numerous patrons.

The store will be fitted with up-to-the-minute fixtures and general equipment, and along with the best possible service Mr. Bell will also offer choice goods at right prices. The store will be known as The Sanitary Store.

His old building, when renovated, will be occupied by Messrs. Hourigan and MacLean, who will represent the Scotland Woolen Mills, in conducting a tailoring business.

Entertain Choir.

The Board of Managers and Session of Knox church are making arrangements to entertain the choir.

NEW STREET LIGHTING SYSTEM NOT SUCH AN EXPENSIVE UNDERTAKING

Power Committee Want $4000 for Operating Expenses This Year

Cost Per Lamp Will be Decreased to $35 or Lower With System Completed

Peterboro Bill to be Considered at Toronto in the Near Future

The Power Committee will ask the City Council for an appropriation of $4,000 for the upkeep of the street lighting system. This estimate was fixed at the committee meeting last night. Incidentally the Hydro Electric vindicated itself, if such vindication was necessary.

It will be remembered that at the time of the municipal elections, Ald. Johnston and others were criticised, the statement being made that the cost to the people for the upkeep of each new light would be $65.

The different items brought before the committee last night showed that by using 80 horse power, this being sufficient for 100 lights, and providing $920 for supplies; $1,500 for interest and sinking fund; $1,500 for wages, the total is $5,360, or a fraction over $53 a lamp. The 80 h.p. costs $1,440.

Continuing under the present plan of using only half the number of lamps, only half the amount of power would be necessary. This would mean a reduction of $720. Then there are 12 old style arcs and two incandescents eliminated, by reason of the new lighting system and this means $624, which the city does not have to pay the Peterboro Light and Power Co. These two items total $1,334, and this amount deducted from the total of $5,360, brings the cost of maintenance for this year down to $4,026.

Only Partial System.

It must be borne in mind that the system is being run under a handicap because only part of the system is in operation. It is estimated that with the whole system under way the cost per lamp will not exceed $35. There are reasons to believe that the cost will be lower. The cost for 80 h.p. will not be anything like $1,440 when the city takes power from the Hydro Electric, or is served by a municipal plant.

There was some difference of opinion as to the present plan of lighting, that is, using only half the number of lights, but it was felt that in the near future the city would have a better definition as to its position. The bill of the city will be presented and there is confidence that the city will come out all right. Then the whole question can be dealt with in a more satisfactory manner.

In the meantime it is not the desire of the committee to put the city to any unnecessary expense, and only half the number of lights will be used.

"Turn Them Out."

Ald. Gordon had to have his little joke when this latter question was under discussion. Ald. Duncan had expressed the opinion that all the lights should blaze forth, when Hon. R. Rogers and Hon. A. Meighen and Mr. Burnham came to the city on the 30th of this month, and on any important occasion. Mayor Buller thought so too.

"I'd think you would turn them out," remarked Ald. Gordon.

New Routes Suggested.

Johnston Greer, superintendent of the system, submitted a suggestion as to where the lights should be placed, in the event of a decision to use only half of those now burning and distribute the other half. New poles and equipment would this expenditure would come out of the general fund of $120,000 voted by the people. About $30,000 has already been expended.

Mr. Greer suggested that the lights be placed as follows:

Charlotte Street, east to Water and west to Park, 5 lamps.

Water, from Charlotte to McDonnel, 11 lamps.

Aylmer, from Charlotte to McDonnel, 10 lamps.

Simcoe, Water to Aylmer, 2 lamps.

On Hunter, the bridge to Aylmer, 5 lamps.

On Brock, Water to Aylmer, 4 lamps.

Murray, Water to the Armouries.

McDonnel, Water Street to the Collegiate, 3 lamps.

These lamps would be on one side of the street only.

As intimated before, this scheme will remain in abeyance until after the Private Bill of the city, dealing with its expropriation proceedings with the Peterboro Light and Power Co. is dealt with and the position of the city is clearly defined.

The Company's Lights.

During some discussion on the maintenance of the Peterborough Light and Power Company's lights, which service was felt to be rather under the mark, Ald. Gordon said, "I don't think there is even an effort to keep them up."

OUTFITTING POLICEMEN IS EXPENSIVE

New Clothes and Equipment Costs Over $100 for Each Man.

Speaking about the fancy prices for millinery and frocks, it also costs something to outfit a police officer. With the three men added to the police force receiving a brand new and complete outfit, the expense to the city will be something over $300.

The city treasury supplies the wherewithal for the clothing and equipment, but the officer buys his own footwear.

Here is a list of the articles required for each policeman and cost of each:

Overcoat, $26.00.
Two capes, $20.00.
Fur cap, $16.00.
Trousers, $6.25.
Summer serges, $8.25.
Tunic, $10.50.
Helmet, $3.50.
Revolver, $13.99.
Handcuffs, $6.00.
Whistle, $0.50.
Baton, $1.00.

Each man gets two pairs of trousers, one for summer and one for winter, each pair costs $6.25, and the trousers generally wear for two seasons. His heavy tunic costs $10.50, and lasts for a number of years. At a cost of $26, the overcoat does duty for ten years, and some coats at the department have seen even longer service.

The capes, that is, an oil cloth and a felt cape, cost $20, and they wear well.

The clothing is made in this city, and all clothing contracts are awarded by tender. Owing to the fact of the small orders for clothing and articles of equipment, the average cost is higher than it would be for a large force.

It is possible at times to give the men some of the clothing and equipment which has been used, and by this means the Police Chief manages to send out a man fully arrayed for duty for a smaller outlay than would be necessary for the new and complete regalia.

WHITE HORSE SQUAW
ALEX
OLD BOGUE

Picturesque Indians, who for years have encamped about a mile out of Moose Jaw, Sask. They are members of a band of Sioux, and the two men and one woman shown are some of the very few pure-blooded Sioux in the district. This is not their every-day costume, but is their full war regalia, minus the paint. Old Bogue is Medicine Man of the band. He is named after Richard Hogue, one of the first storekeepers of Moose Jaw.

FOUR DIE IN TORONTO FIRE

Well Known Horseman of Belleville is Believed to be Among the Dead---Only Two Bodies Have Been Recovered

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, March 18.—There is much confusion at the scene of the fire at the Woodbine Hotel in which at least two persons and possibly five perished. One body recovered soon after midnight was at first taken for Max Cohan, and another body found this morning at eleven was taken for Fred Levenson, both of New York.

Later acquaintances stated very positively the remains were neither. It is now believed that the body found last is that of Charles Wilmot, a well-known horseman, of Belleville, and the remains supposed to have been Cohan, are believed to be those of a man named Millar. Wilmot, who was in the hotel last night, lay down for a sleep and left an order to be called to attend the hockey match. He has not since been seen.

Toronto (later)—The dead by the Woodbine Hotel fire now numbers four. Only two bodies have been recovered, but it is not doubted that the two missing men perished. The dead are Max Cohan and Fred Levenson, New York; Charles Wilmot, Belleville; Wm. Jeffrey, Stratford, traveller for McClary's, London. D. Millar, of the C. P. R., Montreal, reported missing, and believed to be one of the bodies recovered, was located this morning at another hotel.

DRAINAGE SURVEYS MADE WITHOUT COST

Free Assistance to Farmers in Solving Their Drainage Difficulties.

Farmers! Have you a field on your place that is too "wet, cold and sour?" Drainage will reclaim it and make it one of the best fields on the farm.

Drainage does four things. First it removes the surplus water and makes it possible to cultivate and seed about three weeks earlier in the spring than on the same land when undrained. Secondly it makes the land from ten to fifteen degrees warmer than if not drained, and this warmth germinates the seed properly and gives a good stand of grain. Thirdly, it lets plenty of air down to the roots of the plants, which is necessary for satisfactory growth. Fourthly, it makes the soil more porous, and this in turn causes the soil to store up more water for the use of the crops in time of drought.

Frequently the increase of crop in one year pays for the drainage, and seldom or never does it take longer than three years, so that drainage pays from 33 per cent. to 100 per cent. per annum on the money invested.

Have you difficulties in drainage? The Department of Physics of the Ontario Agricultural College will assist you on application. They will make you a complete survey of the area to be drained, or run a single line of drain, and when done furnish you with a finished map showing location of drains, grades, sizes of the tile, etc.—a detailed guide for the thorough drainage of the land in question. No charge is made for the services of these drainage advisers, none for the maps, only the applicant pays the travelling expenses in connection with his survey, amounting usually to not more than a couple of dollars.

Drop a card to the Department of Physics, O.A.C., Guelph, for the regular application form.

ORCHESTRA REHEARSAL.

The Conservatory Orchestra will rehearse to-night at 8 o'clock.

ALL SAINTS' CHURCH.

Special Lentea Service to-night at 8 o'clock in All Saints' Church, followed by choir practice.

OPPOSITION LOST OUT IN THE FINISH

Howard Ferguson is Idemnified After Strenuous Session.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, March 18. — At four forty-five this morning, after a fourteen hours' session, the Legislature passed by a vote of 61 to 17, a bill indemnifying Howard Ferguson, member for Grenville, for having taken remuneration from the Dominion Government while still a member of the Legislature.

The three readings of the bill went through in one day's sitting. The Opposition protested at every stage, and raised every point conceivable in an attempt to thwart the purpose of the Government and its enormous majority, but finally after they were talked out, ruled out, and howled down, they submitted to the second and third readings of white-washing the member.

ST. ANDREWS' CHURCH BILL IS REPORTED

Will Now Go Before the Private Bills Committee.

The bill to enable the trustees of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Peterborough, to sell certain lands, has been reported on favorably by two of the Justices of the Supreme Court, Judges Falconbridge and Middleton, as follows: "It is reasonable that the said bill do pass into law. The provisions thereof appear to us to be proper for carrying the Bill into effect and we do not deem any alteration or amendment thereof to be necessary." The Bill is in charge of Mr. Peck, M.L.A., and will now go before the Private Bills Committee, with instructions to consider the same with reference to the suggestions of the Commissioners.

BORDEN AND THE C. N. R.

THE PROTRACTED nature of the negotiations between the Canadian Northern Railway and the Borden Government, as well as the various rumors that have from time to time emanated from Ottawa, illustrate the importance and seriousness of the railway situation in this country at the present time. The government recognizes that the Canadian Northern is too deeply concerned in the national credit of Canada to allow it to be hampered by the lack of financial backing. The question is not one of assistance, but rather of what kind of assistance the Government will grant. According to reports, the Canadian Northern will require seventy million dollars to complete it. Already over three hundred millions have been invested in the eight thousand odd miles of that railroad. The magnitude of the railroad, its investments and its large calls on Provincial and Dominion credit, quite justify Mr. Borden in providing the Canadian Northern with the necessary capital to make it a complete transcontinental railway.

Judging from reports, the Borden government will not make a direct loan to the company, but will guarantee their bonds for the necessary amount. The difference between this method and a straight loan is that the company will have to put up greater security for the bonds. This security seems to be the difficulty in the present negotiations. Mackenzie and Mann know it is to their interest, to get the loan without furnishing too much security. Mr. Borden feels that the national credit must be protected for such a large amount of backing, as the present condition of the Canadian Northern requires. In the furnishing of security, the government should see that the road is constructed in accordance with proper standards of railroad building. There is no use pledging the wealth of the Canadian people to the extent of hundreds of millions for railroads, unless they are constructed in a substantial manner, or in other words unless the money granted is put into the building of the road.

Mr. Borden and his cabinet are expected to lay their proposals before a caucus of the Conservative party to-day. Whatever plan he proposes, the Conservative party will likely be committed to it. Whatever the policy will be, Mr. Borden no doubt recognizes that more than the fate of the Canadian Northern is involved in what the Government decide to do. The credit of the Canadian people, the policy of the Canadian government in regard to railways, and the granting of assistance to such corporations, the credit of provinces, particularly Saskatchewan, the development of a great stretch of territory, the effect of the Canadian Northern on trade, these are only a few phases of the important problem, concerning which, the Borden government will give its decision in the next few days.

NEW FINANCIAL DAILY.

THE EVENING newspaper situation in Montreal, will not be affected to any great extent by the announcement a few days ago, that the Honorable W. S. Fielding was going to launch another daily journal in that city. What Mr. Fielding is going to do, is to purchase the weekly "Journal of Commerce," and as soon as the necessary machinery can be installed turn it into a daily financial publication. The new paper will not be in any sense a political or party publication. It will deal with matters of commerce and finance in the widest possible way, including, among other things, banking, stocks and bonds, municipal debentures, insurance, transportation, wholesale markets and company reports. The new journal should be a success, as it will have at its head an ex-minister of finance. The great difficulty with financial papers is to keep them independent. If Mr. Fielding can keep the Daily Journal of Commerce free from the influences of interests, parties, corporations and labour organizations, it will be doing a great work. We await the advent of the new journal with interest, and wish the promoters the success due the disinterested effort they propose to make.

UPHOLDING THE SPIRIT OF THE LAW.

ON MONDAY, Judge Denton dismissed the appeal of Earnest G. McConkey from the conviction of Magistrate Denison, and the suspension of sixty days of the appellant's liquor license for keeping a disorderly house. He denounced in scathing terms, the New Year's Eve celebration in McConkey's restaurant, Toronto, out of which the case arose. Judge Denton, in the course of his finding said :—

> "If the court were driven to rely on the criminal code and the decisions based upon it for a definition of a disorderly house, this case would be a very simple one. The appeal would have been allowed at once, for there is not the slightest evidence before me that McConkey's establishment comes within that definition, and the same conclusions would, I think, have been reached if, unaided by the Liquor License Act itself, we had to rely on the generally-accepted legal definition of a disorderly inn.
>
> "To that extent I quite agree with Mr. Ludwig that a house must, in a sense, be disreputable before it can be said to be disorderly, but Section 81, under which the conviction is made, itself states when and under what circumstances a magistrate may convict. And if there was, in fact, disorderly conduct in this house on the night or morning in question, it cannot, I think, be successfully contended that it was not disorderly conduct in point of law, simply because it has not been shown that there was disorderly conduct in the same place on some previous occasion."

From this extract, it is evident that his Honor was upholding the spirit of the law, when he dismissed the appeal. There is evil enough in the country, without allowing such disgraceful affairs as the one in question to go free of a reprimand. All good citizens will commend the authorities for the position taken on this case and will hope that the lesson will have the desired effect.

SUNDAY VOTING.

IN REFERENCE to Sunday voting, the Ottawa Citizen has the following report which should be read very carefully to understand Mr. Burnham's position:

> "The report of the Ottawa Lord's Day Alliance meeting," said Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., this morning, "makes it appear that I suggested in the course of my evidence given before the parliamentary special committee recently that Dominion elections should be held on Sunday. I did not make the suggestion; I answered a question. But I agree with the parliamentary special committee yesterday that Dominion elections should be held on Sunday. I did not make the suggestion; I answered a question. But I agree with the idea. It is to my mind much more truly Christian than at present to help the mass of the people to raise their conception of civil duty to the level of a religious one and to provide a day such as must be provided without calling upon labour to lose a day's pay for it and thus to make a sacrifice which the local Lord's Day Alliance secretary apparently is quite willing that it should make.'

It will thus be seen that our Dominion member did not make the suggestion, although he agrees with it. He has taken a very high position on the sacredness of the exercise of a citizen's rights. Benjamin Franklin is recalled by the Sunday voting idea. That great American, leaning to agnosticism if not to atheism, made a famous remark during the seemingly hopeless debate over the formation of the American constitution, when he suggested that the discussion be opened with prayer, in order that they might be led to some rational agreement. Whether the suggestion is agreeable to the majority of people or not, the importance of emphasizing the sacredness of electoral privileges must appeal to all.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE TORONTO NEWS digs up an historical note describing a banana as a vegetable sausage. This is the worst.

YESTERDAY WAS the finest St. Patrick's Day we ever saw. The weather could not be surpassed, sunshiny and warm and we saw only one drunk all day, and he didn't look like a son of Erin. That speaks pretty well for the Irish around Peterborough.

SAYS THE Montreal Mail:—"The Ottawa Journal points out that Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., is most faithful in his attendance in the House of Commons. The tribute is well deserved. Mr. Burnham gives over-time without complaint."

This brief note of appreciation from influential newspapers shows with what wisdom the majority of citizens in this locality voted at the last election.

A Bad Step for B. C. Labour.

Brantford Expositor.

The action of the British Columbia Federation of Labour in prohibiting members of the militia from belonging to its affiliated organizations will injure the cause of organized labor greatly more than it will injure the militia. It is gratifying to note that some of the most advanced labor leaders recognized this fact and opposed the step strongly.

Praise for Mgr. Bruchesi.

Presbyterian Witness.

Archbishop Bruchesi's circular letter in condemnation of certain forms of dancing and feminine dress has met the approval of thoughtful persons of all the churches—Protestant and Catholic—and has been favorably commented on by the public press. In their outspoken condemnation of immodesty in any and every form, Archbishop Bruchesi and other prominent clergymen of the Roman Catholic Church deserve the hearty sympathy and support of all pure-minded persons. It is a sad day for any people when that most beautiful virtue of womanhood, modesty, begins to fade.

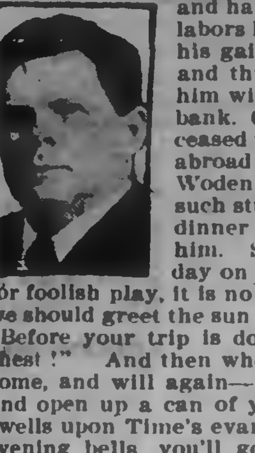
WEDNESDAY

By Walt Mason



This is a chaste and cheerful day, that makes a hit most everywhere; it took three medals and (they say) a ribbon at the county fair. On Monday man begins the week, and hardly gets his job on straight; next day he labors like a streak, on Wednesday he has struck his gait. He then makes every motion count, and thus he doesn't draw a blank; night finds him with a large amount of real mazuma in the bank. Old Woden was an ancient god who never ceased to put up hay, while other godlets roamed abroad and spent the golden hours in play. And Woden humped himself so well, and showed such stunning zeal and vim (nor listened for the dinner bell), they named this blooming day for him. So Wednesday is the workers' day, the day on which we chase the bones; it is no time for foolish play, it is no day for drowsy drones. On Wednesday we should greet the sun when that orb rises in the West, and say, "Before your trip is done, we'll find with plunks the treasure chest !" And then when comes the rainy day—such days have come, and will again—"You cannot freeze our feet," we'll say, and open up a can of yen. So get to work while Wednesday dwells upon Time's evanescent chart, and then when sounds the evening bells, you'll go to rest with peaceful heart.

Birthdays of Note

WEDNESDAY, MARCH EIGHTEENTH

The most anxious days ever spent by Lieut.-Col. A. P. Sherwood, Commissioner of Dominion Police and Head of the Secret Service Department, who is celebrating his sixtieth birthday to-day, were during the trip of the Prince and Princess of Wales through Canada in 1901. To him personally was confided the safety of Their Royal Highnesses and the task was all the more onerous because the assassination of President McKinley had occurred just before the royal couple landed. During the time he was with them, Colonel Sherwood went through no more trying moment than when in Quebec while the Mayor was reading an address of welcome a sharp report, as of a gun or pistol, was heard. Coming so suddenly it caused momentary consternation, until it was realised that it was only the slamming of a door, when the general perturbation gave place to nervous laughter. For his services in 1901, Col. Sherwood was created a C.M.G.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

The latest estimates of loss of life in the storm over the Sea of Azov places the casualty list at 1,200.

The Duke of Connaught has no intention of visiting the Yukon this year, as reported in English newspapers.

Elizabeth Ruth, Countess of Devon, died yesterday at Cheltenham. The countess celebrated the century of her birth on March 12.

A violent storm broke down the embankment along the River Scheldt, near Termonde, Belgium, yesterday, and the greater part of the city was flooded.

The visit to England of Sir Lionel Carden, the British Minister to Mexico, was not in any way due to representations on the part of any foreign power, said Sir Edward Grey.

Advises from Alaska report that Rev. Harry Fox, the Anglican missionary, had been in touch with Stefansson's white Eskimos. There are two Catholic priests also there.

Senator Townsend, of Michigan, yesterday addressed the U. S. Senate advocating a deep waterway from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic through the Welland Canal and the St. Lawrence river.

Two hundred and fifty Wellesley, Mass., students and 100 other persons, including members of the faculty and maids, fled for their lives when fire destroyed College Hall. The loss is $1,500,000.

Pleads Guilty To Bigamy.

BRANTFORD, Ont., March 18.—Gordon May, formerly of Oshawa, pleaded guilty to bigamy and was remanded for sentence.

He was married on June 4, 1908, to Ruby Lane of Oshawa and lived with her for two years, they having two children. Then he sold the house and furnishings and said he was going to Chicago. He landed in Uxbridge and lived with Leta Anderson until her father ejected them and then they came here and were married.

Warned Against the Theatre.

WINNIPEG, March 18. — Archbishop Langevin has issued instructions forbidding his clergy from attending theatres and moving pictures shows, and urging them to warn their people from attending such places. The archbishop also forbids the holding of dances for the aid of any church organization, and issues a general warning against the new dances.

Cast Copper.

It is now possible to produce cast copper of high electrical conductivity that is mechanically sound. The difficulties of copper casting are due to oxygen, nitrogen and oxygen-containing gases, and this is overcome by using boron, which has a high affinity for these gases, but no affinity for copper. Cast copper is rapidly replacing forged copper in many of the electrical arts.

Tarzan of the Apes

by Edgar Rice Burroughs

Copyright, 1912, by the Frank A. Munsey company.

I speak only the language of my tribe, the great apes who were Kerchak's, and a little of the languages of Tantor, the elephant, and Numa, the lion, and of the other folks of the jungle I understand. With a human being I have never spoken except once with Jane Porter by signs. This is the first time I have spoken with another of my kind through written words.

D'Arnot was mystified. It seemed incredible that there lived upon the earth a full grown man who had never spoken with a fellow man and still more preposterous that such a one could read and write.

He looked again at Tarzan's message—"except once with Jane Porter." That was the American girl who had been carried into the jungle by a gorilla.

A sudden light commenced to dawn on D'Arnot. This, then, was the "gorilla." He seized the pencil and wrote:

Where is Jane Porter?

And Tarzan replied below:

Back with her people in the cabin of Tarzan of the apes.

D'Arnot wrote:

She is not dead, then? Where was she? What happened to her?

Tarzan answered:

She is not dead. She was taken by Terkoz to be his wife. Tarzan of the apes took her away from Terkoz and killed him before he could harm her.

None in all the jungle may face Tarzan of the apes in battle and live. I am Tarzan of the apes, mighty fighter.

D'Arnot wrote:

I am glad she is safe. It pains me to write. I will rest awhile.

And then Tarzan:

Yes, rest. When you are well I shall take you back to your people.

For many days D'Arnot lay upon his bed of soft ferns. The second day a fever had come, and D'Arnot thought that it meant infection and he knew that he would die.

He called Tarzan and indicated by signs that he would write, and when Tarzan had fetched the bark and pencil D'Arnot wrote:

Can you go to my people and lead them here? I will write a message that you may take to them, and they will follow you.

Tarzan shook his head and, taking the bark, wrote:

I thought of that the first day. I dared not. The great apes come often to this spot. If they found you here wounded and alone they would kill you.

D'Arnot turned on his side and closed his eyes. He did not wish to die, but he felt that he was going, for the fever was mounting higher and higher. That night he lost consciousness.

For three days he was in delirium, and Tarzan sat beside him and bathed his head and hands and washed his wounds.

On the fourth day the fever broke as suddenly as it had come, but it left D'Arnot a shadow of his former self and very weak. Tarzan had to lift him that he might drink from the gourd.

The fever had not been the result of infection, as D'Arnot had thought, but one of those that commonly attack whites in the jungles of Africa and either kill or leave them as suddenly as D'Arnot's had left him.

Two days after they sat beneath the shade of a great tree, and Tarzan found some smooth bark that they might converse.

D'Arnot wrote:

What can I do to repay you for all that you have done for me?

Tarzan wrote in reply:

Teach me to speak the language of men.

And so D'Arnot commenced at once, pointing out familiar objects and repeating their names in French, for he thought that it would be easier to teach this man his own language, since he understood it himself best of all.

It meant nothing to Tarzan, of course, for he could not tell one language from another, so when he pointed to the word "man" which he had printed upon a piece of bark he learned from D'Arnot that it was pronounced "homme," and in the same way he was taught to pronounce ape "singe" and tree "arbre."

He was a most eager student and in two more days had mastered so much French that he could speak little sentences such as "That is a tree," "This is grass," "I am hungry," and the like, but D'Arnot found that it was difficult to teach him the French construction upon a foundation of English.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Lost Treasure.

ON the third day after the fever broke Tarzan wrote a message asking D'Arnot if he felt strong enough to be carried back to the cabin. Tarzan was as anxious to go as D'Arnot, for he longed to see Jane Porter again.

It had been hard for him to remain with the Frenchman all these days. That he had done so spoke more glowingly for his nobility of character than even did his rescuing of the French officer from Mbonga's clutches.

D'Arnot was only too willing to attempt the journey.

"But you cannot carry me all the distance through this tangled forest," he wrote.

Tarzan laughed.

"Mais oui," he said, and D'Arnot laughed aloud to hear the phrase that he used so often glide from Tarzan's tongue.

So they set out, D'Arnot marveling, as had Clayton and Jane Porter, at the wondrous strength and agility of the ape man.

Midafternoon brought them to the clearing, and as Tarzan dropped to earth from the branches of the last tree his heart leaped and bounded against his ribs in anticipation of seeing Jane Porter so soon again.

No one was in sight without the cabin. D'Arnot was perplexed to note that neither the cruiser nor the Arrow was at anchor in the bay.

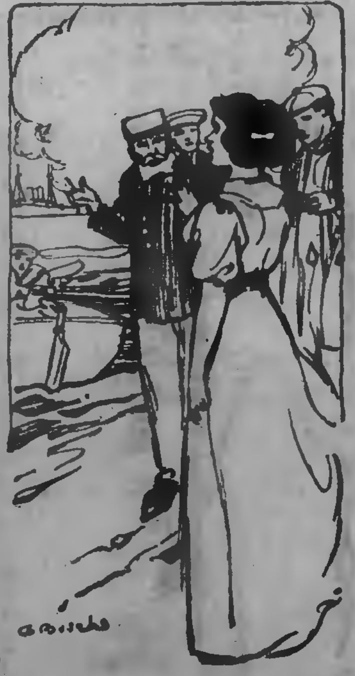
An atmosphere of loneliness pervaded the spot which caught suddenly at both men as they strode toward the cabin.

Tarzan lifted the latch and pushed the great door in upon its wooden hinges. It was as they had feared. The cabin was deserted.

The men turned and looked at one another. D'Arnot knew that his people thought him dead, but Tarzan thought only of the woman who had kissed him in love and now had fled from him while he was serving one of her people.

A great bitterness rose in his heart. He would go away, far into the jungle, and join his tribe. Never would he see one of his own kind again, nor could he bear the thought of returning to the cabin.

And the Frenchman, D'Arnot, what of him? He could get along as Tarzan had. Tarzan did not want to see him more. He wanted to get away from everything that might remind him of Jane Porter.



"No, I shall not go, nor should you."

As Tarzan stood upon the threshold brooding D'Arnot had entered the cabin. Many comforts he saw that had been left behind.

GRAFT IN MONTREAL?

Edward Beck Prepares To Remove Lid From Civic Politics.

MONTREAL, March 17—What the Burns' detectives found out at the Montreal City Hall about the same time as they unearthed the graft at Quebec, will be made public between now and election day. Edward Beck, who wrote the sensational graft disclosures for The Montreal Mail, will bring out a weekly paper towards the end of next week, and the first issue is expected to give the details of alleged civic graft. Mr. Beck will not be able to revive The Mirror, as The Herald Telegraph lay claim to this designation. The Herald and Telegraph will add "and Mirror" to its name. Mr. Beck is now in New York in conference with the Burns' detectives. Mr. D. Lorne McGibbon is also there. Mr. Beck's new paper will be called "Beck's Weekly."

[illegible] Believe King Otto Insane.

It is a curious fact that the Bavarian peasantry do not believe to this day that their legitimate monarch, King Otto, is insane. Their idea is that he has been shut up all these years simply because of his tendency—peculiar to the Bavarian royal house—toward extravagance. Indeed, they hardly believe him to be the legitimate king, for they have never believed that his elder brother and predecessor, King Ludwig, was drowned. They think he is still living somewhere in captivity, and in proof of their belief they point out that his body was never recovered.

Thumb Prints Deed Signature.

Two human thumb prints form unusual parts of a real estate deed recently filed in Fort Madison, Ia. The deed is for some former Indian lands in Oklahoma, and the thumb prints were taken in the place of signatures. Above each thumb print is the name of the owner, written by the real estate agent who transacted the transfer of the property from the government to two Indians. This deed is unique in real estate records.

BILLS ARE ADVANCED

Legislature Holds a Brief Session—Motor Bill Withdrawn.

TORONTO, March 17.—Three bills passed their second readings in the short half-hour session of the Legislature yesterday afternoon.

The bill of J. W. Johnson (Belleville), although not eliciting unanimous support, was allowed to pass the second reading and go to committee. It was designed to safeguard the sinking funds of municipalities from officers who would use them in the payment of town debentures. The sinking fund was a trust fund which should be kept intact, said Mr. Johnson.

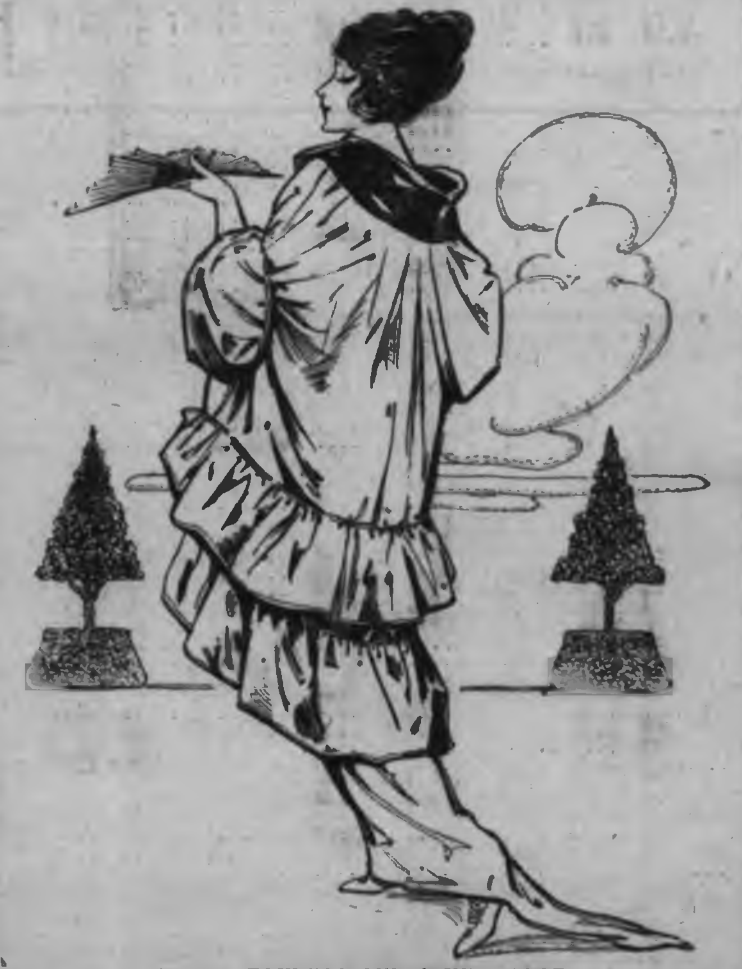
Hon. Mr. Hanna pointed out that the earmarking of sinking funds was not always feasible. It was a question whether it paid better to have the sinking fund laid aside to accumulate a low rate of interest or to use part of it to pay off the higher rates which were connected with other municipal undertakings. The present act had the financial advantage.

The bill of John McFarlane (East Middlesex) to grant power to county councils that would allow of territory extension in police villages was also passed on to the private bills committee.

There is a possibility that rural communities will gain the privilege of having their tax papers and collections handled through the mail according to the custom now followed in the towns and cities. This is the purport of J. G. Anderson's bill, which secured its second reading without comment.

The amendment to the Motor Vehicles Act, which would enable municipalities to forbid the use of their roads to motorists for 24 hours every week was withdrawn by its sponsor, J. G. Anderson (Bruce), because of the unpopularity of the proposal.

THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION



A NEW TAFFETA AND A NEW COAT.

A lustrous taffeta called pussy-willow taffeta, as soft as chiffon and with the sheen of charmeuse, yet with weight enough to make delightful draperies, is used in this shapeless coat which has the proper flare about the lower part and the looseness in the upper that is necessary over the crushable stuffs and bouffant draperies of spring. The loose effect is increased in the front where there is no apparent fastening, just a few well concealed snap-fasteners, where the garment seems to be carelessly folded over.

Birthday Table Decorations.

The table itself in scarlet and green is most attractive. Instead of having candles stuck into the icing of the birthday cake in the usual way, it is encircled with little thin three pronged candelabra holding scarlet tapers. The same little branched candlesticks are scattered over the cloth. Green sprays also encircle the cake. Little red flower pots should be scrubbed, lined with waxed paper and filled with nuts. The novel feature of this birthday table is the scarlet balloon bobbing merrily from each guest's chair. Nor is that all. As the little hostess wishes her company to share her birthday happiness she has gifts for them, too, suspended over the table. And what do you think the gifts are fastened to? To more balloons which have been allowed (after the favors have been tied to them) to go free, resting against the ceiling, until the delighted guests at the close of the feast pull them down by the gifts to which their names are attached.

To Remove Fruit Stains.

Fruit stains on tablecloths and napkins are very troublesome, but this is a most effectual method of dealing with them: Stretch the stained part across a basin and pour boiling water in which there is a little borax, over it. Then wring it out, reverse the piece and pour more water on the other side.

Seeing the Unseeable.

Stars that are so faint that they not only cannot be seen with a telescope, but cannot be detected by long exposure of a very sensitive photographic plate in a telescope, are even then not beyond the range of discovery. A British scientist is working on a device that will record the existence of distant stars that never yet have been detected. By means of selenium, a metal the electrical resistance of which varies with the amount of light thrown on it, he has made an instrument that will show a tiny current of electricity when the light of a star is thrown in it. So delicate is it that he expects it will show enough current to be recorded when it is focused on some little spot in the sky where no star is now known, if, as a matter of fact, there is some faint star there.—Saturday Evening Post.

Laying Keel of Big Warship.

NEW YORK, March 17.—The laying of the keel of battleship No. 39, which may eventually be named either the North Carolina or the Arizona, at the navy yard in Brooklyn yesterday, marks the beginning of the greatest fighting machine in the United States navy.

With a displacement of 31,500 tons, she will be slightly larger than her older sister, the Pennsylvania, and will be the tenth vessel of the super-Dreadnought class to be added to the fleet.

Burned By Suffragettes.

LONDON, March 17.—The reign of terror instituted by militant suffragettes following the arrest of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst recently, was directed toward railways yesterday. The suffragettes swooped down upon the railway yards at King's Norton, near Birmingham and burned six passenger cars standing on a siding. Three others were badly damaged.

Nanaimo's New Industry.

A new industry has been started in Nanaimo, B.C. This is a pickled herring plant established by a Victoria company that has decided there is a good foreign market for pickled herring put up in Nanaimo. The herring will be put up in wooden barrels and kits.

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SERVICE

NEWS NOTES FROM OMEMEE

Special Correspondence.

Omemee, March 18—Mr. Nettleton, of the Bank of Toronto staff, Millbrook, called on Omemee friends on Thursday.

Mr. Frank Ford, of Peterborough, was home for a visit last week.

Mr. George Weir, of Keene, was the guest last week of his brother, Mr. John Weir, proprietor of the Commercial House.

Mr. F. Curry and Miss Curry, of Brockville, and Mrs. Kimpton, of Toronto, spent a few days last week as the guests of the Misses Curry.

Mr. Noel Clark, of Peterboro, was home on Thursday.

Mr. H. B. Murray has returned home from Toronto and other points, where he was visiting friends.

Early Thursday morning an eastbound freight met with a mishap at the river bridge, the result being the piling up of 10 or 12 freight cars, just east of the river. The auxiliary from Lindsay was soon at the scene of the accident, the track being repaired by noon; in the interim trains took the old route via Bethany. The accident is supposed to have been caused by a broken wheel or axle, some of the trucks travelled across the bridge on the timbers, which were badly splintered. The only car that was a total wreck was loaded with loose wheat, which flowed about the track like water. There was another car of wheat, one of sole leather, one of silver ore, and one of provisions. All wreckage was cleared away by Friday night. A host of sight-seers visited the scene of the disaster.

Mr. Samuel Skuce, of Toronto, came down home on Saturday evening.

Mr. Wm. Glass, of Bridgenorth, has been calling on his Omemee friends.

Mrs. (Dr.) Sutton, of Peterboro, was the guest of Omemee friends on Saturday.

There were six applicants for the contract of carrying the mail on the rural route north.

Our hockey team journeyed to Bethany on Saturday and played a tie game 1-1 with the team of that town.

Mr. H. Best was in town on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Greig and children, of Mount Pleasant, called on her brother, Mr. T. W. McLean, on Saturday.

The Grim Reaper paid a visit to our village on Saturday, taking away to his rest another of our old and esteemed citizens in the person of the late Samuel Sandy, at the advanced age of 84 years. The deceased, with his daughter, Mrs. Toole, resided on George Street. His death was purely the result of old age. The funeral on Monday to the Emily Cemetery was attended by relatives and friends who wished to pay their last respects to one whose citizenship extends for back into the early history of Omemee. The Rev. J. F. Chapman officiated at the obsequies. There are left to mourn his decease a brother, Mr. Joseph Sandy, and a sister, Mrs. Roland, of Omemee; three daughters, Mrs. Toole, of Omemee; Mrs. Holmes, and Mrs. Edmunds, of Toronto, and a large number of other close relatives, to all of whom sincere sympathy is extended.

Rev. J. G. Lewis, of Peterboro, preached morning and evening in the Presbyterian Church on Sabbath last, and at Mount Pleasant in the afternoon.

Mr. A. Yelland has returned home.

Mr. H. Sandy, of Manvers Station, and Miss Ina Sandy, of Toronto, attended the funeral of the late Samuel Sandy on Monday.

Mr. Isaac Richardson, of Millbrook, returned to Omemee on Monday.

Mr. Wm. Lamb, or Peterboro, made a business call the first of the week.

Mr. John Palmer visited his home here the first of the week.

Mrs. J. B. Hayes is the recipient of a good sized cheque as a reward for her success in a competition managed by the Doherty Piano Co., of Toronto. Congratulations.

ROWELL IS IN FAVOR

Workmen's Compensation Measure is Little Altered.

TORONTO, March 18.—The Workmen's Compensation bill was brought down in the Ontario House last night and given its first reading. Hon. I. B. Lucas, M.P.P., its sponsor, explained that while some of the bill's machinery might be open to criticism, its principles could not, and it was a measure whose necessity had long been realized in Ontario.

"The bill is too serious a matter to be made a political issue in this House," said Mr. Lucas. "We are now taking the plain path of duty in presenting this bill. I think labor and manufacturing interests have alike agreed that the present protection of workers is inadequate.

"The vital point of the whole bill is that these risks should be compensated by the interests, and it is not a question of personal negligence. The risks must be paid for. That, I think, is recognized by all."

Mr. Rowell then spoke. "We are able to agree to a remarkable degree with the Government upon this bill. We think it is one of the most important measures that has ever come before this Legislature, and certainly concur heartily in the proposal that it should be considered entirely free from political bias."

The demands of the C. M. A. on the one hand and those of the Labor men on the other will be practically compromised in the bill, although the measure follows closely the draft bill submitted to the Government several months ago. The clause in the bill covering permanent total disability calls for a weekly payment to the injured, equal to a percentage of the average weekly earnings for the previous twelve months, or for a lesser period under the employer. The rate fixed is 55 per cent. Deduction of part of wages as premiums to insure against liability is, at the demand of the labor men, made illegal. The only employers exempt from the bill are farmers.

Club women in St. Louis are to organize for the purpose of taking up civic problems, especially reforms in the treatment of women prisoners.

GUESTS MEET DEATH WHEN WOODBINE HOTEL IS BURNED

Two New York Hebrews Try to Save Bull Dog After Fire Breaks Out in Woodbine Hotel in Toronto---E. Giles, of Montreal, Terribly Injured in Jump From Window.

TORONTO, March 18. — Two men were burned to death, one man was probably fatally injured, two men were seriously injured and $150,000 loss was caused in a fire which destroyed the Woodbine Hotel, one of Toronto's best-appointed and most modern hostelries, between 7.30 and 9 o'clock last night.

In an effort to save a valued bulldog that Max Cohen and Fred Levenson, both of New York, went back to their deaths after having been led to safety by Mr. Arthur Lee. The three injured are: Edmund S. Giles, Montreal, (probably fatally hurt); C. E. Edwards, New York, and Wm. Gray, assistant manager of the hotel.

Mr. Lee, of 13 West 119th street, New York, occupied rooms on the third floor. The three men were sitting in Cohen's room when the smoke was noticed issuing through the cracks around the door. Mr. Lee, who was familiar with the hotel, immediately hurried to the hall and broke down the door of room 304. His friends followed him to the fire escape. Mr. Lee continued down the escape, but Cohen and Levenson remembered the dog and returned for it. That was the last seen of them until a search was pursued after the fire was brought under control and the charred remains of Cohen were found amongst the debris of the third floor with those of the dog. The body was taken to the morgue, and the search continued for the remains of Levenson, but at an early hour this morning they had not been recovered. However, there is no doubt that Levenson perished in the flames.

The finding of the body of Cohen was the sequel to a frantic search. It was only when the firemen made their final round to assure themselves that the fire was out that the ghastly discovery was made. During this search the valuable jewelry of Miss Elsa Ryan, leading woman with the "Peg o' My Heart" company at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, which had fallen from the third floor, was discovered intact in the basement. Several members of the company lost their entire belongings.

Edmund S. Giles, of Montreal, may be a third victim of the fire, as the injuries he sustained when he jumped from a second storey window were very extensive. Both his legs were fractured, and his back is thought to be broken. Mr. Giles was found lying on Pearl street in a semi-conscious condition. He was dressed only in his underclothes, and had apparently been unaware of the fire until it had gained such great headway that he was cut off from the fire escape, a short distance from his room. He was taken to the General Hospital.

The fire broke out at 7.30, and had made considerable headway before the guests who were mostly at dinner were aware of it. When the alarm was given men and women surged through the rooms and passages, up the stairs, shouting, crying, one or two women fainting, and before anyone was aware of it the fire engines drove up with clanging gongs, the escape ladders were against the walls, the firemen were in the building dragging the lengths of hose along, while the frantic guests rushed from room to room, corridor to corridor, striving to save their goods and chattels.

There were some eighty guests registered, among them many members of theatrical companies.

BILL TO INDEMNIFY GRENVILLE MEMBER IS OBSTINATELY HELD UP

Mr. Rowell and His Followers Refuse Customary Consent to Suspension of Rules and Bitterly Oppose the Measure Which Sanctions Grenville Member's Recent Expert Services to the Federal Government

TORONTO, March 18. — What is evidently a retaliatory move arising out of G. H. Ferguson's activity in exposing Gustave Evanturel developed in the Legislature yesterday when the Opposition obstinately obstructed a measure designed to indemnify the member for Grenville, who has acted as the Federal Government's paid investigator in the Trent Valley Canal scandals. Technically the acceptance of fees is an offence against the rules of the Legislature, but the rule is long since obsolete and in such cases indemnifying bills have been customary. Such measures have been put through by consent of the two parties after suspending the routine rules governing the passage of ordinary bills. Yesterday Mr. Rowell refused his consent.

Attorney-General Foy, as leader of the House, moved that the bill to amend the Legislative Assembly act be introduced and read a first time, and that rule 31, with reference to the customary two days' notice, be suspended. Mr. Foy explained that it was a privilege extended to members of the Government and leader of the Opposition to suspend the rules in this respect under certain circumstances.

Mr. Rowell pointed out that he had already intimated to the Attorney-General that so far as the first reading was concerned he was quite prepared to waive the two-days' notice. But without consulting his colleagues he could not consent to the bill passing through all the necessary stages at one sitting.

Mr. Foy replied that the rules should not be suspended except under exceptional circumstances, as in the present case. In the session of 1903 an amendment had been made to the Legislative Assembly act enabling a member of the Legislature to take temporary employment from the Dominion Government. This was done to cover a similar case that came up at that time, and when the matter was explained to him by the then Prime Minister and Sir John Gibson the legislation was agreed to.

The bill now before the House enabled a man to take temporary work from the Dominion Government, "requiring professional skill or special qualifications, without his forfeiting his seat."

Mr. Rowell then went into authorities. He quoted Bourinot to show that the rules could not be suspended without an opportunity for discussion. If the Government would adopt the ordinary procedure there would be no objection from the Opposition.

"Whatever may be said about the first reading of the bill, the motion to suspend the rules must be a debatable question. We intend to discuss it until we have presented our position to the House and the country. We on this side will resist any such encroachment upon our rights and privileges that the rules of the House give us. It is a question far beyond the merits of this particular bill. It is now a question of the rights of the minority in this House under the privileges given them by the rules of this House."

The Speaker then ruled that the motion should be divided and the Opposition demanded the right to discuss the motion first. When finally a division of the House was ordered there was a wrangle over the exact nature of the nation. At last T. W. McGarry rose and took the attitude that under the ruling of the House there was now before them the first reading of the bill and there could be no debate on that.

The Speaker thought Mr. McGarry's point was well taken, which drew from Mr. Rowell a remark about the introduction of the "gag" and the "closure."

Called to order by the Speaker Mr. Rowell withdrew the particular expression and the hubbub went on until recess for dinner.

When the House resumed the motion to give the indemnity bill a second reading was called by the Speaker. This gave the Opposition an opportunity to raise another point of order, that the rules provide for printing, distribution and notice.

Mr. Rowell moved the adjournment of the House.

We are doing nothing less than our simple duty in attempting to preserve the dignity of the House, he said.

The debate proceeded with several Opposition members discussing the action of the Speaker, and the motion was declared lost.

Coming to the second reading, Mr. Rowell, offered on behalf of the Opposition that if a bill was introduced indemnifying Mr. Ferguson directly it would not be opposed.

Mr. Hanna, who replied for the Government, explained that there was a necessity for the general amendment to the act, as he understood that there were several other members who might unwittingly be in the same position.

If that was the case, said Mr. Rowell, it might be better to adjourn until Wednesday and hold a conference to ascertain the real facts.

Mr. McGarry then undertook to reply, stating that Mr. Ferguson would not be a suppliant for favors from the Opposition, and the offered compromise was rejected.

Miss Mildred Chadsey, sanitation bureau chief, of Cleveland, blames bad housing for most of the poverty, disease and crime in the city.

BOAT LOST LIVES SAVED

Passengers of Ill-fated Steamer Safe at Halifax.

HALIFAX, March 18.—The little coasting steamer Rosemary, Captain McPhee, arrived in port at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon from Sambro with 41 of the passengers and crew of the ill-starred liner City of Sydney on her decks. The captain, Second Mate Scanlan, Third Mate Chapman boatswain and two of the engineers were not on board the ship when the Rosemary sailed for Halifax, but they arrived later on the tug Togo. Little of the cargo was saved, and the ship was abandoned.

The eleven passengers of the steamer, four of whom are women and one a little girl of four years, did not appear greatly disturbed by the somewhat trying experience they had undergone. They stated that although the ship was heaving with the seas and she was on the rocks, the waves did not break over her decks, and before they took to the boats they were fairly comfortable in the music room on the upper deck.

FAMOUS STORY

Naval Battle Was Fierce, But no Shells Went Home.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18. — A story of the first naval engagement of the present Mexican revolution is brought by the crew of the U. S. collier Justin. The engagement was fought at Topolobampo, between the recently acquired rebel gunboat Tampico and the Federal gunboats Guerrero and Morelos.

The guns have a range of about 15,000 yards, and for about two hours a heavy bombardment was kept up, the shells falling several thousand feet short of their marks. After firing several hundred shots, the Federal craft withdrew to Mazatlan.

The following day the papers of the rebel and Federal cities gave glowing accounts of the great naval victory.

Big Battle Going On.

JUAREZ, Mexico, March 18.—Heavy fighting, with the rebels hard pressed, was reported here last night. A force of Federals is said to have met Villa's army at Escalon, an important railroad town, 100 miles north of Torreon, and both sides have been reinforced, and the battle is said to have raged fiercely all day yesterday.

CANDIDATES ARE NOT SURE

Overconfidence Has Lost Many Battles — Candidates Must Labor Unceasingly to Win.

One, two, three, and this great vote is to an end. What have you to show for these six days that have gone? Do you think you are going to win an automobile? Would you be satisfied if after the votes were counted you find you won a small prize when you could have won the grand prize touring car? Candidates must realize this now, not after the votes are counted. One of the great failings that some of the candidates have is egotism. Don't be this way. Some of your greatest statesmen and generals have fallen just through this very failing. History is no good to us if we do not profit by it. Don't be egotistic and think you will win. You may find your error too late.

Still Plenty Subscriptions.

There are still plenty of subscriptions to be procured, some one will get them, why not you? When you read this little article don't let it go unheeded. Go out and see the first person that you think of and try to get his subscription. Suppose he does not take it? You are not any worse off. And on the other hand, suppose he subscribes? Look at the great boost you have toward winning a valuable prize. Don't think everyone that you see should give you a subscription, for he will not. There are others in this contest, and others must win prizes, and there are others that will get subscriptions. It is simply a question of who can procure the greatest amount of business the next few days to be the ones to win the large prizes.

Success Without Effort?

Did it ever occur to you what it really meant to win the grand prize touring car? When you got your first subscription did you realize that you were climbing your first step in the greatest race for honor and fame that perhaps you will ever engage in? Some who are trying to climb this great monument of fame find it is not the easiest in the world. Many candidates started out with fond hopes and ambition and many, like in all competition, where the strongest and foremost to enter, have fallen by the wayside. And to-day we are near the very top of this great monument. Some are tired and some are near exhaustion, but some one is going to mount the topmost point of this great pedestal. Is this one you? It can be for the proper effort.

EGG STANDARDS.

List of Trade Designations and the Ages Corresponding.

With the high price of the really new-laid egg comes the plea for the standardization of eggs since the terms used by storekeepers are hopelessly misleading. What is regarded as a new-laid egg in one district might be looked upon as a mere cooking egg in another. A "fresh" egg may have attained the respectable age of three months, but their is nothing to convey to the purchaser this all-important fact.

To designate the egg of commerce, a correspondent has drafted the interpretation he places upon the five terms that are used to designate it.

New-laid.—Three to five days old, in accordance with the season of the year, and in other respects as laid down above. These alone are recommended for boiling;

Breakfast.—In all respects the same, save that as they are a few days older, there is a slight shrinkage and the bright appearance has gone. For poaching or frying these are excellent;

Fresh.—Not preserved. Good eggs for cooking but nothing more. Usually foreign and inferior native supplies, in which the value has been lost by delays in marketing.

Cooking.—A varied class, including "pickles," often very doubtful indeed. Faith is necessary for their consumption; and Eggs.—Upon these the curtain may be drawn. A scrap-heap for the other classes.

Another expert has remarked that, whilst "new-laid" is the trade term for the egg newest from the nest, fresh would be a fitter term. But an egg is not necessarily fresh because it is new-laid. Everything depends upon the way in which it has been stored.

But when eggs are cheaper, we may not be quite so particular!

Who Is It?

Any number of persons may play the game called "Who is it?" One is selected to stand or sit in front of the others, who have arranged themselves in a half circle. The one selected sits with his back to the rest; then one of those in the half circle touches the chosen one on the back, and all together they ask, "Who is it?" The one on the centre then turns around and tells the name of the one he thinks touched him. The one named asks, "Where shall I go?" The chosen one designates a place at some distance, so that while the person named is going to the place and back the rest will have a good chance to hide. If the person named did touch the one in the centre he must go, but if he was not the one then he says to the leader, "Go yourself," and he is the one to go. The last person caught stands in front as the chosen one in the next game.

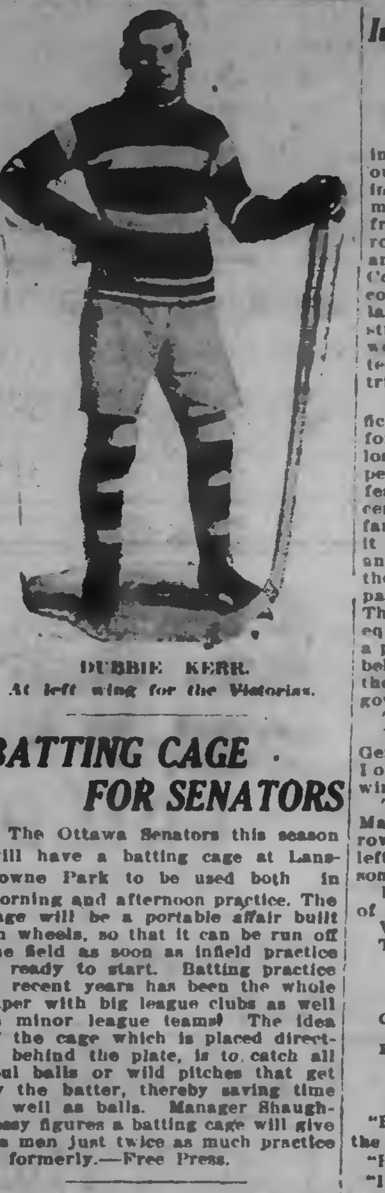
TORONTO BLUE SHIRTS DEFEATED THE VICTORIAS IN PLAYING THE CHAMPIONS AT THEIR OWN GAME



DUBBIE KERR.

In Seven Man Game N.H.A. Winners Took Second Fixture by 6-5

Toronto, March 18.—Demonstrating that the seven-man game, without the foolish off-side rule, in vogue in the N.H.A., is better than the six-man game, and more interesting from the spectators' standpoint, Torontos, champions of the N. H. A., and Victoria, holders of the Pacific Coast League title, played their second Stanley Cup game at the Arena last night. The locals again demonstrated their superiority over the western visitors, but it required fifteen minutes' of overtime to do the trick. Six to five was the score.

The game was played under Pacific Coast League rules. These call for seven men on each team, and the loss of the services of a player when penalized. Another and important feature was the new off-side rule in centre ice, which was shown to local fans for the first time. Of course, it was here that the Victorias had an advantage, and frequently caught the locals off their guard by long passes to a team mate up the ice. The ice area is divided into three equal sections. In the centre space a player may take a pass from a man behind, but in the other two sections the same rules as in the N. H. A. govern.

The teams:

Referee—Russell Bowie. Judge of Play—T. Phillips.

Victoria subs.—Rowe.

Toronto subs.—McNamara.

TOMMY DUNDERDALE.

BATTING CAGE FOR SENATORS

The Ottawa Senators this season will have a batting cage at Lansdowne Park to be used both in morning and afternoon practice. The cage will be a portable affair built on wheels, so that it can be run off the field as soon as infield practice is ready to start. Batting practice in recent years has been the whole caper with big league clubs as well as minor league teams. The idea of the cage which is placed directly behind the plate, is to catch all foul balls or wild pitches that get by the batter, thereby saving time as well as balls. Manager Shaughnessy figures a batting cage will give his men just twice as much practice as formerly.—Free Press.

BASEBALL

Erie is shy pitchers. Outside of Stark and Dorbeck they have no moundmen. Osborne, the 6 ft. 8 in. twirler with the White Caps in 1912, will be given a trial. The Sailors however, have a corking outfielder in Jack Dawson, the hard hitter from the Interstate, Jack Schaeffer, and Billy Wright, who led the Canadian League with the stick last season. First sacker Frank Gygli is a fence buster, too.

NATTY UNIFORMS FOR WHITE CAPS

The uniforms of the Petes this season will be cream, trimmed with navy blue The cream will have a black stripe in it, not visible to the spectators. In this respect they are similar to the uniforms of the New York Giants. The cap, stockings, and trimmings will be navy blue, also a block P on the shirt. Their road uniforms will be grey, as they were last year.

Instead of sweater coats the club will be provided with Norfolk coats of blue or wine color.

Col. Barley Corn says he can't understand why some men want the earth if its two-thirds water.

Taffeta and tulle is a smart combination of the moment.

SOME INFORMATION AS TO THE PLAYERS SIGNED BY PETES' NEW MANAGER

Judging from the way Curley Blount is "beating" the other teams to good players, the new manager of the Petes is some hustler. Schettler, who won 12 and lost 3 for Erie last year, is found on the roster of the Peterboro Club, and the credit of getting such a god man goes to the hustling manager. Before Erie thought of having a team in the league they let Catcher Kelly gain an acquaintance with the London Club, but when it came to collecting the players they found him tied hard and fast to Blount's crew. He has also landed Paul Dawson, an outfielder whom Erie was after. Dawson is 19 years of age, is 5 feet 10 in. in height, weighs 160 pounds, bats and throws right handed.

The team will commence to train in Youngstown on April 15th, and several exhibition games have been arranged for, among them being games with the Pittsburgh Independents, Chicago White Sox and Cleveland. Already some 21 players have been signed up (including eight from last year's team), but Curley is after a couple of pitchers and also Hartman, the third baseman "Old Folks" Templin brought here. Sterling, Swartz and Byrne are holding out for more money, but are expected to fall in line pretty soon.

The men on the manager's list at present, including the "hold-outs," are:

Outfielders—Swartz, Blount, John Bane, age 21; Paul Dawson, age 19; Jno. Gaffney, age 21.

Infielders—. Byrne, Eddie Price, Geo. Miller, age 19; E. Flanagan, L. Buckclew, age 21; Frank Fox.

Catchers—Chapdelaine, Kelly, Ryberg, age 21; McClure, age 21.

Pitchers—Sterling, Belting, Tracey, Cresswell, Schettler.

Manager Blount also has a first baseman signed up.

AFTER THE PLAY CAME THE FEAST

Kathleen Mavourneen Company Made Merry at K. and R. Cafe.

The members, of the Kathleen Mavourneen Company, made a happy gathering at the K. and R. Cafe last night after the presentation at the Opera House. The company sat down to a tasty repast, and afterwards a toast list was carried out, with Mr. J. J. Hanrahan as chairman.

The toast of the King was proposed by Mr. Sam Hoolihan, and honored by the singing of the National Anthem. Mr. V. McCabe proposed the toast of the Caste, and Mr. Elric White, that of the Ladies. The caterers received full justice at the hands of Mr. Wm. Collins. Mr. Gerald McFadden was called upon for a criticism of the play. The toast of the Dramatic Section was proposed by Mr. J. J. Hanrahan, and Miss L. Simons said nice things of the gentlemen. Solos were given by Miss Simons, Mr. Ed. Hanrahan, and Mr. Wm. Collins. Miss Marion Gorman gave on instrumental solo.

Services Appreciated.

A popular doctor was not long ago much pleased with a certain aerated water, and by his assiduous recommendations procured for it a celebrity it justly deserved. The doctor acted solely in the interests of humanity generally and expected no return. To his surprise there came one morning an effusive letter from the company, saying that his recommendations had done them so much good that they "ventured to send him a hundred"—Here the page came to an end. "This will never do," said the doctor; "it is very kind, but I could not think of accepting anything." Here he turned the page and found the sentence ran—"of our circulars for distribution."

THE FOLLOWING IS THE FIRST OF A SERIES TWELVE TALKS TO OWNERS OF FORD CARS

Explaining in a Simple a Manner as Possible, the Reasons, Why a BOSCH MAGNETO Fitted to These Cars, Makes Such a Wonderful Difference in the Running of Same

"THE BOSCH MAGNETO EQUIPMENT ELIMINATES COMPLICATED WIRING"

With the Coil Equipment you have the following wires:

From the generator to the Coils	1
" " Coils to the Timer ..	4
" " Coils to the Plugs ..	4
" " Battery to the Coil ..	1
" " Battery to the Frame	1

in all eleven (11) cables, with a total length of 299 feet.

With the Bosch Magneto Equipment you have:

From the Magneto to the Plugs	4
" " Magneto to the Switch	1
" " Switch to the Frame	1

in all six (6) cables, with a total length of 149 in., eliminating therefore, half the wiring necessary with the Coil equipment.

The wiring of the Coil equipment is certainly as simple as it can be made, but the wiring of the magneto is much more simple than that.

Simplicity in the wiring system has four strong advantages—

(1) The wiring is generally the most leaky part of an ignition system, and, therefore, a simple wiring system will generally ensure a better working spark at the plugs.

(2) It is much less likely to cause trouble by deterioration and short circuit, because there is not so much of it to keep insulated from the engine and frame.

(3) If a fault does develop it is much easier to examine and test six wires which are all easily get-at-able than eleven wires, some of which are not.

(4) The equipment has a much neater appearance.

When considering the relative merits of the wiring systems, it should be borne in mind that all of the additional wires required for the Coil equipment are low tension wires, and it is much more difficult to locate a fault in the low tension wires than in the high tension. The high tension wires in both cases are the four which deliver the current to the spark plugs, and short circuit or leakage from one of these usually makes the seat of the trouble immediately visible and audible by the jumping of the spark there, but a low tension cable may become chafed against some metal part until the insulation is cut through, and then it will silently short-circuit and produce no audible or immediately visible evidence except that the motor stops or misfires intermittently in a manner which might easily be caused by several entirely different troubles, either in the ignition or carburation.

The only way to find such a trouble in the low tension cables or to be quite sure it does not exist is to examine each one carefully from end to end; therefore the fewer there are of them the better.

Another possible trouble with cables is the breaking of the wires inside the insulation. With a high tension cable this does not as a rule interrupt the regular operation of the ignition at all until the jumping of the spark across the break burns through the insulation. It can then be immediately seen and smelt, but if a low tension wire breaks inside the insulation, the current will not jump the break. Usually the motor just stops. Sometimes, when the vibration causes the broken ends to keep touching and separating, it causes the motor to fire and misfire in an uncertain manner, and if the motor stops it is usually found impossible to start it again unless the break is in a wire that affects only one cylinder. Such a fault may easily take hours to locate, especially if you do not at first realize what it is.

The occurrence of these faults in the two low tension wires of the Bosch equipment is, of course, equally possible, but they cannot create the same amount of trouble because the work they have to do is different. With the Coil system the low tension wires must carry the current to run the motor. With the Bosch equipment they must carry it properly to stop the motor. Therefore if any fault is suspected in the low tension wires of the Bosch equipment, it is only necessary to detach the connection from the one low tension terminal on the magneto and run the engine without them, stopping it when necessary by means of the throttle and brake, until the repair can be effected with the same ease and convenience that you always experience with a Bosch equipment.

EARTHQUAKE PROVISO.

Barring Political Upset Home Rule Will Pass, Says Redmond.

LONDON, March 18.—John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalist party, presided over the Irish Nationalist banquet here last night, and in responding to the toast, "Ireland, a Nation," said: "In a few short weeks in the absence of a political earthquake the Home Rule Bill will be a law of the land, probably in precisely the form in which it now stands."

"Speaking for myself and my colleagues, and I believe, the Irish nation," Mr. Redmond continued, "these principles are our last word. Beyond them one inch we cannot, and we will not go. If force is interposed, that force will be met with force. The party of the democracy of this country will be all the stronger because Nationalist Ireland has shown that it has been willing to make a great sacrifice for peace."

Heavy Loss at Sarnia.

SARNIA, Ont., March 18. — Fire yesterday afternoon totally destroyed the plant and contents of the John Goddison Thresher Co. The loss, which is covered by insurance, is in the neighborhood of $250,000.

The cause of the fire is not known definitely, but it is believed to have started from a spark from a locomotive on the company's private switch. The flames were noticed first in the early afternoon, and for several hours the firemen fought to keep them under control and prevent them spreading o adjoining buildings.

German Aeronauts Held as Spies.

BERLIN, March 18.—Hans Berliner, the German aeronaut, and two companions, have been imprisoned at Kirgischansk, Russia, since Feb. 10, on suspicion of espionage. They had landed in the Ural Mountains after a voyage of 47 hours from Germany.

Mrs. R. E. Shera, 615 George St., owing to illness, will not receive on Thursday afternoon, nor again this season.

Mr. George Bannerman, of Winnipeg, is a guest in the city.

Mr. Jas. R. Davidson, of Edinburgh, is in the city with friends.

Mr. R. J. Shannon, of New York, is registered at the Oriental.

District Medical Health Officer, Dr. Clinton, of Belleville, is in the city to-day and is registered at the Oriental.

Mr. Claude Bartlett, who was reported as having been transferred by the Bank of Ottawa, will remain in the city.

Mr. C. E. Jamieson, of the Collegiate staff, is confined to his home with illness.

A pleasant time was spent at the home of Mrs. James Kendry, Water street, north, yesterday afternoon, from 4 to 6 o'clock, when a meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the George street Methodist church was held. A silver collection in aid of the Mrs. Platt memorial fund was received. Shamrocks decorated the tables and the color scheme, (green) was carried out in the refreshments, which were very dainty and suggestive not only of St. Patrick's Day, but of the vernal season spring. A very large number of ladies attended and enjoyed Mrs. Kendry's hospitality.

LOCAL MAN IN THE BARBADOS

Mr. Wm. Shannon is Recuperating in Southern Clime.

The following is taken from an issue of the Barbados Standard, of Ridgetown, Barbados, which has just been received:—

Among the passengers who arrived here yesterday on the R.M.S. Caraquet, was Mr. William Shannon, of Peterborough, Ontario, a son of the late Mr. Jacob Henry Shannon, and brother of Mr. J. C. Shannon of the West India Oil Company. Mr. Shannon has not visited Barbados for forty years and is at present in these parts for the benefit of his health. Mr. Shannon is staying at the "Sea View" Hotel, and in the course of a conversation which he had with a representative of this paper, intimated his willingness to give any information to persons desirous of emigrating to Canada, as to the labour conditions there. He declares he would not advise any one to emigrate either to Toronto or Ontario just now; as at the present time there are thousands of people walking the streets homeless and penniless.

Mr. Shannon said that when he left Peterborough, Ontario, the thermometer registered 40 degrees below zero and on his arrival at Nova Scotia although the temperature was only 20 degrees below zero, he felt much colder than at Ontario. This, he explained, was due to the dry atmosphere of the former place.

HOMESTEAD MUST GIVE WAY TO NEW APARTMENT HOUSE

One by one Peterborough's oldest landmarks are being wiped out. Yesterday the work of tearing down the homestead of Sheriff Hall was commenced. It is the intention of the purchaser, Mr. Henry Hickey, a local contractor, to erect a large and handsome apartment house. The firm of Sandford Fleming, of Ottawa, will supervise the work. It is also understood the price paid was an exceptionally good one. The deal was put through by J. T. O'Connell and Company.

NEW EQUIPMENT TO C.P.R. CARS

The construction of a couple of tank cars, specially equipped for fire fighting, is a new departure on the part of the C.P.R. They are, in general, the standard construction. They have been built to the designs of the company by the American Car Company; and the idea it to operate them in pairs. Apart from the end arrangement of the auxiliary equipment, they are of identical construction. Each car carries a tank of 8,438 imperial gallons, and on the end of each car there is a 20 by 10 inch duplex fire pump, using steam from the locomotive boiler. The corresponding end of the other car has a rack construction on which can be carried 6,000 feet of fire hose. The car is designed for weight capacity of 100,000 pounds, so standard fifty-ton trucks are employed. These tank cars have done good service in the United States.

NEED THE AID OF CANADA

Churchill Frank About Blockade of Naval Assistance.

Memorandum is More Fully Justified Than Ever.

LONDON, March 18.—(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.) — Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in his address accompanying the presentation of the naval budget, referred to the absence of three Canadian ships from the British naval program. He said that the Government proposed to place in the Mediterranean in 1915 a battle squadron of eight ships, six of which would be Dreadnoughts, or Lord Nelsons, centred on Malta. They would make the British forces in the Mediterranean eight ships and four large armored cruisers. He pointed out that in order to do this and maintain the indispensable margin of security in home waters it was necessary in the absence of three Canadian Dreadnoughts to accelerate three ships. That was sufficient to maintain the force he had mentioned from the end of 1915 to the middle of 1916. As the Canadian ships were not yet forthcoming, it was necessary to repeat, though on a smaller scale, the course adopted in 1913, and to begin two ships in the 1914 program so as to have them ready by the third quarter of 1916.

The Government was not without hope, however, that Canada would meet her share in naval defence. Canada was a great and wealthy community, with interests ever spreading more widely over the surface of the globe. She had to make some provision for her own naval defence. If she were annexed to the United States she would no doubt contribute, through taxation, to the upkeep of the United States navy. If she were independent, she would have to make provision at least equal to the most powerful American state. He did not wonder at all that Canadians of every party thought it was not consistent with the dignity and status of the Dominion that she should depend upon the British taxpayers, who was often much less well off than the average Canadian.

Mr. Churchill affirmed that on the general question of Canadian ships and the propriety and need for Canada, in common with other dominions, to take an effective part in the defence of the Empire, there was nothing more to be said. The Admiralty view had been expounded in the Canadian memorandum, to which the Admiralty adhered, and the facts had been strengthened by the passage of time. They contain an absolute justification of the Canadian action thereafter.

In dealing with the naval estimates for 1914-15, amounting to $257,750,000, he said:

"Every delay, accidental or deliberate, by the next strongest power to Britain will be matched by us."

Admitting that the naval estimates were the largest that had ever been submitted to the House the First Lord gilded the pill by making the prediction that in the absence of any new departure the estimates for 1915-16 would be substantially lower than the present ones, which show an increase of $13,700,000 over those of last year.

Mr. Churchill reiterated that it was the policy of Great Britain to complete eight battle squadrons by the time Germany had established five, without calculating ships on foreign stations. He explained that the development of the German fleet had not been so rapid as had been anticipated owing to difficulties in manning the vessels. Great Britain, therefore, had been enabled to postpone the completion of her Gibraltar squadron, which now consists of only four battleships.

CONVENTION OF CANADIAN HOME CIRCLE

Mr. O. S. Matchett Was Delegate From the Local Circle.

Mr. O. S. Matchett, who has returned from attending the convention of the Canadian Home Circle, as a delegate from the local Circle, says the convention was a big success.

The reports of the society showed a membership of 19,100, and total payments to date for various benefits of five and a half millions. The chief interest at the convention, which prolonged its sessions for another day, was the recommendation of the officers that the rates of all members should be so altered as to meet the standard set by the Government. The chief reason urged in support of the proposed change was the necessity of providing stability for the twenty-five millions of insurance carried by the members.

One officer of the Canadian Fraternal Association, discussing the result, said: "It is remarkable, for by one step and by the unanimous vote of the convention, the society has become absolutely solvent, and has provided a means of supplying insurance at cost and at the same time adding stability to the institution." This officer pointed out that this question of rates is receiving the consideration of practically all the societies, and that only last year the Canadian Fraternal Congress had requested the Government to introduce legislation to compel all societies to adopt the rates now selected by the Canadian Home Circle. Such legislation was introduced in Quebec this year, but held over for a year, and it is expected that similar legislation will be enacted in Ontario next year.

Strong Opposition.

The Home Circle Convention opened with a strong opposition to any proposed change, but after a thorough consideration of the plan as presented by Prof. M. A. Mackenzie, M.A., of Toronto University, and by the officers, the opposition decided to unite with the management in making the complete change unanimously. Their decision not to await legislation to compel this course will place the society in a very formidable position, whether or not the Government pass such an Act.

The officers are receiving the congratulations of other fraternal societies on the strong stand they have taken, for it is felt that the result is an object lesson to other societies to reach actuarial solvency without legislation. One prominent officer of a sister society said: "It will have far-reaching effects, for there are several other societies whose officers are considering changes in their rates, and this result will strengthen them in their efforts to reach actuarial solvency."

The new scale of rates is based on the National Fraternal Congress table as accepted by the Ontario and Dominion Governments. All members will pay the new rates at their present ages.

The chief officers, who were all re-elected, are: Leader, Rev. Dr. H. T. S. Boyle, Dean of Trinity College; Past Leader, Dean Dalton; Vice-Leader, R. W. Hawkins; Secretary, J. M. Foster, B.A.; Solicitor, Norman Somerville, M.A.; Medical Examiner, Dr. A. T. Hobbs; Treasurer, W. H. Weston.

SEWING MEETING.

The regular sewing meeting will be held at the Children's Shelter, to-morrow afternoon at 2.30.

OIL TREATMENT FOR SOME STREETS

Board of Works Feel it is Foolish to Add to Districts Served by Street Watering--- Only Good Quality of Oil Would be Used

For those residents who enjoyed the service of street watering, last season, the Board of Works has more water for this season. For those other residents, who were not given the service, it is quite possible that their streets will be oiled.

It is impossible to give a better service of street watering with the present equipment and more wagons means quite a large expenditure of money. The men who had the contracts last season had all they could do to cover their route and then some residents complained that the service was ~~of very~~ little use.

The Board of Works will have to tread the path of expenditure very lightly indeed and they cannot afford to buy new wagons.

But they can spend a little money on oil. If oil is purchased it will be of a quality that will not have an offensive odor and will not damage bicycle or motor car tires. One treatment on a street will suffice for two or three months.

The City Engineer is corresponding with companies and at the next meeting of the Board of Works, he will submit prices.

When the question of street watering was discussed by the Board of Works last night, it was the almost unanimous opinion that the principle on which the cost of the service is made, that of a general tax, was not fair, to those who did not get it. It was, however, admitted that the city as a whole benefitted to more or less extent.

It was felt that oil might be used on the outlying streets to good advantage. The members were united in the declaration that it would be foolish to further burden the contractors by adding to their districts.

Last season the cost of street watering was $3100.

Mayor Buller claimed that it would cost between $10,000 and $15,000 to water all the streets and do the job right.

THE NEW HIGH COMMISSIONER

Mr. J. H. Burnham Takes Part in Debate in the House.

In discussing in the House the appointment of a successor to the late Lord Strathcona, High Commissioner for Canada in London, quite a number of the members entered the debate. The following is taken from Hansard:

Mr. Burnham:—Much as I hesitate to differ from the hon. gentleman, allow me to protest, as a native Canadian, against the claim that he has made—that men who are not native Canadians are not qualified to represent this country.

Mr. Maclean:—I did not say that.

Mr. Burnham:—I understood the hon. gentleman to say he would like to see a native Canadian sent over to Great Britain to represent Canada. From this I infer that means that in order that we may have a man who is thoroughly Canadian, he will have to be a Canadian of the Canadians, as it is said, and one who is not, as I think be meant to insinuate, tainted with foreign blood.

Mr. Maclean:—I did not say that at all.

Mr. Burnham:—I have very great respect for the hon. gentleman who has just spoken; I regard him as one of the most progressive men in Canada, but let me say that men who have come to this country from other parts of the British Empire have identified themselves in every possible way with Canada, and are just as good Canadians as exist in this country. We have in the old country men from Canada who are accepted wholly without prejudice, and who are accorded positions not with reference to their nationality, but because they are British subjects, who are loyal to the Empire and faithful to their duty. The very moment you bring up the distinction at which the hon. gentleman has hinted, you will utterly break up the whole British Empire, because you accentuate or emphasise birth or nationality, and this we should not be too anxious to emphasize.

Mr. Lemieux: — Does my hon. friend suggest that the hon. member for South York (Mr. Maclean) would break up the British Empire.

Mr. Burnham:—I do not suggest that he wishes to do so; I do not suggest that other gentlemen in this House wish to do so, but I do suggest that if the course they pursue is followed, they will break it up. I speak with some feeling in this matter, for many years ago, when I had, perhaps, a little less sense than I have now, I went into this matter and, if I may be forgiven, I wrote a book called, "Canadians in the Imperial Service." I went over Canada and I went over the old country looking the whole matter up, and I found a bond of sympathy between the men who are ready to serve the Empire. They did not ask whether they were Canadians, or Englishmen. I found Canadians living in London wholly adopted by the English people and I find English people in Canada wholly adopted by Canadians, and I trust there never will be, especially at this time when we are seeking to acquire equality of naturalization, any attempt to differentiate between different sections and different nations. Let my hon. friend from Rouville remember that if we begin that sort of thing it might be bad for the French in Canada. If we are going to start that sort of thing there will be no welding of the nations. We who are anxious—as English-speaking Canadians—to take to our inmost heart our French compatriots, are forbidden by that doctrine to do so. Who will be the Canadians in this country, who will be the British subjects, if we are going to adopt doctrines like that? The people here will be Canadians and Australians will e Australians. The next thing we shall have British Columbians howling that they belong to British Columbia only, and similarly with the middle West. We have had enough of that already; we must give up that idea. I am speaking perhaps hastily, because this matter has been flashed upon me, but I know I am right. It is a very serious question that is being broached, and I think a very wrong one.

BUXTON IS ACCUSED

Krafchenko Exonerates Hagel and Westlake of Complicity

WINNIPEG, March 19.—The story told on the witness stand Tuesday by Jack Krafchenko for the defence in the Hagel-Westlake case, and not printed then by the newspapers, at the request of the court, was published yesterday afternoon, permission being granted with the locking up of the jury at Morden.

In substance, Krafchenko's story relieves Hagel and Westlake of all complicity in his escape, and points to Buxton as the chief actor in this phase of the prison drama, and Reid as an active assistant. Krafchenko acquits Westlake, who is charged with harboring him after his escape, by saying that it was Buxton who was to meet him at the Burriss block, and when he found a strange man there he held him up and kept him practically a prisoner. This man was Westlake. Throughout his several hours of examination and cross-examination, Jack stuck to his story in a most ingenious manner, and related the exciting incidents in a most plausible manner.

REMOVAL OF POLES FROM CHARLOTTE AND GEORGE

Bell Telephone and C.P.R. Poles May Soon Make Disapperaance

An arrangement may be made with the Bell Telephone Co., by which the poles may be removed from Charlotte St. between George and Stewart Streets.

Mayor Buller has been taking up the matter with the local officials of the company, and has secured permission from property owners to plant the poles on their property. This is only a temporary arrangement, but would hold good till other means of dealing with the wires are secured.

His Worship informed the members of the Board of Works last night to this effect.

He also expressed confidence that the C. P. R. poles on George Street from Charlotte to the station would soon be removed.

A Gasoline Tank.

G. R. Rackham was given permission to instal a gasoline tank under the ground in front of his office on Charlotte Street, with the understanding that it be removed if such request be made.

Maintain the Auto.

Mr. Parsons asked if the arrangement of last year that the city pay the cost of maintenance of his auto, would hold good this year. The Board assented.

The city pays for gasoline and repairs.

Tenders for Supplies.

The engineer was authorized to ask for tenders for the supply of cement and sewer pipe, the same to be received by the 1st of April.

CHANGE THE LICENSE ACT

400 DELEGATES.

LINDSAY, Ont., March 19. — The twenty-eighth annual session of the Grand Chapter of Ontario East Royal Black Knights of Ireland came to a close at noon yesterday with the election of officers. A signal honor was conferred on a Lindsay knight in the election of Sir Knight William Warren to the position of grand master of the Grand Chapter of Ontario East.

The Grand Orange Lodge of the Province of Ontario East opened in scarlet degree in the town hall yesterday afternoon, with R. W. Grand Master F. W. Fords of Ottawa in the chair.

The session promises to be the largest ever held under the auspices of the grand lodge, already nearly 400 delegates being in attendance.

MR. D. J. LUNDY FRACTURES ANKLE

He Slipped When Boarding a Street Car at Toronto.

Mr. D. J. Lundy, of this city, met with a very unfortunate accident on Tuesday evening in Toronto. He was about to board a street car and in some manner he slipped, fracturing his ankle. He was removed to the general hospital.

In all probability he will be brought home on Saturday.

REVIEW INSTALS MIEHLE PRESS

New and Up-to-date Equipment Added to Departments

In order that Tne Review not only maintains its reputation for turning out the very highest class of job printing, but that it will be in a position to handle every class of work in the shortest possible time, it has added very largely of late to its equipment. The latest addition is a new Miehle two revolution press, which is the last word in job printing machinery direct from the Chicago factory. This machine is now in working order. This in addition to two new linotypes, together with a large amount of new type faces—the latest from the leading type founders of England and the United States—places The Review job department in a very superior position, and the management trusts that this enterprise will receive its due reward in increased orders. Catalogue work of the finest kind, and in all colors and styles will receive expert attention. Over $8,000 have been spent in these improvemnts.

HAVE THIS CITY AS THE CENTRE

For the Examination of Diphtheria Swabs.

The various works, ideas and suggestions of the Board were taken up at a special meeting yesterday afternoon, when District Health Officer Dr. Clinton, of Belleville, was present.

The suggestions of the Board of Health, which are being slowly carried into effect, were favorably commented upon by Dr. Clinton.

Dr. McPherson suggested that arrangements be made in order to have Peterborough the centre for the examination of diphtheria swabs. This city was the most central part for the rural districts and also other towns.

Dr. Clinton said it was a good suggestion, and further stated that they should make an appropriation for this work. It was felt by the Board that the Government should pay for this work and other towns and cities could use the test.

SIR CHARLES TUPPER PUBLISHES RECOLLECTIONS

Veteran Conservative Statesman and ex-premier Makes Notable Contribution to Canadian History, in Which he Draws on a Large Fund of Reminiscences of Days of Confederation and History of C. P. R.

LONDON, March 19. —(C.A.P. Cable.) — Extensive press notices appeared here yesterday of what undoubtedly constitutes a substantial addition to the literature on Canada's political history in "Recollections of Sixty Years Ago," by Sir Charles Tupper, published by the Messrs. Cassells. The work contains a fund of reminiscences upon which the veteran statesman has drawn.

The work opens with the union of the Maritime Provinces, and embraces the whole period between that event and Sir Charles' Premiership in 1896. In its main feature it gives a straightforward account of the issues in which the writer took a prominent part. There is little "gossipy" style about the work, and no great political secrets are unfolded.

"My earliest political energies were devoted to the securing of the union of the Maritime Provinces," such is the matter-of-fact way in which chapter one opens.

After proceeding straightway to incorporate verbatim his lecture on the political condition of British North America, delivered in St. John in 1860, fifty pages are then devoted to the negotiations regarding the union of the Maritime Provinces, and contain a good deal of the many conversations on the subject between Sir Charles Tupper and Hon. Joseph Howe.

"A more intimate story of the Confederation campaign is unfolded in the following letters written by me to Sir John Macdonald," affirms the author who proceeds to set forth his writings to Sir John and to the colonial minister on the fishery question. Sir Charles' story of the journey to Fort Garry at the time of the Riel rebellion is one of the few "personal reminiscences which the author permits himself to narrate at length." Two chapters are concerned with the building of the C. P. R., vicissitudes of that undertaking being described in detail.

PROF. MAVOR'S LECTURE ON PRESENT ECONOMIC CONDITIONS IN CANADA

Situation in Regard to Railroads Not Alarming, But Canada Should go slow—Economic Changes Have Caused Higher Prices in Articles Principally Food Stuffs

The Economic Condition of Canada was the subject of a very clear and interesting address given to the Canadian Club last night by Professor Mavor, of the University of Toronto. The speaker said he chose the subject with diffidence or hesitation, because of its difficulty at the present moment and because of the necessity for a clear understanding of the whole situation.

In the first place he suggested a few reflections about the course of economic history which has taken place in Canada. This small country town of Peterborough, Professor Mavor explained that he was speaking relatively, was at first a self-contained community, as were most localities about fifty or sixty years ago. There were no exports to speak of, and little imports. What was true of Ontario then is largely true of Quebec to-day. A few years ago he visited a French family in Quebec and it subsisted almost entirely upon the produce of the farm. Except for a very few things like tea and sugar and a small amount of beer, they lived entirely from the produce of their land. They hardly ever visited Quebec city and a trip to Montreal was the great event in a man's life. They had nice looms and the farmer's wife wore beautiful linen and had a large store of it. They made their own boots and shoes, and one son was a carpenter. The family were a Jack of all Trades and looked on purchasing outside the family or community as demoralizing and sinful. The same condition still exists in Quebec.

Conditions in Ontario.

In Ontario we have broken away from that. We are passing from one kind of economic condition to another. Local units that were self-contained have changed to those not self-contained, and this transition makes it rather difficult to adjust our relations on a fresh basis. This transition is taking place in Russia—that of a self-contained to a highly developed commercial society. The same think is taking place in the West. There are many people in the West who have left self-contained localities as the Fins, Buckovinians, and those from Southern Italy. They were used to living on bread. You can live on bread, the professor dryly asserted. He saw where a certain kind of drink and fifty-seven varieties of food have been made from bread, but the peasant doesn't care very much for varieties. When he was travelling in Europe, the peasant who drove him, would take a loaf of bread as his food for a twenty four hour journey. I found bread difficult to accommodate myself to, and usually took along my own commissariat. In Canada these people adopt for a time precisely the same practice. About 35 miles north of Yorkton, a few years ago, he watched the operations of a newly arrived group of Galicians. ne batch started to build houses, another started to build ovens of two kinds, one for bread and another for charcoal. In two days they had built a number of houses, baked a bread supply for the community, set in operation six forges, made one wagon, and a large number of spades. Gradually this custom gets broken down. For example, the women wore fine embroideries and were neatly dressed when they first arrived. Then they went to Winnipeg shops and decked themselves in taudy ribbons.

Imitation.

Imitation forces the new comer to make changes. This is true of very widely separated races. The Chinaman here does not live as he did in China. Life here is more strenuous. When he was in Japan, the speaker continued, he found Japs adopting European manners for about half the day, for they could not conduct their business any other way. They usually took a Japanese breakfast and lunch and a European dinner.

Such changes mean an immense and sudden increase in demand. The transition of one thousand Italians from a self-contained locality in Italy to Canada greatly increases demand, for the population of the world is numerically unchanged by migrations. Demand in the world is greatly increased by migrations and by the change in the social structure from a self-contained to a highly developed commercial community.

This changes cause an increase in price. They mean high prices for the articles in demand. This is not a high price period; prices are high only in those articles in demand.

The next important point is that there has been in all countries a demand for increased transportation facilities. This is an important factor and capable of two points of view, the desire of people for things and secondly their ability to procure them. The two are quite different, one may be futile the other effective. One locality might not have the resources for a railroad. It appears we are not able to pay for the things we want, the speaker observed, doubtless in reference to the railway situation.

Borrowing.

When a new country is opened it is not able to pay for things and is therefore a borrowing country. It is usually an agricultural country first, and the farmer must borrow. Suppose the farmer begins without capital, he must wait for a year for returns. The slowness of returns affects his character, for all over the world he is a borrower. In factories, returns are quicker, for the production period is usually a short one. Some are long, however, as the ship building industry, and a very large amount of capital is required to finance it. Land is secured for a mere nothing in the West, and money has been borrowed to secure more land, and this condition has forced up the price of land against the homesteaders themselves. It has hindered immigration for the higher value has male land less an inducement to the immigrant. The average price in the West is now a considerable amount. The price of C. P. R., Hudson Bay and School lands has steadily gone up. This is the substance of the land question in the West.

The inter-position of the credit of cities has caused a stream of money to flow in in the last few years, chiefly in the form of imports. These consist largely of structural material, and, to a less extent, goods of a luxurious character, such as automobiles. The bulk is structural material and food stuffs, represeneting railroads and wages. In this way we have taken in borrowed money.

Professor Mavor then gave several examples showing the effect of railroads on the economic position of a country. Thirty-eight years ago the Maori Wars ended and New Zealand launched into railroad building. The shape of New Zealand necessitated long roads. Iron was imported, London bankers financed the new roads and in a short time New Zealand had over railwayized herself. New Zealand banks failed in 1877-78, the failure of the Glasgow Bank in 1878 was a result and a commercial crisis occurred in England as a consequence.

The reason for this is that the processes of production are long or short. The speaker said he had a knife he usually carried, which he bought in Copenhagen, and which was a very good one. He could use it all his life and hand it down to someone else. Now a railroad is like that knife. It yields its uses over a very long period of time. At the beginning it is valued at a fraction of the total value if it could be realized all at once. A railroad is an example of a highly dominant utility. It is not possible for a community to invest in more than a certain amount of railroads. Take for example a farmer building a house and growing potatoes. He may spend all his time building his house and no time cultivating potatoes. But he cannot live on the house alone. It is true he has the house, but he must have food. Now New Zealand invested too much in her house, so to speak, and too little in seed. The same conclusion applied to the United States after the close of the Civil War, and a crash came in 1873. The country was over-built with railroads. Too large a proportion of the available credit was used in the form of a highly permanent security. You can eat a loaf but not a railroad tie.

Development.

The problem in Canada depends upon the stage of development. In the late forties industrial development was arrested in Great Britain by a railroad mania, but only for a short time, because development had gone too far and the discovery of gold in California and Australia helped to relieve the situation. Britain quickly recovered by undergoing a period of frugality. The rate of interest was high and that is a very strong inducement to be frugal, the speaker observed. The United States soon recovered, so did New Zealand, although the latter country required a longer time.

The problem requires care. You cannot have an accumulation of capital out of an accumulation of debt. There must be more returns than debt, for capital is but the surplus. The rate of interest is determined not by legislation, but by the world market for money. Undue obligations on capital will cause it to disappear. Peter the Great of Russia forced wealthy Russians to invest in Russian iron mines, and the result was that for half a century large amounts of Russian money were placed in English banks.

Egypt was another example. Prior to 1882 the fellah had to pay from 40 per cent. to 60 per cent. for money. With this borrowed capital he bought land and seed. He was bastinadoed if he did not pay the interest and the courts favored the lender. He paid about $5.00 an acre, and the interest would be about $3.50. When the British came they abolished the bastinado and made the legal rate of interest 5 per cent. The result was large amounts were borrowed and invested in land; land buying forced the price of land up to £100 an acre. Now at five per cent. the fellah or cultivator pays $25 interest, where he formerly paid $3.50 and an acre does not produce any more now than then. If there are advantages such as the elimination of the bastinado and a quicker market, there are also landless fellahs, a fact never known before.

It is difficult to make alterations in capital. Interest will adjust itself directly or indirectly.

Not Alarming.

The present situation in this country is not alarming. A railroad crisis is not imminent. But we must go slow in railroad building for some time and we must readjust investments in permanent utilities for those in productive processes.

The speaker was tendered the thanks of the club for his able address.

The question of assisting in the revival of Lacrosse will be considered by the Club.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, MARCH 19, 1914.

WAKE UP PETERBOROUGH.

MAYOR BULLER showed his insight when he sounded the call for radial lines in Eastern Ontario. This part of the province has been napping for a long time when its condition is compared with Western Ontario in the matter of progress. Look at the cities here, older in many respects than those of Western Ontario, yet they are far behind in population and industrial development. Kingston was a prominent place, long a likely location for the provincial capital, long the great wholesale centre of Ontario, yet Kingston, is just Kingston still. Belleville, Brockville, Napanee, have long slept in the comfort of their first success. Peterborough is little different, for having all the natural factors for a centre of trade and commerce, it has been content with the slow and conservative progress of Eastern Ontario. It is true, natural advantages have forced Peterborough out of the rut to some extent, but here in this city are the possibilities for great electrical development, for the building of radial lines and the linking up of many small towns around this city. There is no large city near enough to Peterborough to compete effectively with it. The Trent waterway is here, with its power possibilities. Yet what has been done?

Look at London and Hamilton. The latter city is only forty miles from Toronto, yet it has radial lines to Dundas, Ancaster, Brantford, Beamsville, Grimsby, and other small places for a radius of twenty-five miles. How much this development has meant to Hamilton merchants and business men, the present growth of that city in wealth, population, and improvements is ample proof. London has also forged ahead. Guelph has done the same.

An association of municipalities has been the means of much of their progress, for it has united the efforts of a large district to secure common advantages. Mayor Buller advocates some such association for Eastern Ontario, which could secure government assistance and other benefits for this part of the Province.

It is true that other factors besides radials and electricity have operated to assist these cities in their advancement. The location of Hamilton is a great advantage to that city as is also the very valuable farming and fruit country surrounding it. Guelph has the Agricultural College and London, Western University. Moreover Guelph has been famous for many years for its publicly owned utilities, and low tax rate. Electricity has undoubtedly been an important factor in the development of those cities, and Peterborough should take advantage of its natural opportunities as quickly as possible. Mayor Buller has drawn attention to a very important oversight, that, if corrected, will prove an invaluable advantage to this city and surrounding country. By all means give him every assistance and encouragement to proceed along the line of progress and of the power policy of the Hon. Adam Beck.

WAS COMMON SENSE LACKING !

A FEW DAYS ago there appeared in the daily press, a report stating that the father of Miss Appleby of 53 Cowan Ave., Toronto, would sue the detectives and J. Gott, immigration agent at Windsor, for the sum of $50,000 damages. The case arose out of the arrest of Miss Appleby because she did not answer satisfactorily, some questions asked her by the immigration officer, J. Gott. Miss Appleby, it appears, was arrested, taken back to Windsor and fined $50 in the Windsor Police Court. Reviewing such facts as have appeared in the press, it is impossible to say who is to blame for the trouble. Many people have such an antipathy to officials that they seem to be unable to extend to them the common civilities of polite society. They regard questions by officers in the discharge of their duty, often as a personal insult and to be answered as curtly and vaguely as possible. Such an attitude leads in many cases to much unpleasantness. On the other hand, government officials, and particularly police officials, exhibit a woeful lack of that blessed quality, common sense, in the discharge of their duties. They follow extreme courses, ask unnecessary questions, go out of their way in matters of inquiry, which is keenly resented by the persons interested.

Cases like the above are nearly always the result of failure to exercise common sense. If people as well as officers would be reasonable, affairs like the above would be less frequent.

THE BANE OF LIBERALISM.

THE TORONTO GLOBE of Tuesday has a long article on the surrender of the Borden Government to the C.N.R. A few days ago it published an editorial saying, "we must clean house." Here is a most blatant inconsistency, an example of truckling to party expediency which is yet and has always been the bane of Liberalism in Canada. So long as fair-minded members of the Liberal Party submit to such useless juggling from the leading Ontario exponent of liberalism, just so long will that party fail to exercise much influence on the Canadian public. The Borden Government has made no surrender to the C.N.R.—details of its plans have not yet even been declared. The surrender to the C.N.R. was made by Laurier long before Borden became Premier, and with the full knowledge and connivance of The Globe. Liberal administrations were responsible for reckless loans to railways without securing adequate supervision of construction. Having involved the country's credit in the C.N.R. the Liberals went out of office and Mr. Borden finds himself obliged to protect Canada's credit by further assistance to the C.N.R. Knowing these facts, The Globe has the brazen effrontery to charge the Borden Government with surrendering to the C.N.R., to blame the Conservative administration for the sins of the Liberal's policy and almost in the same breath to preach morality by saying we must clean house. True Liberalism is worse for such sacrifice of ideals to mere party ends—the strength of the Conservative Government is unimpaired by such low, truckling criticism.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IT IS surprising that there are no militant suffragettes in Quebec. When a husband can collect a wife's wages and force her to walk to and from work because he refused to give her carfare, the time has long existed for an onslaught of militants or at least a change in laws. Such was the case of Mrs. Beauchamp who figured in Montreal's latest murder case. Women here ought to be glad they live in Ontario.

AFTER HAVING withdrawn from the contest Major George W. Stephens has consented to be a candidate for Montreal's Mayoralty at the next elections. A petition containing 28,000 names and six hundred yards long was presented. Major Stephens was prominently identified with harbor improvements in Montreal and should make one of the best mayors in Canada.

THE POLITICAL meeting to be held in the Opera House under the auspices of the West Peterborough Conservative Association will likely be a notable occasion. There are a great many matters before the people of Canada of the highest importance and the speakers are well qualified to deal with them.

Srping is coming I do know
Balmy breezes tell me so—
Thus the poet sings.

The poet not being able to make the grade for the rest of the celestial inspiration knows differently. Already a snow storm has given us cold damp feet.

PREMIER BORDEN'S three bills respecting representation of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba in the Senate, are among the finest examples of Spartan brevity. Each bill consists of one printed line and three quarters.

SPRING is a beautiful season they say. Yes it would be if the folks at home would put off housecleaning and tearing everything to pieces until next Christmas.

THE TERRORS of springtime—a house cleaner in our den.

They're Good Anglers.

Montreal Mail.

Speaking of matrimony, President Wilson's daughters don't seem to believe in their father's policy of watchful wating.

Difficulties of Prosperity.

Winnipeg Telegram.

London loaned £75,000,000 during the last year to Canadian enterprise—nearly three times as much as in 1912—despite the tightness of money. The difficulty in getting enough money arose not out of depression, but out of our prosperity.

Legitimate Business.

Calgary Herald.

"The cry is still that the banks should loosen up and assist legitimate business enterprise. But wouldn't it be a good idea just about now to get to some conclusion as to what really constitutes a really legitimate business enterprise ?

Eggs in the Pulpit.

Not long ago a country parson went to preach in an old remote parish. The aged sexton, in taking him to the place, insinuatingly said :

"I jest do hope you won't mind preachin' from the chancel. Ye see, this is a quiet place, no children about, an' I've got a duck a-settin' on fourteen eggs in the pulpit."

Slowly and Surely.

Montreal Star.

The progressives in any movement understand perfectly that parliament has no business as yet to legislate as they suggest. We do not live under a benevolent tyranny when our rulers could rightfully legislate contrary to the general opinion, but under a free democracy when parliament is bound to legislate as the bulk of the people desire.

Strong on Hell.

There was a change of curates in the parish, and shortely after one of the prominent men of the congregation asked his chauffeur :

"How do you like the new curate, Barney ?"

"Middlin,'" replied Barney, "but he couldn't come up to the old one. 'Twas himself could tell ye all about hell. Shure, to hear him describin' it, you'd think he was bred, born and reared there."

It Would Be Too Cruel.

Hamilton Herald.

Dissatisfied with the way the daily papers reported council and commission meetings, the civic government of Edmonton has decided to start a weekly paper, The Municipal Gazette, in which it will publish verbatim reports of all civic meetings. Ten thousand copies are to be printed and circulated free at a cost of about $450 a week. It's safe betting that if the remarks of all the aldermen and commissioners are reported verbatim, the Municipal Gazette will not last long. It would be too cruel.

The Progress of Denmark.

Toronto World.

Denmark is chiefly noteworthy because the masses are advancing together with their leaders coming from all ranks. The result is that any process once tried and proved becomes common property, and is applied with due regard to individual conditions. This readiness of adaptation could not have been attained without the necessary preliminary of an effective system of education. Only the intellectual development afforded the Danish people could have enabled them to capture the British market through the remarkable expansion of their exports. In thirty years these rose in butter from a value of $9,200,000 to $50,500,000 in bacon from $2,000,000 to $34,000,000 and in eggs from $300,000 to $7,000,000. Even more striking is the comparison of the value of exported butter with the number of milking cows. Between 1893 and 1910 these rose from 1,011,980 to 1,280,000 while the value of exported butter increased from $18,720,000 to $50,500,000. How this has been accomplished will be told when the Danish system of technical instruction is explained. The report refers to the "really wonderful high schools of Denmark," and these may be expected to repay amply their investigation.

THURSDAY

By Walt Mason

When Thursday comes, with smiling eyes, all other days seem cheap and vain; I always think we ought to rise and hand it a gold-headed cane. Thor, son of Odin, god of war, believe me, reader, was a peach, and when a scrap he lusted for, the other gods let out a screetch. And so for him they named this day—a hint that we should gird our loins, make war on sloth, fool habits slay, and gather in the sparkling coins. In olden days they used to wade around in blood and dead men's bones, but all such customs are decayed, with ancient swords and ancient thrones. We do not fight to-day with clubs, with maces or with bombs accurst, yet we must meet the warlike dubs who try to swipe the pudding first. The battle in the busy mart is fiercer than was Flodden Field, and strikes more terror to the heart, though ne'er a claymore do we wield. And Thursday brings new martial fire to warriors who are distressed, it nerves the arm that's prone to tire, and fills with zeal the languid breast. If this is false—if Thursday fails to nerve us for a further strain, well may the gods indulge in wails—the Son of Odin lived in vain !

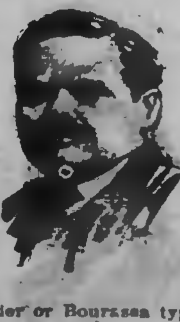
Birthdays Note

THURSDAY, MARCH NINETEENTH



This is the natal day of the Premier of Quebec, the Hon. Jean Lomer Gouin, who is now fifty-two years of age. Sir Lomer is in many ways the most contradictory French-Canadian in political life to-day. The popular impression of the French-Canadian politician is a man of the Laurier or Bourassa type, gifted with brilliant power of oratory and with wonderful power over his audiences. The Quebec premier, however, as far as temperament and training goes, is much more like an Englishman. His stolid features resemble to a certain extent those of the British bulldog and he is equally steadfast and determined. Notwithstanding the lack of fireworks, he has obtained a strong hold on his compatriots and during the nine years that he has been premier, has given them a progressive government.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, March 18.—Corn today was on the jump. Demand had become acute from consumers in Kansas and Nebraska, where usually there is a big surplus. Despite free profit-taking by holders the market closed steady at an advance of 7-8c to 1 1-8c. In wheat the outcome varied from a shade decline to 1-4c gain, oats finished 1-4c to 1-2c up, and provisions varying from 5c loss to a rise of a shade.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, March 18.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 41 cars, comprising 505 cattle, 1256 hogs, 68 sheep and 41 calves.

Butchers.

Choice butchers' sold at $7.75 to $8; good, $7.40 to $7.60; medium, $7 to $7.25; common, $6.50 to $6.75; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; good cows, $6.50 to $6.75; medium cows, $5.50 to $6; common cows, $5 to $5.50; canners and cutters, $3.75 to $4.50; bulls, choice, $7 to $7.50; good bulls, $6.50 to $7; medium, $6 to $6.50.

Stockers and Feeders.

Stockers and feeders were none too plentiful. Prices of steers, 800 to 900 lbs., at $6.75 to $7; steers, 700 to 800 lbs., at $6.25 to $6.50; stockers sold at from $4.60 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers.

Receipts of milkers and springers were not large. Choice milkers and forward springers of good quality still bring good prices, but common to medium milkers, and late springers are slow sale. Prices ranged from $60 to $90 each, the bulk going at $70 to $80.

Veal Calves

Receipts of veal calves were light and prices very firm. Choice calves, $10 to $11; good, $9 to $10; common and medium, $5.75 to $8.

Sheep and Lambs

The sheep and lamb market was firm. Sheep, light ewes, sold at $6.50 to $7; heavy ewes, $5.75 to $6.25; rams, $5.25 to $6.25; heavy lambs, $8 to $8.75; choice lambs, $9 to $9.75.

Hogs

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $9.25; $8.90, f.o.b. cars, and $9.50 weighed off cars.

MONTDEAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, March 18.—At the C. P. R. live stock market there was no further change in the prices for cattle, but the tone was firm. Choice steers sold at $8.25 to $8.50; good at $7.75 to $8; fair at $6.75 to $7.25., and common at $5 to $6 per 100 pounds. The demand for butchers' cows was good, at prices ranging from $5 to $7, and bulls sold at $5 to $7.25 per 100 pounds. A good trade continues to be done in milch cows, of which the offerings are increasing, and sales of choice milkers were made at $90 to $100, and lower grades at from $60 to $80 each.

The tone of the market for hogs was firm in sympathy with recent strength in the Toronto market, and the advance in prices of 60c per 100 pounds since last Thursday. The demand here today was good, and as the offerings were smaller than generally expected by the trade, an early clearance was made of Ontario selected stock at $9.80, and Manitobas at $9.50 per 100 pounds weighed off cars. The trade in sheep and lambs was quiet at $5.50 to $6.50 for the former and at $8.50 to $9 for the latter per 100 pounds.

The demand for calves was good at prices ranging from $3 to $15 each, and in some cases as high as $25 was realized for some extra choice stock.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, March 18.—Cattle—Receipts, 200; slow and steady; prices unchanged.

Veals—Receipts, 750; slow and steady; $6 to $10.

Tarzan of the Apes

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS.

Copyright by the Frank A. Munsey Co.

He recognized numerous articles from the cruiser—a camp oven, some kitchen utensils, a carbine and many rounds of ammunition, canned foods, blankets, two chairs and a cot and several books and periodicals, mostly American. "They must intend returning," thought D'Arnot.

He walked over to the table that John Clayton had built so many years before to serve as a desk, and on it he saw two notes addressed to Tarzan of the apes.

One was in a strong masculine hand and was unsealed. The other, in a woman's hand, was sealed.

"Here are two messages for you, Tarzan of the apes," cried D'Arnot, turning toward the door, but his companion was not there.

D'Arnot walked to the door and looked out. Tarzan was nowhere in sight. He called aloud, but there was no response.

"Mon Dieu!" exclaimed D'Arnot. "He has left me. I feel it. He has gone back to his jungle and left me here alone."

Far to the east Tarzan of the apes was speeding through the middle terrace back to his tribe. Never had he traveled with such reckless speed.

He passed above the sinuous, striped body of Sabor, the tiger, going in the opposite direction—toward the cabin, thought Tarzan.

What could D'Arnot do against Sabor, or if Bolgani, the gorilla, should come upon him, or Numa, the lion, or cruel Sheeta?

Tarzan paused in his flight.

"What are you, Tarzan?" he asked aloud, "an ape or a man?

"If you are an ape you will do as the apes would do—leave one of your kind to die in the jungle if it suited your whim to go elsewhere.

"If you are a man you will return to protect your kind. You will not run away from one of your own people because one of them has run away from you."

D'Arnot closed the cabin door. He was very nervous. Even brave men—and D'Arnot was a brave man—are sometimes frightened by solitude.

He loaded one of the carbines and placed it within easy reach. Then he went to the desk and took up the unsealed letter addressed to Tarzan.

Possibly it contained word that his people had but left the beach temporarily. He felt that it would be no breach of ethics to read this letter, so he took the inclosure from the envelope and read:

> To Tarzan of the Apes:
>
> We thank you for the use of your cabin and are sorry that you did not permit us the pleasure of seeing and thanking you in person.
>
> We have harmed nothing, but have left many things for you which may add to your comfort and safety here in your lonely home.
>
> If you know the strange white man who saved our lives so many times and brought us food and if you can converse with him thank him also for his kindness.
>
> We sail within the hour, never to return, but we wish you and that other jungle friend to know that we shall always thank you for what you did for strangers on your shore and that we should have done infinitely more to reward you both had you given us the opportunity. Very respectfully.
>
> WM. CECIL CLAYTON.

" 'Never to return!' " muttered D'Arnot and threw himself face downward upon the cot.

An hour later he started up, listening.

Something was at the door trying to enter.

D'Arnot reached for the loaded carbine and placed it to his shoulder, ready for any emergency that might arise.

Gently the door opened until a thin crack showed something standing just without.

D'Arnot sighted along the blue barrel at the crack of the door and then pulled the trigger.

* * * * * * *

When the expedition returned, following their fruitless endeavor to succor D'Arnot, Captain Dufranne was anxious to steam away as quickly as possible, and all save Jane Porter had acquiesced.

"No," she said determinedly, "I shall not go, nor should you, for there are two friends in that jungle who will come out of it some day expecting to find us awaiting them."

"But poor D'Arnot's uniform and all his belongings were found in that village, Miss Porter," argued the captain. "The natives showed great excitement when questioned as to the white man's fate."

"But they did not admit that he was dead. As for his clothes and accouterments being in their possession, more civilized peoples than these poor savage negroes strip their prisoners of every article of value whether they intend killing them or not."

"Possibly your forest man was captured or killed by the savages," suggested Captain Dufranne.

The girl laughed.

"You do not know him," she replied, a little thrill of pride setting her nerves a-tingle at the thought that she spoke of her own.

"I admit that he would be worth waiting for, this superman of yours," laughed the captain. "I most certainly should like to see him. The cruiser shall wait a few days longer."

"We can utilize the morrow in recovering the chest, professor," suggested Mr. Philander.

"Quite so, quite so, Mr. Philander. I had almost forgotten the treasure!" exclaimed Professor Porter. "Possibly we can borrow some men to assist us and some of the prisoners to point out the location of the chest."

"Most assuredly, my dear professor. We are all yours to command," said the captain.

It was arranged that on the next day Lieutenant Charpentier was to take a detail of ten men and one of the mutineers of the Arrow as a guide and unearth the treasure; also that the cruiser would remain for a full week in the little harbor. At the end of that time it was to be assumed that D'Arnot was truly dead and that the forest man would not return while they remained. Then the two vessels were to leave with all the party.

Professor Porter did not accompany the treasure seekers on the following day, but when he saw them returning empty handed toward noon he hastened forward to meet them, his usual preoccupied indifference entirely vanished, and in its place a nervous and excited manner.

"Where is the treasure?" he cried to Clayton while yet a hundred feet separated them.

Clayton shook his head.

"Gone," he said as he neared the professor.

"Gone! It cannot be. Who could have taken it?" cried Professor Porter.

CABINET MAY FALL

Calmette Assassination Serious for French Ministry.

PARIS, March 18.—The fall of the French Cabinet is generally regarded as likely to be brought about by the assassination Monday night of Gaston Calmette, editor of The Figaro, by Madame Caillaux, wife of the Minister of Finance.

Premier Doumergue conferred with President Poincare at the Palace of the Elysee, and a Cabinet Council was called for later in the day. It was then decided to remain in office despite the resignation of Caillaux.

It was conceded by members of all parties who discussed the situation yesterday in the lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies that the shooting of M. Calmette would probably have far-reaching effects on French politics. It was recognized that M. Caillaux had been the creator of the present French Cabinet and was its guiding spirit. As he had offered his resignation, it was pointed out the Cabinet was no longer in a position to uphold its announced policies.

On Trial for Martin Murder.

NEW YORK, March 18. — Harry Schaeffer, 19 years of age, was yesterday placed on trial in the Supreme Court for the murder of William G. Martin, a milliner, of Toronto, who came to this city on August 13 last.

Assistant District Attorney Brothers told the jury Schaeffer had confessed the murder of Martin in a room where he and Jack Serego had enticed him. The day after the men strangled the milliner and robbed his body they sailed for South America. On his return Schaeffer confessed the murder, saying it had been on his conscience and had almost driven him crazy.

GOES TO COMMITTEE.

Pollution of Streams Too Serious For Hasty Action.

OTTAWA, March 18.—The House spent the greater part of the afternoon considering a resolution proposed by Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, which provided for the appointment of a committee to investigate the pollution of navigable waters.

Mr. Hazen in support of his resolution said that the committee which had considered the subject at the last session had not had time to finish its work. A conference had been held last fall, at which representatives from the various provinces had been present. Experts at that conference had recommended further consideration of the matter and he was therefore asking for the appointment of a new committee.

Hon. George P. Graham said that the appointment of the committee would put Mr. Bradbury's bill off until next session. In his opinion the Government was endeavoring to sidestep this important matter.

The Prime Minister said the question was a serious one, involving as it did not only the pollution of insular waters, but also the pollution of international waters, and, therefore, the Government did not intend to act hastily in the matter.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who followed the Prime Minister, said that in his opinion a committee of the House was unnecessary. Parliament was competent to consider Mr. Bradbury's bill, and turning it over to a committee was simply wasting time.

W. F. Maclean (S. York) declared that he agreed with the Government that the pollution of streams was a matter for Federal control. If towns polluted streams they should be prohibited from continuing to do so.

Hon. J. D. Hazen said that the clause in Mr. Bradbury's bill forbidding the discharge of sewerage into streams should be carefully considered. As the clause now stood, it forbade the discharge of sewerage into the ocean which was absurd, as it could not possibly do any harm.

The resolution then passed, and both Mr. Bradbury's bill and the Senate bill was referred to the new committee.

ONTARIO WOMAN'S FORTUNE

Freed From That Weak, Languid, Always Tired Feeling, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Thessalon, Ont.—"I cannot speak too highly of your medicine. When my appetite is poor and I have that weak, languid, always tired feeling, I get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it builds me up, gives me strength, and restores me to perfect health again. It is truly a blessing to women, and I cannot speak highly enough of it. I take pleasure in recommending it to others."—Mrs. ANNIE CAMERON, Thessalon, Ont.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

There are probably hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over 30 years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering. If you are sick and need such a medicine, why don't you try it?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

VITALITY REGAINED KIDNEYS CURED

Health Restored By "Fruit-a-tives"

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 26th. 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My kidneys and liver were not doing their work, and I became all run-down. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them.

Their effect, I found more than satisfactory. Their action was mild and the results all that could have been expected.

My liver and kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old time vitality. Today, I am as well as ever, the best health I have ever enjoyed, and I unhesitatingly give you this testimonial for publication if you wish"

B. A. KELLY.

In hundreds of letters received by the Fruit-a-tives Company, the same expression is used "Fruit-a-tives is the best kidney remedy in the world". At any rate, these tablets have proved the best to the hundreds of men and women who have been cured by taking them. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Instant Relief From Backache

Lady In England Sends All The Way To Canada For GIN PILLS.

Henly Villa, Forest Rise, Essex.

"Please forward me a box of your GIN PILLS. Enclosed find Postal Order for 2/6 in payment. I bought GIN PILLS when I was last in Canada and found that they did me a lot of good for Backache, Rheumatism, Pains in the Muscles and Joints."

MRS. J. E. WATTS.

Weak, Strained, Irritated Kidneys cause the backaches the swollen hands and joints, the Rheumatism and Lumbago, that so many people suffer with. GIN PILLS give such quick relief because they go straight to the cause of the trouble—and correct it. They act directly on the Kidneys and Bladder—neutralize Uric Acid—dissolve Calculi—soothe the irritated membranes and strengthen and heal the kidneys.

GIN PILLS are a boon to elderly people, who are subject to weak back, swollen hands and feet, and particularly liable to Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago. GIN PILLS are one of the very few preparations that are sold on a money-back guarantee. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50. Sample sent free if you write National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada Limited, Toronto. 212

ADD HALIBURTON TO PETERBORO

Redistribution Scheme May Bring About This Change.

Ottawa, March 18.—While the plan of Ontario redistribution is treated as confidential among members of the committee until it is formally considered by them, it is understood that its provisions have been practically determined.

The redistribution in the western part of the Province will cause Grey, Huron and Middlesex to each lose a member. The Northumberlands will be joined and Brockville and Russell wiped out. Haliburton may be added to Peterborough, Thunder Bay and Rainy River, and also Nipissing will be divided so as to have two members.

Berlin Celebrates Royal Birth.

BERLIN, March 19. — Emperor William yesterday ordered a general school holiday in Berlin in celebration of the birth of his sixth grandson at Brunswick yesterday morning. The young Duchess of Brunswick, who is the only daughter of the Emperor, is reported to be doing well, as also her son. The Emperor has cancelled all his other engagements and will go to Brunswick to-day in order to see his latest grandson before departing for his annual trip to Corfu on March 22.

Berlin and Potsdam were decorated with flags yesterday in honor of the occasion.

Atlantic Liner Disabled.

HAMBURG, March 19—The breaking of both steam and hand steering gear in a terrific gale has caused the Hamburg-American Line Batavia to put in at Ponta Delgada in the Azores, where it is hoped she will be able to effect repairs by to-night. The Batavia left Hamburg on March 8 for Baltimore, carrying 296 steerage passengers.

Thousands Were Drowned.

LONDON, March 19.—A St. Petersburg despatch to The Times says: "It is estimated that between 1,500 and 3,000 persons perished in the storm, and that 150 boats were sunk in the Black Sea.

One More Airman Killed.

METZ, March 19—Lieut. Bongard, a German military aviator, died here yesterday from a fractured skull, caused by an aeroplane accident on Tuesday night. The aviator, while trying to glide to the landing place, turned the machine too sharply downward, causing it to turn over and crash to the ground.

Ten Sailors Drowned.

BILBAO, Spain, March 19.—The Swedish steamer Torbild has foundered with a loss of ten lives. The Torbild was built in 1877. She was of 916 tons register.

Twenty years ago on the First of March next, a well-known resident of this city took out at age 28 a 10 pay 20 year endowment policy for $1,000, No. 43860, in the Sun Life of Canada.

The yearly premium he paid on the participating plan for 10 years only was.. .. ..$ 69.30
The yearly premium he would have paid on the non-participating plan for the 10 years is.. .. 62.25

Extra paid for profits yearly for ten years. $7.05

He received in cash at the end of 20 years, $1,279.25, that is, the $70.50 extra that he paid for profits yielded him $279.25, almost 400 per cent.

Would you not like something like that?

Or, he could draw out $736.45 in cash, which is $43.45 more than all he paid in, and receive a fully paid-up participating policy for life.

You can never obtain such results as these on the non-participating plan unless you die and die early, so that the price will not become too high.

COVER THE EARTH
SWP

IT IS NOT A BIT TOO EARLY TO THINK ABOUT YOUR PAINTING

Thrifty property owners use S-W-P because it makes their property more valuable. It protects their buildings from the rain, the sun and the frosts. It works a wonderful improvement in the appearance of their homes, and increases their pride and prosperity.

Cheap shoddy paint is as poor a bargain as cheap shoddy clothes. It soon chalks, blisters, cracks or peels off, leaving your building unprotected and looking shabby, neglected and uninviting. But it is easy to prevent these undesirable conditions — Paint with S-W-P. The best paint you can buy is the cheapest in the end by far.

Sherwin-Williams Paint is made of pure lead, pure zinc, and pure screw pressed linseed oil, properly combined according to scientific formulae with the necessary coloring pigments and driers. It covers more surface than other paints including, hand-mixed lead and oil, because it is ground very, very fine and smooth, in powerful mills designed by The Sherwin-Williams Co. It looks better and lasts longer than cheaper paints, including white lead and oil, because it is made from the best quality materials thoroughly combined to make a tough elastic coat that is unaffected by the weather for five, six or more years depending on how well the paint has been applied. S-W-P gives maximum satisfaction in appearance and wear at a minimum expense per year. Made in 50 attractive shades. Ask us for color card.

As announced recently we are Agents for S-W Paints and Varnishes for Peterborough and vicinity—look over the following Sherwin-Williams products we have in stock. It will soon be "Brighten Up" time and you will need them to make your home bright and fresh after yourh house-cleaning.

For Staining Shingles.

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SERVICE

AMENDMENTS TO FISHERIES ACT CONSIDERED AT OTTAWA

Damages in Maritime Accidents to be Apportioned According to Fault---Objection Taken to Clause Regarding Fisheries Officials Acting as Magistrates---C. N. R. Application Discussed in Caucus.

OTTAWA, March 19.—The House of Commons spent an uneventful day in committee of the whole, considering a bill to amend the Fisheries Act, and an amendment to the law respecting merchant shipping. In the evening the estimates of the Department of Mines and the geological survey were considered.

Hon. J. D. Hazen's bill amending the law respecting merchant shipping was amended and reported. Among other things the bill provides that in case of collision the damages to cargoes shall be apportioned in accordance to the degree of fault of each vessel, Government-owned vessels, however, are not liable to damages.

Mr. Hazen moved an amendment providing that the provisions of the bill should not apply to any of the canals in Canada, and as the legislation stands it will not apply to the St. Lawrence above Montreal, the great lakes or the Detroit and St. Clair rivers.

The Minister of Marine and Fisheries, however, met with opposition to his bill amending the Fisheries Act, a clause of which provides that the governor in council may appoint fishery officials ex officio justices of the peace, with jurisdiction over poaching cases and infractions of the Fisheries Act.

Mr. Carroll (Lib., S. Cape Breton) made a strong protest against this clause. He declared that a prisoner would not be able to obtain a fair trial for the fishery official who acted, as the magistrate would be prejudiced.

Hon. Mr. Hazen maintained that such would not be the case. The Royal Northwest Mounted Police had followed similar procedure and no one ever had complaints of unfair trials conducted by them.

After some further discussion the bill was reported, with the understanding that the objectionable clause would be amended on third reading.

The estimates of the Department of Mines were then considered. An item of $20,000 for further investigation of the possibilities of peat as fuel elicited the criticism of Hon. Charles Murphy and E. W. Nesbitt (Lib., North Oxford).

Mr. Murphy maintained that the investigations of Dr. Haanel, director of mines, had cost the country in the neighborhood of $100,000, and absolutely without results; while Mr. Nesbitt pointed out that the Government had spent a large sum in establishing a peat-treating plant near Alfred, Ont., and after some experimentation had given it up as a bad job and sold the plant to a corporation.

Hon. Mr. Coderre, under whose jurisdiction the Department of Mines now is, warmly defended Dr. Haanel, and declared that his experiments had proved beyond a shadow of a doubt the commercial possibilities of peat as a fuel.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, ex-Postmaster-General, took occasion to read to the House a petition from a number of western colliery owners, asking that the royalty of 10 cents per ton on coal be reduced to five cents. He asked that the reduction be made.

Hon. Mr. Coderre, in reply, stated that the matter would be carefully considered.

The Government forces were in caucus yesterday morning for three hours considering among other things the C.N.R.'s application for a bond guarantee.

The following statement was issued by Premier Borden after the conclusion of the caucus:

"There was a caucus of Government members yesterday at which several matters of interest were discussed. Amongst others, the position of the unfinished Transcontinental Railways was considered, and the opinion of the Senators and members of the Commons was invited thereon. After an interesting discussion, in which many members took part, and in which the subject was debated in all aspects, the caucus adjourned at one o'clock."

TESSIER IS ELECTED.

New Minister In Gouin Cabinet Wins at Three Rivers.

THREE RIVERS, Que., March 19.—A hotly-contested provincial bye-election, following the appointment of Hon. J. Tessier to the new portfolio of Minister of Roads in the Gouin Cabinet closed yesterday, the Government retaining the seat over J. A. Desy, Conservative, by a majority of 208.

The Opposition speakers vigorously denounced the Government for not instituting a more thorough investigation into accusations made during the recent graft enquiry. It was argued, among other things, that some members were in the habit of receiving big legal fees for putting measures through the House, and that these fees were really bribes. Mr. Tessier's conduct as mayor of Three Rivers was also assailed.

Asquith Promises Enquiry.

LONDON, March 19. — Premier Asquith promised an Irish deputation which interviewed him yesterday that he would appoint a committee of enquiry to investigate the question of the abandonment of the Port of Queenstown by the big steamships plying between England and the United States. The deputation was headed by the Lord Mayor of Dublin and the Lord Mayor of Cork.

Mayor Hit Reporter.

NIAGARA FALLS, March 19.—An apology from Mayor Wm. Laughton to E. Gooding, whom his worship assaulted Saturday, was the signal for the quashing of a warrant sworn out by Gooding, a newspaperman, yesterday. The apology was made public and appeared in the paper on which Gooding is employed.

NO MORE PAIN

"KEPHALDOL" CAN NOW BE HAD AT YOUR DRUGGISTS.

Herr Doctor Stohr, the famous Austrian nerve specialist, first used KEPHALDOL prescription in his private practice and hospital work in Vienna. Other noted physicians and surgeons adopted this formula in treating of severe cases of Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago, La Grippe and Colds, Neuralgia and Headaches. The wonderful properties of KEPHALDOL became known in England, where a company was formed to prepare KEPHALDOL Tablets and supply them to the public at a nominal price.

Canadians, after visiting the Old Country, heard of KEPHALDOL, tried them and brought them back to Canada. So great became the demand for KEPHALDOL here, that a Canadian office was established to distribute these tablets on this side of the ocean.

So what one famous physician did in Austria, has resulted in thousands and thousands of sufferers being cured of pain.

KEPHALDOL is absolutely safe, having no ill-effects on the heart or other vital organs.

If your druggist should not have KEPHALDOL, a 50c. tube of tablets may be obtained by remitting the price to Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

NORWOOD NEWS

Norwood, March 17.—Mr. "Dean" Lees, of Peterborough, was in town last week.

The mild weather of the past few days has put the roads in this vicinity into a very bad state.

On Sunday the 15th inst., Mrs. Robert McNeely passed away at her residence here after an illness of about four months. The funeral was held on Tuesday at 2.30 p.m. to the Norwood cemetery. The late Mrs. McNeely was born in the township of Douro, on Feb. 14th, 1848. She has resided here for many years. and is survived by three children, viz: Mr. R. T. Scott and Mrs. R. D. Wannamaker, of Norwood, and Mrs. Geo. Quinn, of Vancouver.

The Epworth League of the Methodist church held a St. Patrick's day entertainment in the church on Monday evening of this week. The program, which was composed of Irish selections, was well rendered. The proceeds amounted to over twenty dollars.

The Daughters of the Empire are holding a concert in the town hall on Thursday evening of this week.

The Reform Association of East Peterborough are holding their annual convention on Saturday afternoon and evening of this week. Several speakers will be present and address the meetings on the questions of the day.

REVISING THE CONSTITUTION

Chinese Convention Remaking it to Suit Yuan Shi Kai.

PEKIN, March 19.—A convention opened here yesterday for the purpose of amending the provisional constitution of the Chinese republic. Sun Pao-Chi, acting Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs, presided. Out of the sixty delegates elected 83 were present.

Sun Pao-Chi read to the convention an inaugural address by President Yuan Shi Kai, in which the President gave a sketch of the ill-effects of the provisional constitution on both internal and foreign relations owing to its restrictions on the Government and its unsuitability to existing conditions in China.

The President added that he felt assured the convention would result in amendment of the constitution and would bring about peace and prosperity for China and her people.

Balfour Target For Boy.

NICE, France, March 19.—Arthur J. Balfour, the former British Premier, while proceeding in his automobile from Cannes to Nice yesterday, was struck by a stone thrown by a boy. A deep gash was cut in his nose and his cheek was badly gashed. Mr. Balfour, however, was able to take part in the international lawn tennis tournament.

The Empire waist lines are seen on the smartest frocks for children.

OBITUARY

MR. THOMAS BANNON.

The funeral of the late Mr. Thomas Bannon, an aged and highly respected citizen of the Township of Manvers, took place at Pontypool, on Wednesday afternoon, the 19th ult. The deceased passed away on Monday, the 15th ult, in the seventieth year of his age.

Thomas Bannon was born in the County Cavan, Ireland, in 1844 and came to Canada, settling in the municipality of Cavan in April, 1864. Like many others who had preceded him from Ireland and settled in the adjacent townships in the County of Durham, he undertook at once by dint of honest industry, to hake a home for himself, and in this he succeeded well. In 1869, he became united in marriage to Miss Mary McNight, of Cavan. Leaving the Township of Cavan 23 years ago, he procured a home in Manvers where the family have since lived and prospered. A family of two sons and two daughters with seven grand-sons, is the result of this union. Robert J. and William T. Bannon, reside in the city of Peterboro, while Mrs. W. J. Clark, resides in Ballyduff, and Miss Minnie, is still at home. Although a very quiet and unassuming man, Mr. Bannon was successful in business, and very highly esteemed by all who knew him. His final illness was not of a very protracted character, apoplexy being the immediate cause of death. In religion, Mr. Bannon was a member of the Church of England. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Matthew E. Wilson, M.A., of Pontypool. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the whole community in their sorrow.

MARGARET ROSE WILSON

The sympathy of their numerous friends will be extended to Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wilson, 700 Water St., who have been bereaved by the death of their infant daughter, Margaret Rose.

The child had been ill only a short time and death took place this morning.

The funeral will be held Friday afternoon at three o'clock, to the Little Lake Cemetery.

HENRY HEAD.

Henry Head, aged 82 years, an old and highly respected resident of Otonabee, passed away early this morning at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Petty, 274 John street. Deceased has been a life-long resident of this section of the county and the news of his death will be learned with general regret.

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 from the residence of Mrs. Petty, to the Little Lake cemetery. Service will be held at the house at 2 o'clock by the Rev. H. J. Keith.

MR. KERR TO SPEAK

Mr. F. D. Kerr will be one of the speakers at the annual meeting of the Liberal Conservative Association of East Peterborough, at Norwood, on Saturday afternoon and evening.

NOW IS TIME FOR BEST WORK

Review's Contest is Drawing to a Close Fast—Are You to be a Success or a Failure?

Candidates, did you ever stop to think why there are so many failures in this world? If you did, you certainly know the reason, and that is that they do not want to work, and have not got the grit or determination to make themselves a success. They would rather sit and think of the future than to work and make themselves what they should be. So it is with some of you who are in this race. You know, candidates, that you cannot sit and wait for people to bring their subscriptions to you. You have to get out and hustle for them. All the world likes a hustler, and are willing to help anyone toward success if that some one shows them that he or she is out for success and not failure. Stop long enough, candidates, and ask yourself if you are working the way you should, or are you depending upon tomorrow to bring results? If that is the case, or you are in that class, you might as well stop, as you will never make a success. Show the world in general that you are not of that caliber to stand still, but that you want to progress and move forward and you will have their support. Show them that your motto is to climb the ladder, not to go down or stand still. Is it worth your best effort, candidates, to work now for the remainder of the contest, which is only a little over a week, for to be the winner of the grand prize auto? Do not blame the contest department if you are not the winner of the auto at the close, as it is up to yourselves now. The contest manager has told you time and time again to work and success would be yours. Every tick of the clock makes you either nearer success or failure.

Divorce Fails Again.

OTTAWA, March. 19. — For the third successive year the Senate has refused to grant the application of Andrew Lorne Hamilton, bank manager, of Quebec, but formerly of Portage la Prairie, Man., for divorce from his wife. Three times the divorce committee of the Senate has found that divorce should be granted, and has so advised the Senate. But each time the advice has been rejected and the decision of the committee reversed by the committee as a whole. The application is now a cause celebre.

Ominously Strange.

The dear girl said to her father:

"Papa, George Beecham has proposed."

"Humph!" her father returned. "What's his income?"

The girl started.

"How strange! How very strange!" she said. "That's the very question George asked me about you."

His Realization.

"Did you ever realize anything on that investment?"

"Oh, yes."

"What did you realize on it?"

"What a fool I had been."

CANADIAN CLUB WOULD GIVE ASSISTANCE TOWARDS HELPING NATIONAL GAME

At the close of Professor Mavor's address at the Canadian Club last night, the question of giving assistance to the movement for the revival of the national game of lacrosse, was considered. The suggestion was made that the club might assist the proposal to provide school children with lacrosse sticks and grounds, in order that interest might be revived and good clean players developed. The suggestion was merely made for the members to think about and will likely receive serious consideration at a future date.

Due to the efforts of Mr. Frank Boyle, secretary of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association, Madoc, Tweed, Marmora and Stirling will take up the game of lacrosse this season, and it is possible that the game will also start again in Havelock, Campbellford, Hastings and Norwood.

BASEBALL

At a meeting held a few days ago the King Edward school Baseball Club was organized for the season. The following were the officers elected:

Hon. President—Mr. B. F. Ackerman.

Hon. Vice-President — Mr. Ed. Carr.

President—Mr. M. N. Clark.

Sec.-Treas.—Mr. J. M. Roszel.

Mascot—Percy Fairbrass.

Water Boy—Wilfrid Fuller.

Executive Committee — Eddie Jackson, Gerald Cunningham, Leith Bartley, Angus McLeod.

Representatives to School League —Mr. Clark, Mr. Roszel.

Purple and yellow were chosen as the colors of the club.

Word received from Irwin Trout states that he leaves his home in Reading to-day for Marlin Springs, Texas, where the Toronto Leafs will train with the Giants. Twenty-five will be in the party including twenty-one players.

Trout has tipped the local management off to a fleet outfielder of Reading. His name is Herbert Foose, and Manager Blount will look after him.

With the exception of Schettler, all the players Manager Blount has signed are 19, 20 and 21. Youth and speed is Curly's desire.

At the age of 25 Walter Johnston is the veteran pitcher of Washington's team. Dockling, Engel and Gallia, the other twirlers are barely out of their teens.

There may be two class B championship series next fall. The Eastern Asociation and New England League have arranged a post-season series, and the New York State League will probably meet the Canadian League in a similar series.

"Joe" O'Hara, the Toronto outfielder, whose work with the Wellingtons has attracted considerale attention, will join the Toronto Ball Club squad at Marlin Springs and will spend the training period with the Leafs, returning here to join the Toronto Canadian League team. He was with Ottawa for a short trial a year ago, and this season expects to be a permanent fixture with Holly's band.

MORE CURLING

The rather cold snap prevailing just now has caused the curlers to "come back" again. Angus McIntosh has a good sheet of ice ready and in all probability a few more games will be played.

OPPOSITION MEASURES TO COME UP NEXT WEEK

Mr Rowell and Colleagues Chafe at Delay in Giving Them an Opportunity to Debate Pet Measures Regarding Tax Reform, Votes for Women and Political Contributions.

TORONTO, March 19.—The Opposition's all-night struggle to prevent the passage of the bill indemnifying G. H. Ferguson from forfeiture of his seat for his revelation of Trent Valley Canal scandals in behalf of the Dominion Government, left the House rather listless and tired yesterday. Most of the sitting was taken up with weeding out unnecessary bills and appointing times for the discussion of impending measures.

In approaching the orders of the day, Mr. Rowell took exception to the Speaker's calling them out of the order in which they appeared on the order paper, referring particularly to Mr. Elliott's proposed amendment to the Municipal Act, allowing the vote to married women who were property owners. He said that question had now been before the House for a year and had been renewed at the beginning of the present session. If it was not the Government's intention to set a definite day to take the matter up, he would have recourse to rule 23 and have the order called.

Hon. Dr. Pyne, for the Government, stated that there were a number of bills dealing with the same subject and the Government wanted time to consider the matter thoroughly. In response to Mr. Rowell's renewed protest, he promised that the matter might be taken up by Tuesday or Wednesday of next week.

Mr. Rowell took objection again that the second reading of Mr. Anderson's bill, requiring the publication of contributions for political purposes, was being overlooked.

Hon. W. H. Hearst replied that Premier Whitney during the last session had had two such bills, one dealing with prohibition and the other with publication, up for consideration, and that the information necessary to an intelligent consideration of the matter by the House was still being gathered. He thought that this matter also might be taken up some time during next week.

The Opposition again recorded support of the bill to do away with the necessity of persons desirous of bringing damage action against the T. & N. O. having to first receive a fiat from the Attorney-General.

W. E. N. Sinclair (Lib.) argued that it was working a great hardship on the people, and that with the new subsidy in hand the railway was entitled to the same treatment accorded to others. Delay had been experienced by those living at a distance from the railway lines.

Hon. Mr. Foy replied that there was no reason for the bill. There never had been a delay in fiat issuance. Since January, 1913, only two applications had come, and one by letter had been answered in four days. Close attention was always paid to such cases, he said.

Mr. Rowell, supported by Messrs. Elliott and Mageau, took up the argument by claiming that it was contrary to all legislation that people should get a fiat from the parties they were suing. The motion, however, was lost on a vote.

At 4.35 yesterday morning, when the daylight was peeping in at the Legislative windows, the Foy resolution to amend the Assemblies Act was put through its third reading and declared carried, on a division of 61 to 17. G. Howard Ferguson and others who have served the Federal Government for pay were thereby indemnified from forfeiture of their seats in the Legislature.

The debate on the rules went on during the night and eight divisions were taken on successive amendments offered by the Opposition in its effort to stay the suspension of the House rules in order to pass the indemnifying measure. The Government members slept for the most part in the smoking-room, only appearing in the chamber when the division bell rang.

Sir John Gibson appeared in the House for a few moments yesterday afternoon to approve its adoption and the measure became law amid cheering and desk-pounding from the Conservative benches.

IN THE HANDS OF THE CROOKS

LONDON, March 19.—Challenging the right of the Government to expend £51,000,000 on the navy, Philip Snowden, the well-known Labor M.P., delivered a strong indictment of the conspiracy to inflate armaments in the House of Commons last evening. He declared that we were in the hands of "crooks," and described the methods by which the armament firms play on the fears of peoples and Governments in order to increase their profits, predicting, too, that they were getting ready for another scare like that of 1909. He traced the connection between both the Unionist and Radical members of Parliament and the armament firms, and read out a list of members with shares held by them, together, with the account of the part played by them in the House in the armament debates.

He strongly censured the action of the civil servants in joining armament firms, and declared that one could not avoid the suspicion that they had had some connection with such firms before.

Among the members whose names were mentioned by Philip Snowden, with the amount of their shares, are: Sir J. Compton Rickett, 3,200 shares; John Brown, 2,100 shares in Camnell Laird; Samuel Roberts, shareholder and debenture trustee in Fairfields, of Glasgow and Coventry Ordnance Co.; H. D. McLaren, director of Palmers' Shipbuilding Co.; Lewis K. Harcourt, Colonial Secretary, and shareholder in the Harvey Steel Trust; Hobhouse, Postmaster-General, shareholder in the Harvey Steel Trust.

More Power---Less Fuel

IT'S the motor that does it.

The wonderful Buick Overhead Valve Motor.

In the new McLaughlin-Buick "Six" it has proved itself capable of greater mileage per gallon of fuel than any other six-cylinder car of similar horsepower.

It has also shown greater capacity for developing power than any other motor of equal size.

And remember that the overhead valve motor is installed in every McLaughlin-Buick Pleasure Car for 1914.

If you consider upkeep cost, the saving in fuel made possible by this motor is a point that cannot fail to command your attention.

Consider, too, the daily satisfaction the McLaughlin-Buick will give you in certainty of service, comfort, convenience, appearance and pride of ownership.

No matter what its price, a McLaughlin-Buick car must, and will, give the maximum of that service for which it was intended, and must bear its proportion of the responsibility of maintaining that high prestige which McLaughlin-Buick cars have attained.

MISSIONARIES FROM THIBET AT TABERNACLE

An Interesting Story to be Told by Mr. and Mrs. Ekvall.

A four days' missionary convention with Bible and missionary addresses in the afternoon, and evangelistic preaching at night will be held in Bethany Tabernacle, beginning to-night, and continuing over Sunday.

The missionaries to be present are Rev. and Mrs. M. E. Ekvall, of the Thibetan Border Mission, of the C. & M. A. Until quite recently the land of Thibet has been closed to the missionary and His message.

Mr. and Mrs. Ekvall are doubtless among the first to bring missionary tidings from this isolated country to the people of Peterboro. Theirs will be an unusually interesting story to those who find it possible to hear them. They will speak each day at 3 p.m., and also give a short address at the beginning of the evening service.

The evangelistic address each night will be given by Rev. E. J. Richards, a well-known evangelist of New York City. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

SORRY TO HEAR BELLEVILLE MAN'S TRAGIC DEATH

Victim of Woodbine Hotel Fire Had Many Local Friends.

Mr. Charles Wilmot, of Belleville, who met an untimely death in the fire at the Woodbine Hotel in Toronto, on Tuesday night was a very popular man in this section of the province and had numerous local friends. Although he was connected with government fisheries, he was best known as a horseman and it was in this occupation that he made most of his Peterborough acquaintances. His wife was also very popular, more especially some years ago, when she made several local appearances as a vocalist.

Mr. Wilmot was a big man physically, and speaking of his death a friend is reported as saying:—

"If Charlie Wilmot was not immediately overcome by the smoke you may be sure he made a giant's battle for his life. He was a man of magnificent physique and great resolution. Though no longer young he retained much of his extraordinary strength, and without the handicap of suffocation he would have torn a hole in the brick wall to escape. A caged lion fighting him for his liberty would give some picture of the terrific struggle that must have gone on before he succumbed to the enveloping flames."

Texas Bandit Held Up Train.

BEAUMONT, Texas, March 19.—A lone robber held up the express messenger on a Santa Fe Railroad train near here yesterday and is reported to have secured $14,000. The robbery occurred on northbound train No. 202 at Helbig, fourteen miles north of here. Deputy sheriffs from Beaumont started in pursuit of the robber, who is said to have disappeared in a thickly-wooded country.

USE THEIR WIVES TO DO KILLING

PARIS, March 19.—Mme. Caillaux seems to have become a popular heroine amid all the turmoil. Among the crowds of excited, gesticulating people her name is heard constantly. She is talked of as the victim of her love for her husband, and as his instrument in committing the crime which has robbed the press of a prominent writer and the French Cabinet of its leading spirit.

The crowds have adopted as their own the assertion of Deputy Delahaye in the Chamber Wednesday night that Cabinet Ministers nowadays use their wives to kill those obstructing their path.

The excitement among the populace is worked upon by the many sensational newspapers among the daily publications of Paris. These exaggerate, invent and hint at things, and the vendors yell the insinuations among the crowd, exciting the people still further.

HON. WILLIAM PATERSON DIES

Ex-Minister of Customs Was 76 Years of Age.

PICTON, Ont., March 19.—Hon. William Paterson, ex-Minister of Customs, is dead at the home of his daughter here at the age of 75 years. He had been in ill-health since his retirement from politics in 1911, and acutely ill throughout the winter. He passed away at his apartments, Johnston street, in the presence of his wife and daughter. Surviving members of the family are: William F., of Brantford; Charles G., professor of church history in Presbyterian College in California, and Mrs. Dr. M. E. Branscombe, Picton. The funeral will probably take place in Brantford on Saturday.

Hon. William Paterson was born in Hamilton in 1839. When he was ten years of age his parents died from cholera and he was adopted by the late Rev. Dr. Ferrier and taken to Caledonia, Ont. Educated in Hamilton and Caledonia, he in 1863 entered into partnership in Brantford as a biscuit manufacturer, and in 1876 became sole owner of the business.

His public career began when he served as deputy reeve of Brantford (1869-71) and as mayor (1872-3). He represented South Brant in Parliament from 1872 (when he defeated Sir Francis Hincks) until 1896, when he himself was defeated, but his opponent was also unseated later for the corrupt practices of his agents. Meantime Mr. Paterson was seated for North Grey. From 1900-4 he represented North Wentworth and Brant, and he sat for Brant 1904-11.

When the Laurier Government was formed, Mr. Paterson became controller of customs, and as such had much to do with framing the tariffs of 1897 and 1907. In 1897 he was sworn in as Minister of Customs, and frequently acted as Finance Minister in the absence of Mr. Fielding, with whom he acted in framing the reciprocity pact of 1911.

In 1902, he was one of the Canadian delegates to the Imperial Conference in London; he was a member of the Tariff Commission of 1905; in 1909, he was appointed by King Edward to act on the royal commission to report on trade relations between Canada and the West Indies. With Mrs. and Miss Paterson he was present by invitation at the coronation of the late King Edward, and was subsequently presented to the King and Queen, as well as to their present Majesties.

To Visit Brocks Colony.

BROCKS, Alta., March 19.—The Duke of Sutherland is expected here during the summer, on his first visit to the Sutherland colony, since succeeding to the title. The late Duke of Sutherland was the founder of the Brocks Colony, and previous to his death had planned extensive developments along the most progressive lines for the young settlement, such as a beet sugar factory, natural gas wells for light and power, demonstration farms to train immigrants in proper methods of western farming and similar advanced improvements. The visit of the present duke is awaited with interest because it may mean the carrying out of the program of his father.

THE CONVERSION OF THE LATE SENATOR COX AT MEETINGS HELD IN GEORGE ST. CHURCH

Christian Guardian.

Please accept my tribute to the memory of the magnificent man who was sainted in your city so recently, whom I loved so truly for his manly worth. I claim no intimacy, and yet there are ties that even death cannot break, and in relating these my statements will sound crude. They are based on experience and fellowship, nevertheless, and here I knew him thoroughly.

In the good old town of Peterborough, in the fall of the year of our Lord 1858, special services were conducted by the Rev. William Scott, of precious memory, which resulted in the conversion of a number of young men, two of whom became preachers, the writer and the younger Dundas, Joseph, the older brother, a merchant and finally M.P. for the County of Victoria—Dr. Samuel Ford, of Norwood, then a public school teacher, and George A. Cox, much esteemed at that time, but whose kingdom was yet to come. These and some others were gathered in a class led by Brother Richard Winch, the beloved, assisted by a sweet-spirited teacher who became the Rev. Nathaniel Burwash, and sometimes by Rev. Charles Perry, to whom I owe much.

That young men's class and prayer-meeting became the glory of old George Street Church, from which the subject of this sketch was never absent.

In presence of clear reasoning and convincing application of our pastor it was impossible to escape, and I remember well my state of mind when I came forward to the anxious seat—the first of all—like a wrestling Jacob, seeking the promised blessing—"getting religion." Soon a second young man bowed beside me, whom until then I knew not. It was George A. Cox, quite deliberate, intensely earnest, showing little emotion. He consecrated his life to God and man, and to this program was faithful unto death. Associations formed at the cross are lasting as eternity, and although our ways soon parted, I kept in view him and all my brethren who met at our trysting place.

The spring following this moral crisis I became seriously ill, and at my parental home, one Sabbath afternoon, Samuel Ford and George A. Cox visited and cheered me by their presence and prayers.

To show his democratic spirit, an Ottawa paper said, "If George A. Cox were walking down King Street with the Governor and met an engine driver whom he knew he would stop and greet him." That outlines his character. It was no special effort; it was native to his being."

He was loyal and liberal to our Church, and yet how much it assisted him in forming that high character which made him supreme was ever borne in mind by him. He sacrificed much for his prohibition principles, and he possessed the princely virtue of standing by his friends.

In view of the above his death affected me much, and so provoked these lines:

"Oh, saintly soul, farewell!
The angel choir, above all else,
this note shall swell,
A note of victory
As through the pearly gates you enter in
A holy city, kept free from sin.
To joy unspeakable.
A crown of righteousness awaits
thee now,
The Lord himself shall place it on thy heavenly brow."

—Carl Allum.

WALTER LIBBY MEETS TRAGIC DEATH IN FIRE AT DETROIT

Local Young Man Was at Work on the Fifth Storey of Building

Detroit, March 20.—Two bodies have been recovered and a third body is believed to be in the ruins of a five-story brick building at 55-53 Woodbridge Street, which was swept by fire yesterday afternoon. Two men were injured and two score of employees, including a number of young women, escaped from the blazing building. The property loss was estimated at $100,000.

The known dead are Walter Libby, Peterboro, Ont.; John Law, Newark, N.J.

Both men were employed by Wilson & Sharp, who operate a machine on the fifth floor. Both bodies were badly burned. A man named Todd, who worked for the same company, is missing.

The cause of the fire has not been determined.

Heartfelt sympathy goes out to Mr. Walter Libby, a resident of Parnell Street, who received word last night that his oldest son, Walter, had perished in the Detroit fire yesterday afternoon. The unfortunate young man was employed on the fifth floor of the building in the Wilson-Sharp machine shop, and the fact that he was on the fifth floor no doubt lessened his chance of escape.

His brother Martin was employed in the same place, but he escaped and sent the news home last evening. Other than the above no particulars will be available until the remains arrive in the city, which will likely be to-night.

The late Walter Libby was born in this city some twenty-four years ago and spent the greater portion of his life here, attending the public school and later serving an apprenticeship in the Wm. Hamilton Co.

Some six years ago he left here to work in Toronto, and had been employed in various cities since. He had been working in Detroit a little over a year. He was home for Christmas holidays, and some three weeks ago his younger brother Martin left here to join him.

There are left to mourn his untimely death, his heart-broken parents, one sister, Miss Maud, and two brothers, Martin and Louis.

The remains of the late Walter Libby will be brought to the city to-night, via the C. P. R. 1.01, and the funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 to the Little Lake Cemetery. Service at the house at 2 o'clock by the Rev. H. J. Keith, of Knox Church.

THE HIGHEST TENDER GETS MARKET TOLLS

A. S. Sanderson's Tender Accepted by Property Committee.

The Property Committee took a business view of the market tolls tenders received last night, and accepted the tender of A. S. Sanderson, Chamberlain Street. His offer was $876. Two other tenders were W. Fisher, $840, and John Riddle, $837.

Mr. Fisher's tender was $1 below his accepted tender of last year.

The committee agreed that all were good men, but as a matter of business they accepted the highest figure.

THE FEEDING OF THE FIVE THOUSAND

The four days' Missionary Convention and Evangelistic meeting began in Bethany Tabernacle yesterday.

Rev. M. E. Ekvall, the Swedish missionary from the Thibetan border gave the opening address in the afternoon. At the evening service Mrs. Ekvall gave a brief talk, preceding Rev. E. J. Richard, the New York Evangelist, who gave the principal address of the evening. He spoke on the Feeding of the Five Thousand as given in the sixth chapter of St. Mark's Gospel. He drew some very striking comparisons between "The Bread broken for the Multitude" and Christ as the Bread of Life. A ready response was made on the part of the people when invitation was given to assemble for prayer at the close of the service.

The service to-night will begin promptly at eight o'clock with a brief missionary message, preceding the evangelistic address. A cordial welcome to all.

LADY CURLERS HOLD ANNUAL

Officers Elected and Prizes Presented to Winning Rinks.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Curling Club was held yesterday at the home of Mrs. A. J. Grant, when the election of officers took place as follows:

President—Mrs. Sanderson.
Vice-President—Mrs. Eastwood.
Sec.-Treas.—Miss F. Gladman.

After a pleasant game of bridge, came the presentation of prizes, Mrs. Coulthardt's rink having won the president's prize and Mrs. Eastwood's rink, the Outturn competition, the prizes for which had been donated by Mrs. Goodwill.

FINED FOR AN INFRACTION OF THE FIRE BY-LAW

Lewis Florence Started Fires in Rear of Premises.

Lewis Florence, Furniture Dealer, Charlotte Street, was fined $7.60 by Magistrate Dumble this morning for an infraction of the fire by-law. He pleaded guilty to the charge, through his counsel, G. N. Gordon.

Fire Chief Howard gave evidence to the effect that he had received numerous complaints as to the dangerous practice of the accused starting fires in his yard. The close proximity of valuable buildings made it extremely dangerous.

Mr. E. H. D. Hall acted for the city.

MEN OF MOMENT IN BRITAIN

Sir Edward Carson, the anti-Home Rule leader. Nothing less than the permanent exclusion of the Protestant counties of Ulster from the Irish Government at Dublin, instead of the proposed six-year option, will be considered, he says.

Lord Reading, the Sir Rufus Isaacs of other days, who recently was sworn in and took his seat for the first time in the House of Lords. He was appointed Lord Chief Justice of England in succession to Lord Alverstone last October. Lord Reading, who is now 53 years old, has had a most romantic career. As a boy he ran away to sea and served before the mast; later he went on the Stock Exchange but was unsuccessful; at 24 he was on the verge of emigrating to the United States, but changed his mind and studied law. He was called to the bar in 1887 and success came quickly. Honor followed honor in rapid succession from that day to this.

Premier Asquith, whose concessions to the Ulsterites, as announced in the House of Commons, are said to be the extreme limit to which the Government will go in the way of conciliatory offers for a peaceful settlement of the Home Rule controversy.

SPOKE TO THE MEN.

A meeting of men interested in the social problems of to-day was addressed last evening at Knox Church by Rev. Robert Pogue, on the subject of the Relation of the Church to the Social Problem.

KNOX CHURCH.

Preparatory service will be held in Knox Church to-morrow evening at eight o'clock, preceded by a meeting of the Session at 7.30, in the vestry. The service will be addressed by the Rev. Mr. Grobb, of All Saints' Church.

SIR EDWARD CARSON ENTERS ULSTER CAPITAL

Volunteers Drawn up as Guard of Honor and Revolver Volley is Fired---Sir Edward Issues an Appeal for Calm---Feeling Among People is Tense

Canadian Press Despatch.

Belfast, March 20.—Sir Edward Carson made a dramatic entry into Ulster's capital to-day. His purpose in coming is to confer with Ulster Unionist leaders and commanders of Ulster volunteers and before landing he received on board Sir George Richardson, lieutenant-general commander-in-chief of the Ulster volunteers, with his chief officers.

As the party came down the gangway from the steamer they found drawn up a guard of honor of Ulster volunteers and a big crowd cheered wildly and fired a revolver volley into the air.

During the night automobiles had been kept busy moving stores and documents from the Unionist headquarters, apparently fearing a raid by the police.

Belfast, March 20.—Under orders from headquarters two hundred infantrymen arrived at Newry to-day from the Curragh and three hundred more from Mullingar. Londonderry garrison has been reinforced by three hundred men from Mullingar and two warships have arrived in Dublin Bay. Feeling among Belfast people has become much more tense since yesterday's debate in Parliament and soon after his arrival, Sir Edward Carson issued an appeal to his followers to preserve calm. No disturbance has occurred up to three o'clock this afternoon.

R. C. BRAUND BUYS PROPERTY IN FRONT OF THE CURLING RINK

All papers have been signed for the transfer of the property in front of the Peterborough Curling rink, to Mr. R. C. Braund, who as the owner, will proceed to build.

The price was $5,000.

Mr. Braund will erect a building that will provide for six stores and appartments and arrangements will be made for the use of part of the building by the Curling Club. This will give the club commodious and up-to-date quarters. The building will be completed by the first of September.

The sale of the property to other parties was first put through by Mr. H. J. McCannon, who closed the deal to the satisfaction of the Curling Rink Company, but anothr arrangement gives Mr. Braund the ownership of the property.

COUNTY BRIDGES

The Dickson Bridge Company, of Campbellford, were this afternoon awarded the contract for the construction of the two bridges, Davidson's and Canal Bridge, by the County Council, at $3,080.

Other tenders were received from the Wm. Hamilton Company, Ontario Bridge Company and Killen Bridge Company.

St. James' Brotherhood.

Rev. R. G. Peever, will address a meeting of the St. James' Brotherhood to-night at eight o'clock. The subject, "The True Functions of the Christian church,"

TWO MORE BODIES FROM HOTEL RUINS

Woodbine Hotel Fire Cost Five Lives.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, March 20.—Two more bodies have just been taken out of the ruins of the Woodbine Hotel annex, making five dead.

There is no surmise as to who the fifth body is.

So many claims were made on a Lloyd's syndicate that, for ten shillings premium, insured against appendicitis in the sum of £100, that the premium has been doubled.

BUSY SEASON IN LUMBER CAMPS

Thirty Percent More Men in Some of the Camps.

A few more weeks will see the rush of the lumbermen to the cities. Some, of course, will remain for the drives.

The past season has been one of unlimited activity back among the tall pines. The number of camps this year in the local lumbering districts is in excess of those of recent years, some of them having as much as thirty per cent. more men for the handling of the season's work.

A lumber camp of to-day and one of fifty years ago are as different as day is from night. In fact they cannot be compared. The old time shanty was a rough place. But today the camp with its spacious reading rooms and cooks, provide the men with sufficient spirit to attack any kind of work which may fall to their lot at the shanties, and the food is no longer one eternal round of pork and beans. The men are not now bunked together like as many sheep as in former days.

Log cutting is carried on much more economically than in former days, owing to the deacreasing stock in our forests. Logs are cut with as little waste as possible, owing to their small diameter. Lengths average from 12 to 16 feet, while even smaller lengths are taken. No doubt people say that lumber is not used as much as in the old days, but the reason is that our lumber sources are becoming as dry as summer streams, therefore the small logs cut and scarcity of good lumber.

The position of real heavy timber formerly used for construction work has been usurped by concrete and steel. About three inches is the maximum width for planks to-day.

TO LEAD THE LIBERALS IN THE SENATE

Hon. Hewitt Bostock is Choice of Liberal Senators.

Ottawa, March 20.—Hon. Hewitt Bostock was elected Liberal leader of the Senate at a caucus of Liberal Senators yesterday. He succeeds the late Sir George Ross.

Senator Bostock is an Englishman, a graduate of Cambridge, and a Lincoln's Inn barrister, who came to Canada in 1893, settling in British Columbia as a rancher and fruit grower. He is 49 years of age and is possessed of considerable means.

Hon. A. J. Balfour was struck in the face by a stone thrown by a boy at Nice.

SETTLEMENT FOR THE INDIGENT CASES AT ST. JOSEPH'S HOSPITAL

IN SLANG OF THUG HE TELLS OF CONVERSION

Ex-Convict and Gunman Recites Life Story in Patois of the Underworld.

Erie, Mar. 20.—"Lucky" Baldwin ex-convict reformed gunman, has a power of speech all his own. He spoke in the Y.M.C.A. to two hundred men on his life and experience in the underworld. Unless one understands the slang of the underworld, however, his meaning is not always clear.

For instance, he refers to a physician as "a croker," the mouth as "the kiss," the ribs as "the slats" and the head as "the coco." "Kick" in Baldwin's vocabulary means pocket, "jitney" stands for a nickel. "The timber" means the bar in a saloon. "Touching a guy" is the same to Lucky as "frisking his kick," or picking his pocket.

"I touched a guy for forty bucks," he said, explaining an incident in his criminal career. "I ducked for the nearest joint where I could put my chest up against the timber and in a little while I was broke flat." He went on to tell how a policeman struck him in "the kiss" and told him it was his last chance and how he was driven into a mission and began there his reformation.

It was a wonderful story the reformer "bad man" told and only went to show, he declared, that the ex-convict has an up-hill pull to make good. He told of his childhood in the tenement district of Chicago, where the law of might made leaders, and of his experiences in later youth, as gun man, pick-pocket and crook. Baldwin toured the country and was known to the police of every big city. He still has hundreds of friends in penitentiaries, whom he is endeavoring to reform. Just outside of Chicago, he operates The Home of Hope, where he teaches ex-convicts to become upright men.

Tells of Reformation.

"God doesn't look upon the criminal with horror," he declared vehemently. "It's us that do that. One half the world wants to know why the other half isn't in the penitentiary. Which half is it?"

Telling of the suffering he has gone through in prisons and of the joys he has had since his reformation, Lucky declared hell and heaven begin right here. He told of his arrival in a Chicago mission in picturesque manner.

"A bull chased me in," he said. 'He rapped me acrost the kiss wid his club and says: 'Lucky, I'm only goin' t' give you one more chanst. The next time I'm goin' t' take you in feet first.' I didn't have a jitney in muh kick when I got in. Dey give me a ticket fer coffee and treated me white. Now jist to show you the conceit of a guy, I says to meself: 'Chee, dis guy must tink I'm a bum.'"

Baldwin told many touching tales of friends who travelled the rocky paths of the underworld and landed finally in the electric chair. He told of a boy who murdered a rival for the heart of an underworld girl, and at the electric chair knelt to pray. "It was too late fer him to pray then," said Baldwin. "He should have prayed when he was back home in the country wid his mother."

At this point the speaker declared that seventeen per cent. of the men he deals with are from rural districts.

In closing, Baldwin made an attack on unbelievers. "All the infidels of hell couldn't shake my belief."

Account for $2,113 is Cut Down to $1000 and Accepted

"BUSINESS ABILITY"

Hospital Will Join With the City to Prevent Imposition

The committee of the whole Council met Father McColl last night and made a settlement for indigent cases.

The account from St. Joseph's Hospital from April 1, 1912, to Mar. 5, 1914, was $2,113. After some discussion Ald. Johnston moved, seconded by Ald. Saunders, that the account be paid at $1,000.

To this Father McColl agreed, although he held that the city had the better of the deal.

Willing to Co-operate.

Father McColl was also quite willing to co-operate with the city in their efforts to prevent imposition, which has been practiced in the past.

The arrangement to which the Board of Nicholls' Hospital agreed was that an official of the city investigate and pass on all cases before entrance to the hospital.

Reserves All Rights.

This was quite satisfactory to Father McColl, but at the same time he made it quite clear that the Hospital would not relinquish any rights given them by the Act.

The reverend visitor complimented the Council on their business ability. If they dealt with other matters with the same ability, they would have the rate down to 12 mills and would be elected by acclamation next year.

Based on the arrangement made with the Nicholls' Hospital, Ald. Anderson brought the St. Joseph's Hospital account down to $600. Father McColl explained one case alone had cost the hospital $580. This was a case of insanity and was a legitimate account against the city, and must be paid if pressed.

Has Been Imposition.

He agreed that St. Joseph's Hospital had been imposed upon, when it was pointed out that such imposition had been suffered by Nicholls' Hospital. "We will work with you in any arrangement to prevent imposition," Father McColl said.

The Relief Officer.

The committee also discussed the situation with Mr. Finch Miller, Relief Officer, who it is proposed to appoint as an official to investigate all cases.

Mr. Miller said he would have to give up the office of Immigration Agent. The suggestion of the Mayor that Mr. Miller take up the question of the form of procedure in cases with the city solicitor was adopted. The question of salary will be further considered. Mr. Miller receives $300 as Relief Officer. He will not take the extra duties at a salary less than $700.

He would have to be available at all hours of the day, and probably at night.

Surprise Visit Paid to See That Ropes Are in Proper Place

Merchants Must Mot Start Fires in Rear of Their Stores

In an interview with Fire Chief Howard this morning, stress was laid upon the statement by the Chief, that every hotel in the city is provided with a rope for every bedroom. This protection in case of fire is not only provided for guests but for the proprietor, his family and also the servants.

In company with Mr. Stewart, the license inspector, the Chief makes an inspection of all the hotels once a year and at another time a surprise visit is paid. Every room is entered and inspected, and if the rope is not in its proper place the change must be made at once. In this work, the Chief says, the proprietors lend their hearty co-operation.

Back Yard Fires.

But the Fire Chief is not so well pleased with the practice of merchants starting fires in the rear of their premises. He has had considerable trouble with several. This morning at Police Court, Lewis Florence, Charlotte Street, was fined on his plea of guilty.

His counsel, Mr. Gordon, asked for leniency, stating that it was the first case of its kind here.

Magistrate Dumble said the next offender coming before him would on conviction be given the full fine of $50.

It is the intention of the Fire Chief to prosecute others unless a change for the better is made right away.

THE PASSION PLAY SEEN AT ST. PAUL'S

The Passion Play, an interesting illustrated lecture, was given last evening at St. Paul's Church by the Rev. David Lang, of Toronto.

The Passion Play originated in Oberameraque, Switzerland, long ago, where it is held as a festive day every ten years, and it was witnessed by Rev. Mr. Lang while on a trip through Europe. He secured photographs of the play for lecture purposes.

While in the city Rev. Mr. Lang was a guest of Mrs. McGee, of Reid Street.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, MARCH 20, 1914.

PROOF IS NECESSARY.

OUR EVENING contemporary publishes an article, presumably an editorial, declaring the "Trent Canal funds were not milked for benefit of Liberal party funds," and states further that it is in a position to deny absolutely that the Hon. J. R. Stratton made the statement attributed to him by the Superintendent, "as to the Trent Canal being good for from $5,000 to $6,000 election funds, or that he ever benefitted in a party, or any other sense, from one penny of diverted canal funds."

Why this haste to deny accusations before they are made? So far only the report and evidence has been presented to the House of Commons, yet here is a straight denial, made apparently with the authority of a party most deeply concerned. True, it purports to deny insinuations, but as the guilt has to be proved, so a denial of complicity is tantamount to admitting a charge.

The denial has been made. Evidently the charge, if such it may be called, was considered serious enough to warrant a denial. But, after devoting nearly two columns to the affair little more than denial was made. That will not clear anyone from opprobrium in this scandal, nor will it free anyone from the consequences of the investigation. All may deny complicity in this disgraceful affair, but they must support their denial with proof. If they can prove their denial we shall be glad to inform our readers. On the other hand the report, the evidence and the statements of officials exist to support whatever charges will be made, and to justify whatever action will be taken by the authorities. That the article admits the wrongdoing is evident, that it attacks insinuation is just, that it prove something is quite as necessary.

Unloading the blame on the shoulders of the superintendent will not clear those concerned in the affair, especially when it was notorious here that any person good or bad could get a job at the canal at the last election. In the meantime, people will have to possess their souls in patience whether insinuating or denying insinuations, until all the facts of the case are made public.

BRANTFORD AFTER RADIALS.

A BY-LAW is before the people of Brantford for the purpose of purchasing the radial lines of that city. Brantford is among the western Ontario cities, like London and Hamilton, that are reaping the advantages of the Hydro-Electric development that is taking place in that part of the province. The agitation in Brantford is of considerable interest to the citizens of Peterborough, in view of Mayor Buller's suggestion that electrical energy and radial lines should be developed with Peterborough as the hub. The quality of the car service in Brantford has not been high; the cars are poor, the road-bed not of the best, the management lax. Yet Brantford's mayor feels the investment a good one, and has based his opinion on the receipts for the previous year. The street railway last year in Brantford, just about carried itself, while the Grand Valley line was operated at a profit. Private capital will build electrical railways only where it is amply assured of a profitable return. When such lines are built, the construction is often not of the best and the service consequently poor. The St. Catharines Standard is to the point when it says:

"Under the new Provincial legislation there is no need for dependence upon private capital for the construction of radial railway lines, and bonuses will not be asked for to go into the making of private fortunes. The success of the hydro-power has shown the way for hydro-radials."

It is hoped that the citizens of Peterborough will be interested enough to take some action and assist Mayor Buller in his plan to develop the dormant electrical possibilities of this city.

A SERIOUS MATTER.

THE C.N.R. has, we understand on good authority, received very cold treatment from the Conservative members at Ottawa. Mackenzie & Mann are openly charged with having "lied" last year when they got fifteen millions out of the treasury. There is practically no doubt that this railway will have to "give up." If the government comes to the rescue of this immense undertaking it will be on condition that it goes under government control. M & M. are out of it. To go to Ottawa without warning in the middle of a session and demand immediate aid on threat of disaster is too much for the Borden Government. The whole affair looks like a gigantic hold-up. But what way out is to be suggested remains a secret. To touch it is dangerous and not to touch it is dangerous. It is another one of the unhappy legacies left by Laurier, who gave it his blessing and subsidized it.

BRITAIN LOOKS TO CANADA.

CANADIAN LIBERAL papers have recently made light about "The late Emergency," but the emergency still exists, Canada's contribution to the Empire's defence is still a necessity, judging from the address of Winston Churchill, when he presented the naval budget. The first lord of the Admiralty still looks to Canada for assistance, and claims that it is to the best interest of Canada to come to the aid of the Mother Land. He did not think it compatible with the dignity and status of the Dominion, that Canada should depend upon the British tax-payer. Mr. Churchill urged the importance of having in Canadian and South African waters, naval stations, docks and repair plants, which would enable the imperial squadron to operate in these parts. With regard to the terms of Canada's contribution, Mr. Churchill remarked that there was little more to be said. "The admiralty view has been expounded in the Canadian memorandum, to which the admiralty adheres, and the facts have been strengthened by the passage of time. They contain an absolute justification of the Canadian action thereafter." The Daily Telegraph trusts that Mr. Churchill's anticipation of the removal of the Canadian naval deadlock will be fulfilled, "because every passing day renders more apparent the needed accession of strength which the Dominion would lend to the Empire. Meanwhile the British taxpayer has to pay hard cash for the temporary failure of Mr. Borden's noble purpose."

The statements of the British Liberal Government and of the British press show that in spite of the Liberal party's program in Canada, there is still an emergency. In spite of the repeated statements of British Liberals, and Canadian Conservatives, the Laurier opposition still persists in its useless policy of blocking the Naval Aid Bill, and of upholding its contention for a tin-pot navy: There is no real imperialism, no real grasp of the Empire's needs in the present policy of the Liberal party in Canada. Being abortive, it is also beneath the dignity of the Canadian people, and shows the narrow outlook of the Laurier Opposition. Mr. Borden knows it occupies a discredited position and does not possess the support of the people. If Mr. Borden is permitted to pursue his present policy as all good citizens trust, only a short time will elapse when Canada will give that assistance she has proposed and which Mr. Churchill desires.

OUR CONTEMPORARY ADMITS.

MR. BURNHAM, M.P., says with reference to the double-column disclaimer in the T.V.C. matter on Wednesday, that he agrees with our evening contemporary for once, in that insinuations and surmises are not necessarily proof, and that it is established that grafting, etc., did really take place. Our contemporary freely admits the main points of interest—Ferguson's findings regarding peculation and petty pilfering. We must give credit for candour where it is due. Nothing is gained by insisting that funds went into certain pockets, when suspicion alone points that way, or from all the circumstances and the history of politics in Peterborough, it may seem likely.

INDEMNIFYING MR. FERGUSON.

THERE HAS been a good deal of discussion in the papers recently, over the bill to indemnify Mr. Howard Ferguson, M.L.A., of Grenville, for acting as a special commissioner of the Dominion Government in the investigation of Trent Valley Canal affairs, while being a member of the Ontario Legislature. The Hamilton Herald suggests that the opposition would not have been so violent, had more time been allowed for discussion, and more consideration given to the rights of the minority. The facts of the case were already well known and discussion would serve no purpose save that of wasting time. The bill does not make it legal for a member to accept such a position with impunity. The bill of indemnity is in all cases, a simple statement of the impossibility to make a perfect political constitution. If banks are indemnified for breaking the Bank Act, for the very same reason the Legislature was justified in passing a bill to indemnify Mr. Ferguson. While the bill sanctions a temporary breaking of the law, it is at the same time maintaining the spirit of law.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE MONTREAL GAZETTE has a full column leader on the Honorary Titles question. It looks as if the question was a live one, both here and in Britain. The spirit of exploitation has got into nearly everything and will have to be fought hard if we are to remain a self-respecting people.

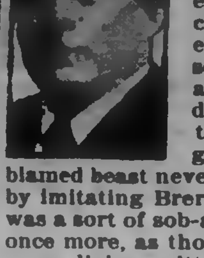
"But I was under the impression that you had died some years ago!"

HARBINGERS

By Walt Mason



The horses shed their winter hair until the stable's full of whiskers; the busy husbandmen repair their cultivators and their diskers. The fireplace now has lost its charm, the rocking chair has lost its splendor, and every man upon the farm is rupturing his best suspender. The hens are cackling every day, with optimism glad and sunny—the same fool hens that wouldn't lay in wintertime, when eggs cost money. The farmer has ten thousand chores, and humps with energy surprising, and everywhere, all out of doors, the gladsome sounds of Spring are rising. The joyous robins and the wrens are warbling in the trees like dingers, and e'en the dippy guinea hens imagine they are concert singers. The old gray mule, which has no voice (although the blamed beast never knew so), attempts to make the world rejoice by imitating Brer Caruso. Old Winter's day at last is o'er—it was a sort of sob-and-sigh day; the world seems fresh and young once more, as though just made and shipped last Friday. And every living critter feels the influence of youth within it, and in the air it kicks its heels, and yells with rapture every minute.

Birthdays of Note

FRIDAY, MARCH TWENTIETH

Lord Somers, who with his brother-in-law, Lord Hyde, is engaged in farming in plebian style near Pickering, Ontario, celebrates his twenty-seventh birthday to-day. This "plowing peer of Pickering" is a very well set-up, plain-living and sensible young man, and among his rural neighbors he dresses and behaves like a thorough-going democrat. Before he succeeded to the barony, he was simply Arthur Herbert Tennyson Cocks, great nephew of the fifth baron. He was a lieutenant in the First Life Guards and at the coronation of the late Edward VII. acted as one of His Majesty's pages. The farming experiment was begun two years ago and is said to be meeting with fair success.

SLANDER AND LIBEL.

The Former Becomes the Latter If You Publish It.

If you ask a lawyer what kind of dispute gives rise to the largest number of contested cases in Britain, apart from ordinary claims for debts, he would probably say libel and slander. Do you know precisely what is the difference between these two things? Very few people seem to have a really clear idea.

Libel and slander have many things in common. Both mean the defamation of character, and both are apt to be very expensive luxuries, but while slander can only be by word of mouth, libel must be written or printed, drawn or painted, or in some similar fashion more permanently recorded. A statue might be a libel—we have seen some that undoubtedly were.

But there are many important distinctions between the two things. Suppose your neighbor has been slandering you, in the way that neighbors have, and you find you are getting the cold shoulder from your best friends. You want to bring an action against the slanderer. What can you prove? You must prove "special damage"—in a slander case, i.e., that you have suffered some pecuniary loss which you can demonstrate to judge and jury. Frequently this is a very difficult matter. But, as with nearly every rule under the sun, this one has some far-reaching exceptions. They fall into four well-defined classes.

Suppose Brown's tongue has been running too fast about your business. You are a grocer, and he says that some of what you sell as sugar come off the beach; or you are a builder, and he goes about telling people that you are buying motorcars out of the profits you make by putting shoddy material into jerry-built houses. This concerns your character in connection with your business, and so you need not prove "special damage." But if Brown merely told people that you rolled home drunk about three nights a week, and were always quarrelling with your unfortunate wife, this would not affect your capacity either as a builder or a grocer, and Brown would be quite safe unless you could prove special damage of some sort. It will easily be seen that it is often very doubtful exactly what affects a man in his business capacity.

Again, if anyone imputes immorality to a woman, there is no need for her to prove special damage (an Act of Parliament expressly provides for this). And slanders to the effect that a person suffers from certain diseases, or has been guilty of a criminal offence, are always, as the lawyer puts it, "actionable without proof of special damage."

Now libel in this respect is quite different. You never need prove special damage in a libel action. And, of course, you have another remedy. You can prosecute the offender. For slander you cannot—that is to say, for ordinary slander on a private person. Prosecution is possible, however, for seditious or blasphemous slanders.

Then there are differences between libel and slander from defendant's point of view. If you are sued for damages for libel or slander, it is a complete answer to show that what you said was true. But if you are prosecuted (for libel) you will not succeed in your defence unless you also show that you published the statement without malice and in the public interest. So you might go to prison for writing the truth, but not for speaking it.

Apple Pie With Whipped Cream.

Line a pie plate with good paste, using a very deep plate, building the crust high around the edge. Cut up sufficient green apples to fill it, heaping a little in the centre. Mix one-half cupful sugar, one-fourth teaspoonful grated nutmeg, one-eighth teaspoonful salt, one teaspoonful lemon juice and a little grated lemon rind and sprinkle this over the apples. Dot with butter, arrange a few strips of pastry lattice fashion over the pie and bake forty to forty-five minutes in a moderate oven. Serve in the plate and with each portion, which should be served in a deep dish, pass the following sauce: One cupful heavy sweet cream whipped stiffly, sweetened with shaved maple sugar and flavored with grated nutmeg. Stir well before serving.

Domesticate Wild Cranes.

Found wild in the forest of Venezuela, the yakamiks, a kind of crane, are readily tamed, becoming valuable servants to the Indians, who domesticate them. Their power of flight is limited, and they seldom attempt any distance in the air. Not only are they intrusted with the care of the flocks, herds and poultry, but they are left as sole guardians of the babies. Certain species of the tribe found in Brazil farther to the south are protected by law because of their recognized value as snake killers.

A Card Trick.

Take an ordinary visiting card and bend it at the ends to make it look like a little stool. Now place it on the table and invite your friends to blow it over. This may seem easy, but they may try in vain to do it. It can be accomplished, however, by blowing sharply on the table itself, at some distance in front of the card, stirring air under it which upsets it.

Swindled.

Collector—H'm, fairly good specimen. I'll give you £50 for it.

Curio Dealer—No, sir. I've sold that for 100 guineas.

Collector—A hundred! Good heavens, you've been swindled. It's worth twice as much!—London Punch.

Tarzan of the Apes

by Edgar Rice Burroughs

Copyright, 1912, by the Frank A. Munsey company.

"Heaven only knows, professor," replied Clayton. "We might have thought the fellow who guided us was lying about the location, but his surprise and consternation on finding no chest beneath the body of Snipes were too real to be feigned.

"And then our spades showed us that something had been buried beneath the corpse, for a hole had been there, and it had been filled with loose earth."

"But who could have taken it?" repeated Professor Porter.

"Suspicion might naturally fall on the men of the cruiser," said Lieutenant Charpentier, "but for the fact that Sublieutenant Janviers here assures me that no men have had shore leave—that none has been on shore since we anchored here except under command of an officer."

"It would never have occurred to me to suspect the men to whom we owe so much," replied Professor Porter. "I would as soon suspect my dear Clayton here or Mr. Philander."

"There must have been several in the party," said Jane Porter, who had joined them. "You remember that it took four men to carry it."

"By Jove!" cried Clayton. "That's right. It must have been done by a party of blacks. Probably one of them saw the men bury the chest and then returned immediately after with a party of his friends and carried it off."

"Speculation is futile," said Professor Porter sadly. "The chest is gone. We shall never see it more nor the treasure that was in it."

Only Jane Porter knew what the loss meant to her father, and none there knew what it meant to her.

Six days later Captain Dufranne announced that they would sail early on the morrow.

Jane Porter would have begged for a further reprieve had it not been that she, too, had begun to believe that her forest lover would return no more.

It was she who suggested that arms, ammunition, supplies and comforts be left behind in the cabin, ostensibly for that intangible personality who had signed himself Tarzan of the apes and for D'Arnot should he still be living, but really, she hoped, for her forest god.

And at the last minute she left a message for him, to be transmitted by Tarzan of the apes.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Outpost of the World.

WITH the report of his gun D'Arnot saw the door fly open and the figure of a man pitch headlong within on to the cabin floor. It was Tarzan.

With a cry of anguish D'Arnot sprang to the ape man's side and, kneeling, lifted the black head in his arms, calling Tarzan's name aloud.

There was no response, and then D'Arnot placed his ear above the man's heart. To his joy he heard its steady beating beneath.

The bullet had struck a glancing blow upon the skull. There was an ugly flesh wound, but no signs of a fracture of the skull beneath.

D'Arnot breathed a sigh of relief and went about bathing the blood from Tarzan's face.

Soon the cool water revived him, and presently he opened his eyes to look in questioning surprise at D'Arnot.

The latter had bound the wound with pieces of cloth, and as he saw that Tarzan had regained consciousness he rose and, going to the table, wrote a message, which he handed to the ape man, explaining the terrible mistake he had made and how thankful he was that the wound was not more serious. Then he handed Tarzan the two messages that had been left for him.

Tarzan read the first one through with a look of sorrow on his face. The second one he turned over and over, searching for an opening. He had never seen a sealed envelope before. At length he handed it to D'Arnot. The latter opened it and handed the letter back to Tarzan.

Sitting on a camp stool, the ape man spread the written sheet before him and read:

> To Tarzan of the Apes:
>
> Before I leave let me add my thanks to those of Mr. Clayton for the kindness you have shown in permitting us the use of your cabin.
>
> That you never came to make friends with us has been a great regret to us. We should have liked so much to see and thank our host.
>
> There is another I should like to thank also, but he did not come back, though I cannot believe that he is dead.
>
> I do not know his name. He is the great white giant who wore the diamond locket upon his breast.
>
> If you know him and can speak his language carry my thanks to him and tell him that I waited seven days for him to return.
>
> Tell him also that in my home in America, in the city of Baltimore, there will always be a welcome for him if he cares to come.
>
> I found a note you wrote me lying among the leaves beneath a tree near the cabin. I do not know how you learned to love me who have never spoken to me, and I am very sorry if it is true, for I have already given my heart to another.
>
> But I know that I am always your friend. JANE PORTER.

Tarzan sat with gaze upon the floor for nearly an hour. It was evident to him from the notes that they did not know that he and Tarzan of the apes were one and the same.

"I have given my heart to another," he repeated over and over again to himself.

For a week they did little but rest. Meanwhile D'Arnot coached Tarzan in French. At the end of that time the two men could converse quite easily.

One night as they were sitting within the cabin before retiring Tarzan turned to D'Arnot.

"Where is America?" he said.

D'Arnot pointed toward the northwest.

"Many thousands of miles across the ocean," he replied. "Why?"

"I am going there."

D'Arnot shook his head.

"It is impossible, my friend," he said.

Tarzan thought for a long time.

"Do any white men live in Africa?" he asked.

"Yes."

"We shall go there tomorrow," announced Tarzan.

Again D'Arnot smiled and shook his head.

"It is too far. We should die long before we reached them."

"Do you wish to stay here, then, forever?" asked Tarzan.

"No," said D'Arnot.

"Then we shall start tomorrow. I do not like it here longer. I should rather die than remain here."

"Well," answered D'Arnot with a shrug, "I do not know, my friend, but that I also would rather die than remain here. If you go I shall go with you."

"It is settled then," said Tarzan. "I shall start for America tomorrow."

"How will you get to America without money?" asked D'Arnot.

"What is money?" inquired Tarzan.

It took a long time to make him understand.

"How do men get money?" he asked at last.

"They work for it."

"Very well. I will work for it."

"No, my friend," returned D'Arnot, "you need not worry about money, nor need you work for it. I have enough for two, enough for twenty, much more than is good for one man, and you shall have all you need if ever we reach civilization."

So on the following day they started north along the shore. Each man carried a carbine and ammunition, besides bedding and some food and cooking utensils.

The latter seemed to Tarzan a most useless encumbrance, so he threw his away.

"But you must learn to eat cooked food, my friend," remonstrated D'Arnot. "No civilized men eat raw flesh."

"There will be time enough when I reach civilization," said Tarzan. "I do not like the things, and they only spoil the taste of good meat."

For days they traveled north, sometimes finding food in plenty and again going hungry for days.

They saw no signs of natives, nor were they molested by wild beasts. Their journey was a miracle of ease.

Tarzan asked questions and learned rapidly. D'Arnot taught him many of the refinements of civilization, even to the use of knife and fork, but sometimes Tarzan would drop them in disgust and grasp his food in his strong brown hands, tearing it with his molars like a wild beast.

Then D'Arnot would expostulate with him, saying:

"You must not eat like a brute, Tarzan, while I am trying to make a gentleman of you."

On the journey he told D'Arnot about the great chest he had seen the sailors bury and how he had dug it up and carried it to the gathering place of the apes and buried it there.

"It must be the treasure chest of Professor Porter," said D'Arnot. "It is too bad, but, of course, you did not know."

Then Tarzan recalled the letter written by Jane Porter to her friend, the one he had stolen when they first came to his cabin, and now he knew what was in the chest and what it meant to Jane Porter.

"Tomorrow we shall go back after it," he announced to D'Arnot. "You may go on toward civilization, and I will return for the treasure. I can go very much faster alone."

"I have a better plan, Tarzan," exclaimed D'Arnot. "We shall go on together to the nearest settlement, and there we will charter a boat and sail back down the coast for the treasure. That will be safer and quicker and also not require us to be separated. What do you think of that plan?"

"Very well," said Tarzan. "The treasure will be there whenever we go for it, and while I could fetch it now and catch up with you in a moon or two I shall feel safer for you to know that you are not alone on the trail."

In one of his talks with D'Arnot Tarzan mentioned Kala, his ape "mother."

"Then you knew your mother, Tarzan?" asked D'Arnot in surprise.

"Yes. She was a great, fine ape, larger than I and weighing twice as much."

"And you also knew your father?" asked D'Arnot.

"I did not know him. Kala told me he was a white ape and hairless like myself. I know now that he must have been a white man."

D'Arnot looked long and earnestly at his companion.

"Tarzan," he said at length, "it is impossible that the ape, Kala, was your mother. You are pure man and, I should say, the offspring of highly bred and intelligent parents. Have you not the slightest clew to your past?"

"Not the slightest," replied Tarzan.

"No writing in the cabin that might have told something of the lives of its original inmates?"

CALAIS TO BAGDAD.

New Route Across the Near East Alters the Map.

It will be possible, in a comparatively short time, to travel by rail (with the exception of the short breaks at Calais and Constantinople) from London to Bagdad, or from the New Babylon to the ruins of the Old. What a wonderful prospect is opened out to the imagination by this latest feat of modern engineering.

The Twentieth Century tourist will soon be able to reach the Holy Land and to traverse some of the most historically interesting country in the world, in comfort, and even luxury. He can cross the Euphrates, pass the alleged site of the Garden of Eden, and traversing Mesopotamia and the Tigris Valley, pass near the ruins of ancient Nineveh, finishing his journey in Bagdad, the city of the Arabian Nights.

The European part of the journey, which terminates at Constantinople, is, of course, nowadays a commonplace of travel. The new railway to Bagdad begins across the Bosphorus at Scutari in Asia Minor. The line is being constructed by German engineers and from German material. The capital, in the form of loans amounting to $50,000,000, has been provided by German banks. The Turkish Government has given guarantees for this amount, having agreed to pay interest upon it, and finally to redeem it. Turkey is also pledged to guarantee a further $50,000,000 to complete the undertaking and to make good any loss incurred in running the railway.

The enterprise may be divided into four sections, the first extending from Scutari through Konia to Adana; the second from Adana to Aleppo; the third from Aleppo to Mosul on the Tigris, and the fourth from Mosul to Bagdad.

From Scutari the railway runs over a populous and fertile plain to Konia. The section stretching from Konia (ancient Iconium, said to be the first place to emerge after the Deluge) to Adana, which includes the crossing of the Tauras Mountains, provides many difficult problems for the engineers. There are numerous deep chasms, and no fewer than thirty-five costly bridges and viaducts of varying dimensions were found necessary to span them. For hundreds of miles the track follows one of the most ancient highways in the world. Along this historic road from the Orient to Europe passed such world famous figures as Xenophon, Cyrus, Alexander the Great, and St. Paul.

After crossing the Taurus range the line descends to the Cicilian Plains and to Tarsus, the birthplace of St. Paul. Once a seaport, it is now several miles inland, and the centre of a busy cotton-growing country. After crossing the plains the engineers were faced by the Amanus range, which was pierced by a tunnel six miles long, emerging at Mosselmieh, whence train can be taken southwards to Aleppo and Palestine, or eastward to Mesopotamia.

Aleppo, in Northern Syria, once a sleepy old-world Eastern city, has been converted into a great railway-building centre. It is the real base of operations for the Bagdad Railway, and huge quantities of railway-building material have been collected there. Locomotive works and repair shops have been erected, as also temporary barracks for the large army of workmen employed in the construction of the line.

During the building of the Aleppo section five hospitals were established, with ten doctors and an equal number of nurses to attend to all cases of accident and sickness among the workers, free of charge. At Aleppo nowadays all is bustle and activity. Trainloads of material arrive daily, over the railway built by the French, from the Syrian port of Tripoli.

Bavarian Distances.

In the Bavarian highlands signposts along the roads, instead of stating the number of miles or kilometers to the various villages, give the amount of time which the average pedestrian will supposedly take to traverse the distance. This is merely an official expression of the very general custom of the peasants in the region, who invariably tell inquirers on the roads not how far it is to a place, but how long it takes to get there.

For instance, one asks, "How far is it to Oberammergau?"

"A small half hour," will be the answer, or perhaps "A good half hour" or "A big half hour."

Which is puzzling until the stranger learns that a "small half hour" means twenty-five minutes, "a good half hour" thirty minutes and "a big half hour" thirty-five minutes.

Qualified to Paint Him.

Ambrose Patterson, the Australian painter, secured a commission once to paint a very lengthy and wealthy suburbanite. Patterson himself is a lank brush, shooting up beyond six foot one inch. He was rather priding himself on having been given this commission, bearing in mind the great pressure of artists round every possible job in Australia. Eventually, however, the sitter explained. "I was a long time lookin' for a sootable hartist," he said. "I'm six foot two an' a 'arf, and till I struck you I 'adn't seen a painter what 'ad enough 'ight to do a full length of me."—Argonaut.

Charges.

"Your lawyer made some pretty severe charges against the other fellow, didn't he?"

"Y-e-s, but you ought to see how he charged me!"

There is a sufficient recompense in the very consciousness of a noble deed. —Cicero.

ONTARIO WOMEN IN WHITE SLAVE CASES

Detroit, March 20.—Among 39 indictments returned by the United States grand jury which concluded a week's session here yesterday, are three Canadian white slave cases. Robert S. McKirdy is charged with bringing Margaret Louise Lockridge from Wingham, Ont., George Turcott is said to have come from Toronto with Henrietta Foley, and Joseph Dice is alleged to have brought Minnie Cross from Hamilton.

Three Canadian women, Margaret Rankin, Jennie Beatty and Annie Neubauer, were indicted for returning to the United States after having been deported as undesirables, and George La Tour, John R. Rodgers and Lee Foy, of Windsor, were indicted for smuggling Chinese across the border.

INVITE HUERTA TO NEGOTIATE FOR TERMS

Overtures From Factions in Mexico Will be Welcome

Washington, March 20.—The United States Government will welcome a re-opening of negotiations with the Huerta Government or the constitutionalists and will be glad to consider any proposal that will tend to draw the various factions together into a plan for the restoration of peace in Mexico.

This is the attitude of President Wilson as it was revealed yesterday after reports reached here saying Senor Portillo y Rojas, minister for foreign affairs in the Huerta cabinet, had gone to meet John Lind, Mr. Wilson's personal representative, to seek a resumption of peace parleys. Senor Rojas has been mentioned as the man who would succeed Huerta if he retired, and the object of the visit to Mr. Lind, it has been reported, was to acquaint the president's envoy with his personality. Incidentally, the president in talking with callers to-day, while remarking that he had no official report of any new parleys, spoke in complimentary terms of the Mexican minister of foreign affairs as a man of high character.

REFORESTRATION IN TRENT CANAL DISTRICT

Ottawa, March 20.—If a recommendation of the Commission of Conservation is acted upon the Provincial Government will take over the forestry in the Trent Valley. An investigation made by the engineers of the commission shows that reforestration is greatly needed as well as protection of the forests from annual fire losses. It has been established that forest growths have a decided effect upon precipitation and this in turn effects the water supply of the canal. It is suggested that the area be taken over either by the province alone or in co-operation with the municipalities.

GROWTH IS REPORTED FOR ORANGE LODGES

Lindsay, March 20.—The annual convention of the Orange Grand Lodge of Ontario East makes rapid progress in their work. Grand Master Ford's address was a spirited and exhaustive one. After referring to the progress of the order and his official visits to the several lodges within his jurisdiction, he continued regarding bilingual schools:

"But one glaring fact stands out, namely, that bilingual schools, which formerly were only tolerated, have now a legal standing. But as your Committee on Legislation will no doubt present its report to R. W. Grand Lodge, I will not anticipate that report by any further remarks other than to say that in the interest of education and for the general welfare of this province, the sooner bilingual schools are suppressed and bilingual teaching totally eliminated, the sooner will we have peace and harmony, instead of discord and bitterness. 'Away with bilingualism in every form' should be the slogan of Britishers in the English-speaking provinces of the Dominion."

Lord Erne, Grand Master of Grand Orange Lodge of Ireland, sent fraternal greetings, and asked the brethren to stand firm on Home Rule.

The Grand Secretary's report showed an increase in the jurisdiction of Ontario East of 254 members. There are 24 county lodges, 82 district lodges, and 405 primary lodges, with a total membership of 16,478. Eight new primary lodges were instituted during the year.

Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, addressed the Grand Lodge yesterday morning.

ODDFELLOWS' FIELD NIGHT

Visiting Lodges Were Entertained and Degrees Conferred

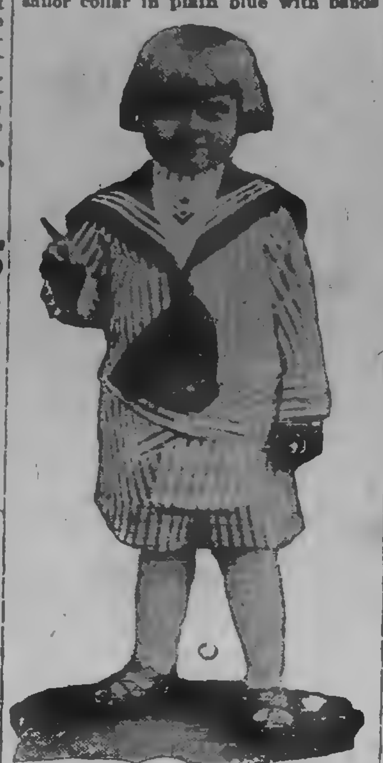
Field night was fittingly observed by the Peterborough Oddfellows last evening, when lodges from Havelock, Pontypool, Millbrook, Lakefield, Norwood and representatives from the outlying districts were entertained. The various degrees were also conferred upon a number of the visitors.

After the business part of the evening was completed the gathering sat down to a sumptuous repast in the spacious dining hall of the lodge room. Mr. R. Martin presided. Speeches were made by Messrs. Puffer, Chant, Kelly, Dr. Morrison and His Worship Mayor Buller.

ATTRACTIVE SUIT.

A Serviceable Garment For the Little Man.

A utility suit for the tiny boy is shown here. It is in blue and white striped washable fabric with a wide sailor collar in plain blue with bands of white braid. The blouse is given a long waisted appearance by means of the belt of the material crossed in the front.



BLUE AND WHITE SUIT.

THE LADY EXPLAINED.

Then He Probably Smiled, but It Must Have Been a Sickly Effort.

A woman with fifteen bundles boarded the street car the other afternoon when I was on my way to my suburban residence. She was a very pretty young woman. I felt sorry for her. She was returning from a shopping tour. Being a man with a kind heart, I helped her upon the car and piled her bundles about her. A man got on at the same time and took a seat on the other side of the young lady.

When the car came to my street I was surprised to see her rise and begin to pick up her bundles. Instantly my sense of chivalry prompted me to help her off the car, and, as I was going in the same direction, I asked permission to carry her fifteen bundles. The man got off also and started on ahead.

I was loaded down like a camel crossing the desert. In those packages she had everything from an electric flatiron to a five pound bag of prunes. We trudged along about a half mile. The man turned in at a gate.

When we reached this gate the young lady thanked me and said: "This is as far as I go. I live here. Thank you very much."

"But the man ahead of us, the man who came out on the car with us, turned in here too."

"Yes," she said. "He is my husband, but he hates to carry packages through the street."—Brooklyn Eagle.

FIFTY PERSONS DROWNED WHEN STEAMER GOES DOWN

MANY WERE WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Venice, March 20.—A torpedo boat to-day cut down a small passenger steamer which plies between Venice and Lido, a chain of sandy islands separating the Lagoon of Venice from the Adriatic, and 50 persons were drowned. The sharp nose of the torpedo boat went through the stern of the steamer, which sank almost immediately. The victims included many women and children.

DICKENS' ROMANCE.

His Early Love, Who Jilted Him, and Her Pathetic End.

The story of how Charles Dickens was jilted is particularly interesting. When he was eighteen Dickens became acquainted with the three daughters of George Beadnell, a Lombard street banker. With one of them, Maria (the original of Dora in "David Copperfield"), who was a year his senior, he immediately fell in love, and Maria flirted with him very desperately. But the love making of the future novelist was not treated very seriously, for he was not considered by any means an eligible party, and even Maria herself adopted an attitude of amused tolerance.

For three years the affair went on, and then Dickens realized that his case was hopeless. He pleaded in vain with the girl, whose caprices maddened and gladdened him alternately, for, as a matter of fact, Maria Beadnell was a willful coquette. The end of it all was a reply that held out no hope, and so the parting came. For twenty years they saw no more of one another.

Ultimately Maria Beadnell was married to Henry Louis Winter, and when Dickens met her again time had wrought sad havoc on his youthful ideal. Mrs. Winter wrote to her old lover, but Dickens did not care to renew a correspondence with his old sweetheart. Then Mr. Winter failed, and the chagrined wife appealed to the lover of her girlhood for help, but without avail, and the romance ended long before the death of Dickens in 1870.—Exchange.

Hospitality.

The appetite of the guest was a keen one, and he was doing full justice to the excellent dinner provided by his host. The little daughter of the house watched him open mouthed for awhile. Then finally she smiled on him brightly and said:

"Oh, I do wish you were here to dinner every day!"

The guest beamed with satisfaction.

"Do you, my dear? Why?" he inquired.

"Because," came the unexpected reply, "there won't be anything cold to eat tomorrow."—London Tit-Bits.

Discipline.

"How do you get your constituents so thoroughly accustomed to implicit reliance on your word?"

"Well," replied Senator Sorghum, "I made 'em understand at the outset that if they didn't accept my statements they'd have to listen to a long string of statistics.—Washington Post.

Wasted Effort.

"He never spanks his son, does he?"

"No; he's an efficiency crank."

"What's that got to do with it?"

"He says the upward stroke is lost motion."—Houston Post.

Indignant Denial.

"Prisoner, have you any collateral about you?"

"No, sah; an' dat man's a liar what said I eveh done tached any."—Baltimore American.

TIME DRAWS NEAR IN BIG CONTEST

Review's Contest is Getting Nearer the End Every Day Get Busy.

Another day of this great enterprise has slipped away. What have you done? Benefited by it? Or are you like the person who said, I will wait until to-morrow, and that same person found out to his sorrow that to-morrow never came. So will it be with you, candidates. Every day lost now can never be regained during this contest. Better make use of every minute that is left and in the end reap the rewards that are in store for you. Do not overlook anyone. There are plenty of subscriptions left. A great many of your friends at some point of the contest have promised to help you. Go to them now and show them what it means to you to get their subscription.

What Candidate Had to Say.

Not long ago in another contest a candidate came into the office and sat down and was telling how many votes he had and that nobody could catch up to him. The contest manager told him that he should work right up to the last minute, that he was too confident, and how overconfidence has often lost many a battle. He could not see it that way, as he said that he knew the auto was his. He was so sure of it that he did not work as hard as he should, and on the closing night he found himself the winner of a gold watch instead of the automobile.

Do not be like this person, candidates. Make yourself believe that you need every vote that you can possibly get, and you will be rewarded in the end.

OPENING UP A NEW COUNTRY

The opening up of the new territory traversed by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway between McBride, B.C., 1135 miles west of Winnipeg, and Prince George, B.C., 1279 miles west of Winnipeg, is developing the important discovery that the district in that part of British Columbia is well timbered with spruce and much good cedar. The country is fairly level, and the timber is probably the finest anywhere along the Fraser River. West of Willow River, an important townsite, settlers have already established themselves and reports indicate that there is a large area suitable for settlers in the Salmon River country west of Willow River. There are not more than two or three outcroppings of rock all the way from McBride to Prince George, and when the timber is removed, the soil will be found very rich and highly productive, and this section will become a very important one in time. An estimate of the land available for agricultural purposes within four miles on each side of the railway would be approximately 75,000 acres, but this amount will be very much exceeded if the country continues similar for a further distance from the railway. This feature is being developed as surveys are made. From a scenic point of view, from McBride to Hansard, a distance of about 100 miles, the mountains are always in view, extending on both sides of the Fraser River with a pleasing softness to them, which resembles the Skeena River district to some extent. The Caribou Range, at about 1150 miles west of Winnipeg, gives promise of offering to the mountain climber and explorer as many attractions as any other range in the Rockies or Selkirks. Many of these mountains are snow-clad and glacier capped throughout the summer.

OSHKIGMONG

Oshkimong, March 20.—The box social held last Saturday night under the auspices of the Chemong Sunday School, was a success. There was an excellent programme rendered by the members of the Sunday School.

Mr. Zack Knott has gone to Rama to see his daughter, who is very sick.

The Indian Agent, Mr. R. J. McCamus, of Keene, was here last week on business.

Dr. Blakenman, of Lakefield, is quite busy looking after the sick here.

Stella, a grand-daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Whetung, has been seriously ill, but hopes are entertained for her recovery.

Mrs. George McCue, John J. David, and Albert Whetung are on the sick list.

Miss Lillian Taylor is home from Peterboro for a few days.

The snow is fast disappearing these last few days.

Abram Taylor and family have moved into their hunting ground.

Mrs. R. Franklin, sr., of Alderville, is here staying with her daughter, Mrs. Albert Whetung.

The numerical attendance of the Sunday School has so increased that two more teachers have been added to the staff. The newly appointed teachers are Mr. and Mrs. John Tobico.

Mrs. John Taylor, who has been sick a long time, is quite poorly yet.

Miss Lovenia Whetung is on the sick list just now. We hope she will get better soon.

Mr. Henry Taylor has tendered his resignation as sexton and caretaker. Henry has faithfully discharged the duties for six years, and will be missed very much.

THE MINAKI INN

At Minaki, Ontario, a point 115 miles east of Winnipeg, there is being built by the Grand Trunk Pacific for the health and pleasure seekers of the West, the Minaki Inn and Annex. It is expected that the hotel will be ready for the reception of guests by the opening of the summer. The park in which the buildings stand, though beautiful by day, will be converted into a fairyland by night, the grounds being illuminated with electric lights placed in the most attractive schemes. Minaki is situated on the Winnipeg river, about 115 miles east of Winnipeg. It is expected that the Dominion Government will make extensive improvements about the water front and at present a large number of cottages are in course of construction, and others will be erected in the early spring.

The Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America won a victory in the Federal Court at New York which, according to its officers, gives the company almost complete control of the field of wireless telegraphy.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Bronchitis.

The cause of bronchitis is the effort of the organism to establish an additional channel of depuration for the removal of an excess of waste which the eliminative organs—skin, lungs, bowels and kidneys—have been unable to carry off. Medicinal treatment of this condition is most unsatisfactory.

It is, however, very tractable when treated by hygienic methods. This method of treatment is to limit the amount of food taken and to accelerate the depurating function. A fast or a restricted diet will accomplish the first. The Turkish or vapor bath, free water drinking and deep breathing will accomplish the second.

The value of deep breathing in bronchitis is not generally appreciated. The lungs present a thousand square feet of surface, and their depurating power is enormous. The following exercises, taken out of doors or in a well ventilated room, will be found a most valuable factor in the treatment:

Stand erect, weight forward, head and chest up. Take slowly a full, deep breath. Then, without retaining it, exhale gently until the lungs are as nearly empty as possible. Do this from four to ten times, depending upon your strength, and repeat every hour if possible.

LOST AT SEA.

Amazing Mysteries and Weird Disappearances on the Ocean.

If the ocean has its mysteries, so has the ship that rides it, and which furnishes the more baffling puzzles would be difficult to determine.

Ships leave ports and are never seen nor heard of again, and—in some respects more inexplicable still—passengers board vessels and suddenly forever vanish from human ken.

The strange disappearance of Dr. Diesel, the famous inventor, is a case in point which must be fresh in everybody's mind.

One day recently, it will be remembered, Dr. Diesel left Antwerp on board one of the Great Eastern Railway Company's steamers for Harwich, whence he proposed journeying to London to keep an important business engagement. On board the steamer the doctor appeared to be in the best of health and spirits, and at 10 p.m. retired to his cabin for the night.

Next morning he was nowhere to be found, and the mystery of his disappearance remains still unsolved.

Again, not many months ago, the steamship Baldor, on arrival in the Firth of Forth from Gothenburg, had a queer story to unfold through the mouth of her skipper.

It concerned the uncanny disappearance of a second-class lady passenger. The last that was seen of her was late at night, when one of the stewardesses noticed her pacing the deck. The vessel was then in the North Sea.

Afterwards this passenger's berth was found to be unoccupied, and not only the lady, but her baggage, consisting of a bag, had vanished. Where and how nobody knows.

Could anything be more baffling than the following? It occurred on board a steamer between Leith and Orkney. Among the passengers were two sisters, who were traveling to attend the funeral of a third sister.

When off Bell Lighthouse one of the ladies retired to her bunk, the other, as the night was fine, preferring to remain a little longer on deck. That was the last that was seen of her.

Another amazing incident was that reported by the captain of a Dutch steamer, the Van Noort, on his arrival at Singapore. The parties immediately concerned were three sisters of German nationality, who were passengers aboard, and had been touring in Java.

After having spent the evening on deck, chatting and reading, they were seen one night going to their cabin about ten o'clock. Next morning the attendant could get no answer to his knocks at the cabin door, and, on an entry being made, the room was found to be empty.

On the table was a note addressed to the captain, which briefly stated that he was to have their baggage, and on a desk there was a bottle containing a few drops of chloroform. From this it was conjectured that the three sisters had each taken chloroform, and then climbed through the porthole into the sea!

The Swedish steamer Torhild has foundered off the Spanish coast with a loss of ten lives. The Torhild was built in 1877.

A convention has opened in the capital of China to amend the Republican constitution.

BROTHER GARDNER

Philosophizes on the Troubles of the Great.

A GREAT MAN HIMSELF

But There Are Two Sides to Every Picture, and, Like Washington and Shakespeare, He Has Woes of His Own Which People Little Suspect.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

"IT has come to my knowledge," said Brother Gardner as he rose up in the meeting of the Limekiln club—"it has come to my knowledge dat sartin members of dis club am a-sighin' to be great. Dey want $7,000 autos and silver plated coal scuttles. Dey want people to look after dem in de street, and dey want deir servants to shiber wid fear when dey open de doah.

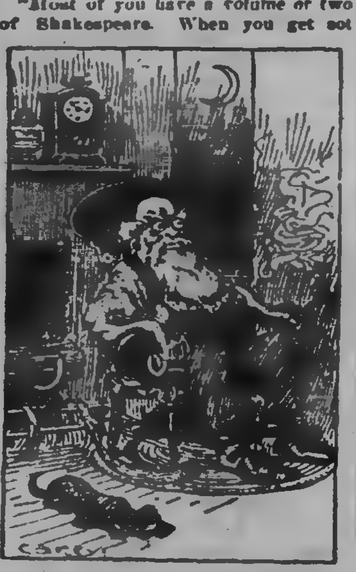
"Dar may be some among you who don't know what greatness am, and I will explain dat it am money—cash, dough. When you've got wealth you kin go into a place and order ice cream frosted cake and not fear de boot when it comes to settlin' de bill. Eberybody in dis world, wid few exceptions, am strivin' fur wealth. Dey am thinkin' of dollars when dey ris up in de mawnin' and when dey lay down at night.

"I see befo' me in imaginashun a great man. He smokes ten cent cigars; he rents a box at de postoffice. If de grocer comes around and says de bill is $2.40 it am paid on de spot, and he am told dat if he sends up any mo' wilted peas he will lose de great man's custom. De great man don't have to worry about coal and taxes. He don't have to watch fur bargains sales to git a suit of clothes. He kin buy ten pairs of shoestrings to once, and he needn't worry about de street car conductor beatin' him out of a nickel.

"Take George Washington, for instance. Ebery picture you see of him looks as complacent and smilin' as if he had won a prize in a lottery.

"Turn de picture ober and gaze on de other side. Do you imagine dat de frost didn't kill his cowcumber vines? Dat de hawgs didn't bust deir way into his garden? Dat de ager didn't shake his bones and make his teeth chatter? Dat de crows didn't scratch up his co'n, and de cull'd populashun walk off wid watermillyons? He found buttons off his shirts; he found lumps in his bed; he found de hired gal usin his toothbrush. Of co'se he saved de kentry, but he had to pay for it jest de same.

"Most of you have a volume or two of Shakespeare. When you get sot down in de rockin' cheer, pipe in hand and de wind's howlin' around outside, dat poetry reads so sleek and slick dat you can't imagine any trubbles comin' to de men who made it. It's jest like holdin' a jug of 'lasses up to your mouth as you sit on a log in de sunshine and lettin' de sweet stuff slide down your throat. You can't possibly think of Shakespeare and back rent in de same minit.



"IN DE OLE ROCKIN' CHEER."

"And yet, my frens, how did de great man lib? De constable was arter him from Monday mawnin' to Saturday night. He was in debt whereber dey would trust him. If dere was a cold snap he was out of wood. If dere was a hot wave he had no white pants to wear, bekase de washwoman wouldn't come to de house until she was paid what was comin' to her.

Some Personal Afflictions.

"Let us come down to my own case. You see me walkin' along de street wid my plug hat on and my snuff brown suit and gold headed cane. My stomach is puffed out. I am lookin' straight ahead of me wid de utmost dignity. I look to eberybody like a great man on his way down to de bank to get a check cashed.

"And yet, my frens, gaze on de other side of de pictur'. I's got a sore throat. I's got two more co'ns. De cold got into my cellar and frostbit my 'taters. My cat has jest died, and my dawg run away. I has got two lawsuits on hand, and my old mewl is standin' in de shed so sick dat I expect to find him a corpse when I get home. You see greatness befo' you, but you don't see de trubbles dat I have to pass frew.

"It am all right to sigh for greatness, but greatness has got to pay de butcher and grocer same as other folks. Greatness in itself am all right, but don't imagine it's all gwine to be circus and pickin' up diamonds."

Woman's World

A Woman Head of New York's Department of Correction.

MISS KATHERINE B. DAVIS

Miss Katherine B. Davis, LL. D. and the bearer of many other honorary titles, has been appointed head of the department of correction in New York city. Miss Davis has been in charge of Bedford reformatory for several years. There she instituted many successful reforms and is recognized as one of the leading authorities on prisons and the reform of prisoners.

She was born in Rochester, N. Y., educated in the public schools there and after graduation taught a country school and saved money enough to pay her own way through Vassar college. She graduated at the head of her class and with such honors that the New England Association For the Higher Education of Women chose her for their European scholarship. Three years were spent at the University of Berlin and at Leipzig and one was spent in studying sociological problems in Bohemia, where she wrote much for the Journal of Sociology.

As commissioner of corrections Miss Davis will have charge of the Tombs, the seven district prisons in Manhattan, the penitentiary at Blackwell's island, the workhouse on Riker's island, the New York City Reformatory of Male Misdemeanants on Hart's island and the city prisons in Brooklyn and Queens.

Miss Davis has been active in the work of the Rockefeller bureau of social hygiene.

She studied sociology both in Germany and at Chicago university because of her interest in the practical problem, What shall be done with vicious and criminal women? She took up reform work a dozen years ago, inspired by enthusiasm and equipped by special study. Her enthusiasm communicated itself to her assistants, and the atmosphere at Bedford reformatory is one of mutual helpfulness and inspiring hopefulness. Miss Davis sets the girls to work, and their teachers work with them. They do the gardening, put in the ice, care for the lawns, raise the pigs and run the dairy.

In the last year they have redeemed a swamp of some five acres, turning the stream which watered it into a new channel, draining the land and planting it with vegetables.

When Miss Davis wanted some concrete walks laid and had scraped together enough money to buy the materials she called her girls together, and they went out and tucked up their skirts and made concrete walks.

Miss Davis' theory of reforming delinquents is simple, but, so far as one can judge by the results obtained at Bedford, effective.

"Make them happy," she said recently, "and the rest is easy. Virtue is largely a product of contentment, as vice is of discontent and mental depression, which often, of course, come from lack of proper means of sustenance. Make girls happy and you have taken the first and longest step toward making them good."

SPRING COATS.

Interesting Predictions by a Fashion Authority.

"The shortening of the coat length is noticeable," says the Dry Goods Economist. "The new coats average not shorter than thirty-six inches. For later use it is expected that many will be considerably shorter than this. Fancy silk coats coming just below the waist line are being shown by many of the larger coat houses.

"The flare coat is still causing considerable thought to manufacturers and to retailers. While those who study styles hold that the flare coat is the big new idea of the season, they realize that many women will, as usual, be slow in accepting such a complete change in style and that more conservative garments will have to be brought out to meet the general demand.

"The coat that is cut on similar lines to the English garment worn by some of the smartly dressed men in New York is being shown in many of the houses. This new woman's garment is made of black and white check or of mannish worsted and is so tailored as to carry out the idea of a man's overcoat as closely as possible. Some manufacturers have already done a large business on these coats.

"In some cases this coat has a considerable flare at the bottom, while in others it is of a modified character."

The deeper a man is in debt the less he cares for expenses.

TORONTOS WIN THIRD GAME AND THE STANLEY CUP

Third Straight Win for Blue Shirts Was Rough Engagement

Toronto, March 20.—Torontos won the third and last Stanley Cup "battle" from Victoria at the Arena last night, and are therefore holders of the famous battered cup for the year 1914-15. It was originally advertised as a game, but there was little evidence of hockey, the players devoting most of their time to rough play. The final score was 2 to 1, and was somewhat of a surprise. It was considered that Torontos would win away off. Last night's game was played under N. H. A. rules, with the western penalty system.

The lack of goals can be attributed to the rough play which predominated throughout. Both teams used the crudest of methods to break up their opponents' attacks. As a consequence the man with the puck was generally sent sprawling before he had a chance to shoot. While the rough play was evenly divided, Poulin, the chunky Frenchman of the visitors, stirred up all the trouble. Right from the start he hooked, tripped and slashed. Torontos did not take kindly to his work, and retaliated. Before the game was over the players on both teams, with the exception of the goaltenders, let hockey go, and contented themselves with waiting a chance to give and take with an opponent.

Victoria Showed Improvement.

Victoria played much better last night than they did in their former games, and had easily as much of the play as the Torontos. Their entire forward line, with the exception of Poulin, displayed more speed and better judgment in handling the puck when close in on the nets, and Holmes was given plenty to do. As in the other games, his work was good throughout, but he did not overshadow Lindsay, who played his best game of the series.

The Victoria forwards checked back well, and this, with the rough work close in on the goal, prevented the light Toronto attack from shooting as much as usual. Foyston and Wilson were tireless workers, but had little chance against the heavy play of the husky Victoria defense. They never gave in, however, and at the end forced the play. Davidson, who was unable to play on Tuesday on account of illness, replaced Wilson several times last night and, when he was not roughing it with his opponents, did some good rushing. He showed little effects of his recent illness, and used his weight to good advantage on several occasions.

The teams:

Victoria—Goal, Lindsay; point, Genge; cover point, Patrick; centre, Dunderdale; left, Kerr; right, Poulin.

BASEBALL

Boston, March 20.—Joe Wood, crack pitcher of the Boston Americans, who was operated on for appendicitis at his home in Pennsylvania recently, will join the Red Sox in spring training at Hot Springs Ark., next Wednesday, according to a despatch received from there. It was said that while he would be able to pitch the opening game of the season, he would not be called upon probably before May 1.

"Hoops" Hooper, the former Senators' catcher, wants to get back to Ottawa, but with Lake and Petie Powers the Senators have no use for him. Hooper was with the Indianapolis Federals last summer, but isn't fast enough for them this year. He has a good arm, but is too slow on the bases and not a quick enough thinker for the champs. Hooper may be sold to some other Canadian League team by the Fort Wayne club.

Fred Bramble, who was drafted by Fort Wayne from the Berlin club last fall, has been suspended by the former club. Bramble refused to sign a contract until given a better salary, and when March 1 rolled around he was automatically put under suspension according to minor league rules.

It is said that Montreal will be found in the Canadian League next year. The Royals have been a losing proposition in the International on account of the high salaries and long jumps, but in the Canadian they would probably be a success.

All the Canadian League clubs will have playing managers. Doc. Yates will pitch for Hamilton, and Rube Deneau will twirl for London. Frank Shaughnessy and Curley Blount will decorate the outfield, while Eddie Holly will play shortstop. Doc Reisling will pitch and George Smith will play second base, while Midge Craven will look after the right field duties for St. Thomas Saints.

EARL HARTMAN.

The youngster whom "Old Folks" Templin tried out and later released has been picked up again by Manager Blount. Hartman played good ball at times, and it is possible that by careful handling, he will make good with the 1914 Petes.

Her Opportunity.

"How old do you think I am, Mr. Bunk?"

"Whatever it is, Miss Clara, you do not look it."

"And I feel younger every year."

"You must be getting ready for the census."

Not So Bloody.

"Mad, is she? Well, it depends on whose ox is gored."

"'Twasn't no ox."

"Wasn't it?"

"No; 'twas a shirt waist."

Small Trick.

"Is he a handy man?"

"He must be."

"Why so?"

"I have often seen him make a mountain out of a molehill."

Planked Fodder.

"Going down to Atlantic City."

"What is the attraction?"

"Board is cheap."

"But what kind?"

"Board walk."

BERT LINDSAY.
In the nets for the Victorias.

A Stumper.

A club of eccentric young men had for one of their rules that on Tuesday evenings any man who asked a question in the clubrooms which he was unable to answer himself, should pay a fine of $10.

One evening McLoughlin asked the following:

"Why doesn't a ground squirrel leave any dirt around the top of his hole when he digs it?"

After some deliberation McLoughlin was called upon to answer his own question. "That's easy," said he; "the squirrel starts at the bottom and digs up."

"All very nice," suggested a member, "but how does he get to the bottom?"

"Well," answered McLoughlin, "that's your question."

Period of Most Intellectual Vigor.

Recent medical statistics as to the age when man has the most intellectual vigor give interesting results. It is from forty to fifty-six that the most brilliant things have been accomplished by the majority of humans.

Chemists and physicians have made brilliant discoveries at forty. Poets have accomplished masterpieces at forty-four, and novelists two years later. Famous warriors average forty-seven; musicians are most brilliant at forty-eight and actors at the same age. Moralists are greatest at fifty-one, politicians at fifty-three, humorists at fifty-six, thus demonstrating that the last thing one learns is how to amuse one's fellows.

The Ten Greatest Inventions.

"What are the ten greatest inventions of our time?" asked a scientific journal recently. It awarded the prize to the contestant sending this list. The electric furnace, the steam turbine, the gasoline automobile, the moving pictures, the aeroplane, wireless telegraphy, the cyanide process, the induction motor, the linotype, the electric welding process. And all this was accomplished in a quarter century. Power asks, Can you name off hand seven of the inventors?

Advice to His Doctor.

M. de Calonne, one of the last Ministers of Finance of Louis XVI., in his last illness asked for a pencil and wrote down the following words for the benefit of the doctor who attended him: "Docteur, vous m'avez assassine! Si vous etes un honnete homme, renonces a la medicine pour jamais" (Doctor, you have murdered me. If you are an honest man, give up the practice of medicine forever).

John Bunyan.

Among the great reformers of the world the only red-headed one is said to have been John Bunyan.

Truth.

Some people think truth, like rubber, will go farther if stretched.

Clever.

"He always makes a good beginning."

"Every time."

"Considering that well begun is half done, why then do you say that he is no good?"

"Because he always does somebody on the strength of his beginning and skips."

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

IT all depends. The workingman is lauded for trying to avoid poverty, and the burglar is jailed for the same thing.

Probably if we were permitted to choose and approve our neighbors they would turn out about the same.

Our friends are rarely seriously alarmed until we seem to be needing the loan of their pocketbooks.

The stay at homes don't have to worry over vacations anyway.

The fellow whom it irritates when he doesn't get what he is entitled to has a lot to worry about.

Some things are so bad that if they were worse they would be better.

Even when looking for something fresh one doesn't care to have it blow in in the shape of a young man.

We don't mind unpleasant things as long as they take their unpleasant way remote from ours.

When you see a scared man watching an angry one it is a sign that something is about to be doing.

There is nothing like having a lead pipe cinch to make a man brave enough to tell the truth.

Peace.

No rude alarms are in the land;
  No bands set up their blare;
No orators are on the stump
  And beating up the air;
No torched processions fill the street
  Our troubles to increase;
From politics we get a rest—
  This is the year of peace.

Our congressmen have got a hold
  Upon their lovely snap.
They do not have to break their necks
  Or mingle in a scrap.
The president need not arise
  To settle up his score.
He sits securely in the chair
  At least for three years more.

And up and down the pleasant land,
  In city or on farm,
The fall campaign comes not this year
  To spread its wild alarm.
We do not have to work our brains
  Or shed in haste our coats
While trying to determine how
  It's best to cast our votes.

In some few states indeed they hold
  A sideshow, to be sure,
Though by the big three ring affair
  It's very small and poor.
We go upon our way in peace,
  No hint of any pest.
This is the off year in the game,
  And so we get a rest.

Back Numbers.

It was hard for man to conceal his smile when he saw the first steam carriage. Looking back over the steps from the original collection of strap iron and springs to the present day locomotive, it is hard to believe that the one evoluted out of the other.

Henry Hudson's Half Moon doesn't seem more than a second cousin to the present ocean liner, and the first automobile looks about as impossible as a wheelbarrow for a family carriage.

It will be thus with flying machines when the air is at last full of them. Those that we admire now will have an honored place in the museum, and the aviators of the future will only wonder that any one ever had the nerve to go up in the air in such a craft.

FLYERS' MASCOTS.

Aviator Hucks Never Ascends Without a Pair of Spats On.

The big risks airmen run keep their nerves continually on edge and for this reason the majority of well-known flyers have somewhat erratic temperaments. Resultantly, all manner of curious fads and beliefs exist at the aerodromes.

Hucks, for instance, the well-known English flyer who recently emulated Pegoud's feat of flying upside down in the air, invariably ascends in his monoplane with a pair of immaculate spats decorating his boots.

Evidently he regards these boot decorations as mascots, for on the muddiest of days Hucks, with his inevitable spats, tramps through the mire in the wake of the mechanics pushing his machine out to the starting point.

Grahame-White has a somewhat similar fad. He makes all his big flights wearing a pair of check riding breeches.

His big flying success was carried out whilst wearing breeches of this hue. He was thus garbed during his great London to Manchester flight in the race against Paulhan, and it was in a pair of check breeches that he flew to victory when he secured the Gordon-Bennett Flying Cup for England a short time back.

This craze for check riding-breeches has affected other airmen, too, and one of the best known of those who fly in this garb is Bielovucic, the Peruvian flyer, who not long back flew across the Alps in a Hanriot monoplane.

On the other hand, several airmen refuse to go aloft unless accompanied by some shabby relic of early flying days. The fact that Beaumont, the famous French flyer, is very particular about the cap he wears when making long flights, has already been commented upon.

The late Col. Cody was perhaps the least superstitious of all airmen, but even he disliked going aloft without a shabby old steering wheel which had accompanied him right through his flying career.

This strange steering device was fixed on the very first machine Cody got off the ground on. It figured in every machine he built from that occasion, and with it he steered to success the biplane which won him the twenty-five thousand dollar prize in the military trials last year. One of the most handsome wreaths at his funeral was a perfect model of this strange-looking steering wheel, built up by choice flowers.

Airmen's fads, however, generally take the form of some peculiar emblem which acts as a mascot during their flights.

Vedrines, the French flyer, has affixed to his speedy racing monoplanes a little portrait of the famous painting of the "Mona Lisa." With a machine thus decorated he recently flew at a speed of one hundred and eight miles an hour.

Naval airmen like carrying a lion's tooth aloft as a mascot—a practice coined by the late Lieut. Parke, who always carried such a mascot during his flights, and few men came out of so many mishaps unscathed as he.

Another interesting fad of airmen is their aversion to flying aeroplanes built on natural stability lines. The average flyer dislikes these machines, and is much happier in one of the tricky racing monoplanes, which are completely dependent on the skill of the pilot for their balance.

Insulted By a Look.

A cat may look at the king, but apparently Breslau citizens may not look at Prussian policemen. A local photographer who for some time had had strained relations with a policeman stationed on the Dominikaner platz considered one day that the policeman was paying him pronounced official attention. So he stood still and looked straight at him "in a vexatious manner," according to the charge.

The policeman considered himself deeply insulted by the photographer's gaze and reported the affair. The offender was haled to court and a petty jury sentenced the luckless photographer to fourteen days' imprisonment for "insulting" an official.—London Express.

OBITUARY

MISS VIOLET MONCRIEF.

The death occurred yesterday morning at Nicholl's Hospital of Violet Moncrief, daughter of Mr. George Moncrief, at the early age of seventeen years. Deceased had been living with her sister, Mrs. G. Innes, 573 Patterson street, and employed at the Bonner Worth Co. She was dearly loved by her companions, who will greatly regret her demise. She leaves to mourn her loss her father in Saskatchewan, three brothers, George, of Fairwood; Herbert, of Toronto, and Albert, of this city; also four sisters, Mrs. N. Hutchison, of Faiswood; Mrs. G. McColl and Miss Hanna, of Cavan, and Mrs. G. Innes, of this city.

The funeral will take place from the residence of Mrs. Innes, 573 Patterson street, on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, to the Little Lake cemetery, service at the house at 2.30 by Rev. R. B. Grobb, of All Saints' church.

ORANGE DAY

Now that the Seventeenth of Mar. is safely over, Californians are releasing something which they have been holding store for some time. The wearers of the green are to be shocked by an "orange day." As Californians will have it, there will be nothing in evidence on Saturday March 21st, save oranges. For the purpose of furthering the exportation and the use of the orange, the great product of the State, they have set aside this date as a "fete des oranges."

Various American railways are co-operating with the State officials of California, and on these systems oranges will be the order of the day. The Canadian Pacific Railway have responded to the request made to one fo the executive heads by those in charge of the movement by stating that the day will be recognized over the company's lines by the evidence of oranges in all the dining cars.

THEATRICAL

With charming girls, beautiful scenery and the latest song hits of the season, "The Red Rose Comedy Company" sang and danced into immense popularity before a fairly large house at the Grand Opera House last evening.

The entire company presented a most favorable comparison with any ever seen here. Syla Jason in the role of Gyp, her own master, was a big favorite.

Among the song hits were, "Come Along Ma Cherie," and "Men, Men, Men," by Lola, the artist's model and company, came in for repeated encores.

Other popular songs were "If You Can't Sing, Dance," and "The Land of the Free."

LAST SOCIAL OF THE SEASON

To be Given By St. George's Society To-night.

MR. TRENEER'S SONG.

The last of the monthly socials arranged by the St. George's Society during the winter months is to be held to-night in the Woodman's Hall, George Street. There has been a good programme arranged, and the following artists have promised to assist: Miss Ada Lee, Mrs. B. Read, Mr. H. Treneer, Mr. F. Wainwright, Mr. G. Brooks, and Mr. W. A. Greenslade. Mr. W. Barry accompanist.

An interesting item will be a song by Mr. Edward Jones, the words and music of which are composed by the local organist, Mr. Herbert Treneer. There will be no charge for admission, and a big crowd is expected.

TANGOING AT ROYAL THEATRE

The week-end bill at the Royal Theatre is featured by excellent vaudeville given by Miss Wegner and Mr. Simonsen, both high class singers. Their entertainment not only includes singing, but also a little tangoing.

The bill is further strengthened by the presenting of two fine moving picture films—one John Bunny and the other a society drama entitled "The Depth of Hate." Both the pictures and the vaudeville are hard to excel.

SEVERE INJURY SUSTAINED BY MISS K. DALY

The friends of Miss Kate Daly, 540 Weller Street, will learn with regret that a very painful accident befell her yesterday morning while engaged in her household duties. She was descending the back steps of her home and in some manner slipped and fell. It was with great difficulty that she returned to the house, and thinking the injury serious, medical aid was summoned, and Miss Daly was found to be suffering from a fractured hip. The unfortunate lady was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital to-day by Belleghem's private ambulance, and Dr. Gallivan reduced the fracture. It will be some time before Miss Daly can be around again.

PATTERN HATS AND GOWNS.

A. O. F. ATTENTION

High Sub Chief Ranger, A. Martin of Hamilton will be at the Juvenile At Home on Monday Evening March 23rd at 8 p.m. His mission here is important and we expect a large turn out of the members and friends of Court Stanley. Good programme and refreshments. Silver collection.

POLICE COURT

At the Police Court this morning Magistrate Dumble reserved judgment in the case of John Robinson charged with an infraction of the Peddlars' and Hawkers' Act, until to-morrow morning. Mr. G. N. Gordon acted for the defendant, and E. H. D. Hall for the city.

TO FIND BEST VARIETIES OF GRAIN CROPS

For twenty-six years the Dominion Experimental Farms have been experimenting with grain crops at the various farms and stations distributed over Canada trying to learn which varieties give best results in the different provinces. Not only have the best known sorts produced at other places been grown side by side, but at the Central Farm at Ottawa new varieties have been bred, and when found desirable, perpetuated and distributed to growers.

For the information of the Canadian farmer, the more important results of the season of 1913 at the different Farms have been put together in summarized form and issued in Bulletin No. 74. There are included in this some recommendations as to varieties to grow and methods of production to follow that should prove of great service to growers in all parts of Canada.

Referring to "Marquis" wheat which was bred at Ottawa, the Bulletin says: "Marquis produces very large crops, has usually good straw and is more resistant to rust than most of the common varieties." A large edition of this bulletin has been printed so that all who desire copies may secure them by applying to the Publication Branch, Department of Agriculture, at Ottawa.

Let's not waste our sympathy on the under dog if he started the scrap.

The weigh of the transgressor is short.

How to Glace Nuts.

Glace nuts are always great favorites. Use walnuts, filberts, almonds, Brazil nuts and pecans. For the glace turn into an enameled saucepan one-half pound of granulated sugar and one-half cupful of water. Boil until it threads, then add three tablespoonfuls of vinegar and boil again, removing from the fire the very instant it changes color. Dip the nuts as quickly as possible, let them dry and dip again and cool upon paraffin paper. If many nuts are to be dipped it is better to set the sirup into a larger vessel of warm water, so that it will not harden.

FREAKISH SHOWS.

Stage Fiascos In the Old Days In the Metropolis.

A SINGLE NIGHT "OTHELLO."

Wolfsohn Turned the Play Into a Near Riot and Never Acted Again—George Rignold's Melancholy Romeo to Six Ambitious Amateur Juliets.

The freak play or the performance that is a travesty is little in evidence today, but it does not seem so long ago when a slump in business sometimes emboldened even the most conservative of theatrical managers to resort to extraordinary measures to attract at least one capacity audience.

One of the early freak performances was intended as an event of great artistic value. The late Henry Wolfsohn, who afterward became famous as an impresario, aspired to the great Forrest's mantle. The great tragedian was playing at Niblo's Garden in "Othello" and Wolfsohn, then twenty-two, had saved a little money with the idea of purchasing the privilege of appearing as the Moor in New York once at least. His ambition appealed to Marie Seebach, the German actress, who was appearing in that year (1868) at the Theatre Francais on West Fourteenth street. Wolfsohn paid the manager $1,000 for the privilege, besides himself selling out the capacity of the theater.

Although the audience was composed chiefly of his friends and relatives, the portrayal was so ludicrous that a riot seemed imminent and was only prevented through an appeal to the audience from Mme. Seebach to consider her own position. Wolfsohn never trod the boards again.

The next year in the same theater opera bouffe was the rage, owing to the tremendous hit of a comedian of the name of Gabel, who appeared as one of the two gendarmes in "Genevieve de Brabant." Gabel's popularity was so great that a benefit was tendered to him. He decided to present "Genevieve" as a travesty, the male principals assuming the female roles and the women those of the men. The house was sold out one hour after the advance sale opened. Speculators reaped a harvest.

The audience began to laugh before the curtain rose, the conductor was greeted with roars of merriment. Even the ushers were grinning in anticipation of a festival of fun. When Gabel appeared elaborately gowned as Genevieve it was fully two minutes before he was allowed to sing the beautiful serenade number. He, too, was bursting with laughter. The same reception greeted each of the principals, but from then on the performance was about as enlivening as a funeral. The theater was half empty before the act ended. Gabel said the next day that he would gladly give back the $5,000 it yielded if he could forget the experience.

It was fifteen years before anything of this nature was attempted again. This time it was for the late Maurice Grau, who had suffered many reverses, that the benefit was organized at the Academy of Music. Grau himself arranged the program, the feature of which was a travesty of the first act of "La Grande Duchesse." The great Aimee, queen of opera bouffe, was cast for General Boum, the ponderous M. Duplan played the Duchess, and the droll M. Mezieres was Wanda. Seats brought as much as $15 each. The house was crowded, but, alas, the fiasco was even more complete than at Gabel's benefit.

Booth's theater, then at Twenty-third street and Sixth avenue, was the scene of the next freak performance. George Rignold, famous as a matinee idol, was attracting all New York to see his "Henry the Fifth." Joseph Tooker, an ingenious showman, if ever there was one, conceived the idea of a special matinee of "Romeo and Juliet," with six amateurs to appear as Juliet. Rignold was the Romeo. Such a scene as was on view on West Twenty-third street that matinee day was never witnessed before nor since. As early as 9 a. m. the lobbies were packed, and the line to the box office reached to Broadway.

At noon at least 3,000 women were congregated in front of the theater, and the management, fully awake to conditions, commissioned "big" Jim Brown, king of ticket speculators of that day, to "work the line." This Brown did so well that 4,200 persons, 95 per cent women, were packed into a playhouse seating 1,800 comfortably.

The performance itself was so bad that Rignold would have quit in the fourth scene but for Tooker's plaintive plea to stick it out. Tooker's idea had been that the Juliets would be so bad that they would be funny, whereas five of them were just rank incompetents. The sixth Juliet was none other than Marie Wainwright, who distinguished herself all the more by the contrast. Miss Wainwright was immediately engaged as a professional and quickly became a star.—New York Sun.

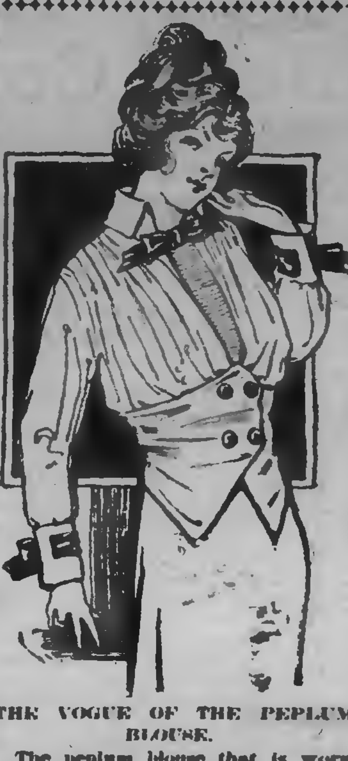
A Sense of Humor.

Dr. Ingram, bishop of London, once declared that a "sense of humor is essential to success. If a young man has no sense of humor I would keep him at college until he got one."

Nature.

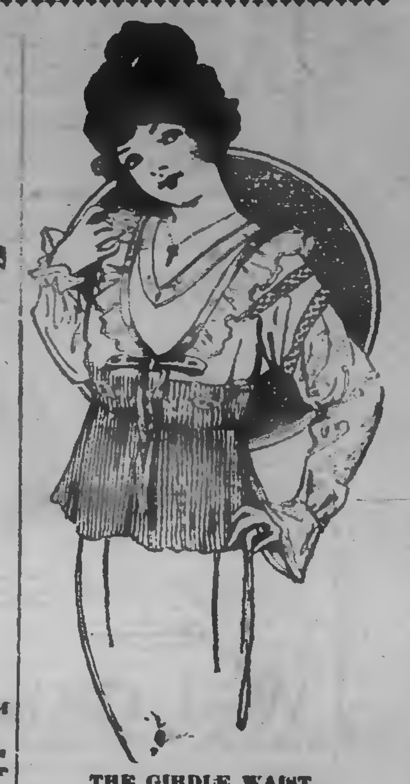
Nature is just toward men. It recompenses them for their sufferings: it renders them laborious, because to the greatest toils it attaches the greatest rewards.—Montesquieu.

THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION



THE VOGUE OF THE PEPLUM BLOUSE.

The peplum blouse that is worn outside the skirt is having a vogue that is almost a rage this season when the separate blouse is coming to its own again. In soft cotton crepe, plain and machine embroidered, combined with white cotton net, frilled on a rose colored ribbon about the low cut yoke, the design of the blouse is not more smart than it is individual. The front fastening is effected visibly by means of snap-fasteners, as the present mode indicates.



THE GIRDLE WAIST.

So fashionable have girdle effects become that now they are simulated on blouses, the lower part, instead of being the popular peplum, is girdle or vest shape. This smart little tailored blouse is developed in eponge crepe in tango red, with ribbon trimming very prettily used. As a successor to conventional old shirt waist this model is most gracefully successful.

CHILDREN'S GARMENTS.

Pretty Things For Early Spring Wear.

GIRL'S CHECKED SUIT.

The minds of careful mothers now turn seriously to thoughts of spring garments for the younger generation. Fortunately the simplicity and artistic charm of many of the new models will make the selection of spring garb a delight. Illustrated here is a checked suit for a young girl. Checks are notably satisfactory so far as look, appearance and durability are concerned. The flare of the skirt of the coat is an up to date touch. The dainty hat of novelty straw is a spring model.

SPRING SUITS.

Colors and Materials That Are Likely to Be Popular.

"Many of the orders recently placed for spring suits are for bright colors, such as tango, gendarme blue, tan and green, but doubt is expressed as to whether these shades will be ordered in large quantities," says the Dry Goods Economist. "There will probably be a demand for modified colors, as the larger sized suits in extremely bright shades are frequently difficult to dispose of.

"The materials that are expected to meet with the most favor are crape worsteds, gabardines, serges and black and white checks. Even at this early date silk suits are being shown in moire faille, Egyptian crape and taffeta."

Curious Cradles.

"The Lapland babe's cradle," said a man who has traveled, "is its mother's shoe — its mother's snowshoe. This snowshoe is covered with skin and stuffed with soft moss. When so disposed the Lapland mother can hang her baby to a tree by the thongs.

"The Indian baby wears a nose ring and a veil, and its cradle is a basket swung from its mother's head.

"But the strangest cradle of all is the New Guinea baby's. The mothers of New Guinea bury their babies in the soft white desert sand up to the waist. This keeps them out of mischief. It is the only cradle they ever knew."

WHO TOLD THE TRUTH?

Feminine Life From the Viewpoints of Home and Business.

Who told the truth?

They met in the subway one morning, a young mother and a young professional woman. They had been friends at school, but eons had passed, and now, after some ten years, they began to discuss their present jobs—of motherhood and journalism. However, journalism seemed to fill most of the time, and motherhood was dismissed after a few desultory questions about Billy, whose fame consisted in being seven years old and just entering school.

"Oh, tell me about your work," said the mother.

"There is quite a bit to tell of it," said the egotistical woman of business, and immediately launched upon the joys, woes, disadvantages and advantages of the business woman's career.

"My, but that is most interesting!" said the mother, whose eyes were popping out of her head at the mere mention of the famous persons the journalist knew. "I certainly shall buy your magazine and read it!"

"Grand Central station!" mumbled the guard.

"Goodby," said the mother. "Your life is certainly worth while."

"Goodby," replied the journalist. "Not nearly as much worth while as yours."

Who told the truth?—New York Tribune.

Ben Franklin's Keenness.

Two incidents recall the keenness and the thoroughness—the great twin abilities, to see and to utilize—of Ben Franklin. One day he chanced to observe a lady in the possession of an imported whisk broom. With his usual interest and careful consideration he examined it as a novelty. He discovered on the brush of the broom a seed, which he carefully removed. Presently he planted it, and the growth from this seed was the first crop of broom corn in this country. Again one day when Dr. Franklin was walking by Dock creek he saw stuck in the mud a wickerwork basket, which had sprouted. Carefully he fished out the basket and carefully took it apart. He gave cuttings to his friend, Charles Norris, who planted the twigs in his garden, where they grew to great size. They turned out to be yellow willows and, as Franklin had foreseen, proved of great commercial value.

Spoiled Their Appetites.

"Why is Sweden like heaven?" asked the thin boarder, coming to the breakfast table.

"I know," came from the little blond typewriter.

"Well, if you know push it along, Sweetmeats," said the thin boarder.

"Because"—

"The same old answer."

"No, it's not. I was going to say because it is a foreign country," essayed the little blond.

"Wrong," came from the thin man. "Listen. Because nearly all the matches are made there."—Yonkers Statesman.

Twenty years ago on the First of March next, a well-known resident of this city took out at age 28 a 10 pay 20 year endowment policy for $1,000, No. 43860, in the Sun Life of Canada.

The yearly premium he paid on the participating plan for 10 years only was.. .. ..$ 69.30
The yearly premium he would have paid on the non-participating plan for the 10 years is.. .. 62.25

Extra paid for profits yearly for ten years. $7.05

He received in cash at the end of 20 years, $1,279.25, that is, the $70.50 extra that he paid for profits yielded him $279.25, almost 400 per cent.

Would you not like something like that?

Or, he could draw out $736.45 in cash, which is $43.45 more than all he paid in, and receive a fully paid-up participating policy for life.

You can never obtain such results as these on the non-participating plan unless you die and die early, so that the price will not become too high.

For particulars in your case call or 'phone the Sun Life office, Crown Chambers Building.

RIGOROUS SCHOOLING

He Carried to His Death the Lesson He Learned at Eton.

Dr. Keate, the terrible head master of Eton, encountered one winter morning a small boy crying miserably and asked him what was the matter. The child replied that he was cold. "Cold!" roared Keate. "You must put up with cold, sir! You are not at a girls' school!"

It is a horrid anecdote, and I am kind heatred enough to wish that Dr. Keate, who was not without his genial moods, had taken the lad to some generous fire (presuming such a thing was to be found) and had warmed his frozen hands and feet. But it so chanced that in that little snivelling boy there lurked a spark of pride and a spark of fun, and both ignited at the rough touch of the master.

He probably stopped crying, and he certainly remembered the sharp appeal to manhood, for fifteen years later, with the Third dragoons, he charged at the strongly intrenched Sikhs (30,000 of the best fighting men of the Khalsa) on the curving banks of the Sutlej. And as the word was given he turned to his superior officer, a fellow Etonian, who was scanning the stout walls and the belching guns. "As old Keate would say, this is no girls' school," he chuckled, and rode to his death on the battlefield of Sobraon, which gave Lahore to England.—Agnes Repplier in Atlantic.

Brutal Delay.

"His love is growing cold," she said, with a sigh.

"Why do you think so?" her mother asked.

"I told him he might call this evening at 8, and it was half a minute after that when he arrived."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Cold Plunge Killed Child.

SARNIA, March 19.—Francis Patrick Murray, aged three years, was buried from the residence of his parents at Point Edward yesterday. The little lad fell off his tricycle last Saturday in a hole full of water, and was unconscious when recovered, but was seized with a cold, which developed in pneumonia, and his death followed yesterday.

Confiscated Lottery Sheets.

LONDON, Ont., March 19.—Londoners who anticipated taking a little flier in German lottery tickets will be disappointed. They were expecting the "take-a-chance" sheets Tuesday, but they will have to continue expecting, for the postal authorities have confiscated every one sent through the mails to local "subscribers."

Incognito

The Story of a Royal Marriage.

By MAY C. ETHERIDGE.

"I am tired," said Prince Adolf, "of having people gape at me whenever I appear."

"Your royal highness," said an equerry, entering, "a man has been brought to the palace by the police charged with personating you, the prince. He resembles you so closely that those who arrested him cannot be certain whether he is or is not an imposter. What orders shall I give as to his disposition?"

"Is he much like me?"

"So nearly that had he not been poorly dressed I, who am in constant attendance upon your highness, could not tell him from you."

"Bring him to me."

The equerry disappeared and in a few minutes entered, conducting the man in question. The prince started at the marvelous resemblance to himself.

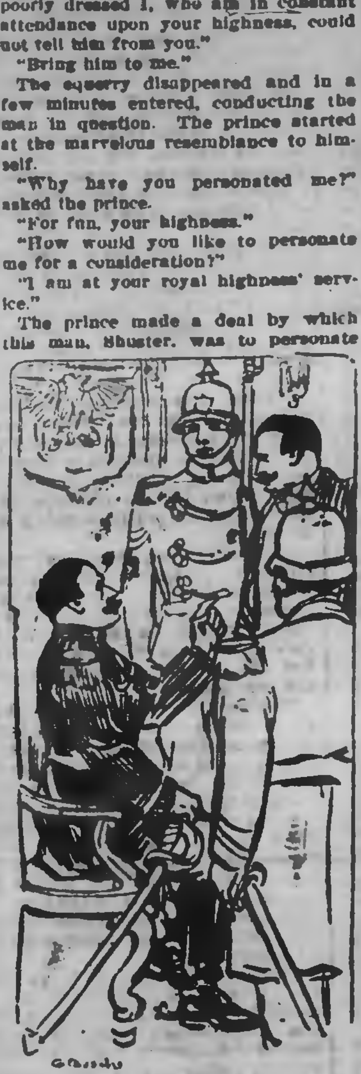
"Why have you personated me?" asked the prince.

"For fun, your highness."

"How would you like to personate me for a consideration?"

"I am at your royal highness' service."

The prince made a deal by which this man, Shuster, was to personate



"HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO PERSONATE ME?"

him till the moment he should meet his bride. The prince wished to do some shopping, and it was arranged that, while dressed as a commoner and with his hat pulled down over his eyes, he should enter a store by one door while Shuster, as the true prince, should enter by another.

So the next morning at the usual hour of the prince's going forth Shuster was driven through the usual crowd of loiterers at the palace gate, all of whom took off their hats, the salute being gracefully acknowledged by Shuster. The prince, looking down from an upper window, saw the exit.

Leaving the palace by a rear exit, the prince took a shorter route to the first shop he intended to visit and reached it just in time to see his spurious self alight from his carriage, the footman open the door and Shuster pass through a small gathering who, recognising the prince's livery, had run to the spot to catch a glimpse of him. Then the prince did his shopping in another part of the store, though he found it difficult to secure attention, so eager were the clerks to see his royal highness.

The prince was much relieved and pleased at being able to buy a pair of stockings or a necktie without having a crowd about him, kept back in some instances by the police. He wrote his fiancee of his ruse and that he would arrive incognito, his personator coming in state. The princess was caught by the device and wished that she might herself be personated in the same way. She at once sent her favorite attendant out to search for a young woman who resembled her. The woman spent a week on the street, in shops, at evening entertainments, and at last found a young lady who sufficiently resembled her mistress to warrant an attempt to pass her for the princess. The lady was commanded to go to the palace. She expressed some surprise and at first refused, but changed her mind.

When the princess saw the person who was to represent her she was much pleased, not so much at the resemblance as the carriage, for the lady and the bearing of one of high degree. Some difficulty was met with to induce her to act the part of princess, but at last she consented and began her official duties in personating the princess on a shopping tour, as Shuster had personated the prince.

The marriage between Prince Adolf and the Princess Wilhelmina was a state marriage and had nothing to do with love. Indeed, the two had met but once—when the marriage contract was signed. But this made but little difference so far as the prince's arrival and the wedding were concerned. According to the arrangements, when a carriage drove up to the palace where dwelt the princess amid salvos of artillery he was received by the princess' personator, the princess herself standing back and enjoying the farce that was being enacted.

"What a joke it would be," she said to herself, "if these two could be brought to marry, each thinking the other to be of princely blood! As soon as the prince arrives I shall propose the plan to him."

She did propose the plan when her fiance arrived the same evening and was admitted through a rear door of the palace. The prince was evidently much struck with the proposal and said he would think it over. He expressed a desire to see his man, Shuster, with a view to giving him further instructions, and the representative was introduced to his apartments. What passed between them was not known, but after the meeting the prince told the princess that he had proposed her plan to Shuster.

It had been arranged that the prenuptial festivities should last a week, then the wedding, after which there should be another week of rejoicing. The princess was much interested in her matchmaking between the two representatives and was quite pleased to find every evidence that the two had been violently smitten with each other. The prince and his representative had conferences occasionally, and the former reported to the princess that the latter had agreed to her plan of passing through the ceremony of marriage with her who was enacting the part of bride expectant, though he feared to get into trouble by marrying a princess while pretending to be a prince. But Adolf declared that he would make that all right, assuring the man of his personal protection.

The conspirators could not, of course, go so far as to have a public marriage celebrated between the two, so it was arranged that Shuster and the princess' representative should be married privately—that is, if the spurious princess would consent to the match. The day before the royal marriage was celebrated Shuster announced that he had won the lady's consent, and the prince and his fiancee agreed that the marriage should be celebrated that same evening in the private chapel of the palace.

A few of those most intimate with the princess were admitted to the secret and to the ceremony. All watched the proceedings with great gusto. Nothing could be more interesting than a marriage between two commoners, each thinking the other to be of royal blood. Many comments were passed on the pair, the most frequent of which was that, though commoners, each possessed the carriage and dignity of a person of the blood royal.

The groom had stipulated that immediately after the ceremony he should take his bride whither so ever he pleased and no questions asked. So when the pair had been congratulated they stepped into one of the royal carriages and were driven away.

That night the prince disappeared. On the dresser in his apartments was found a note stating that his name was Herman Shuster. He had personated the prince till just before his arrival at the capital, when his royal highness had suddenly decided to enter in his own propria persona. He whom the princess had taken for a dummy was the real prince. He had fallen in love with the princess' representative and married her.

The princess, astonished, mortified, gave orders to cease the preparations for the wedding that was to take place that day at high noon and shut herself up in the palace. There was but one matter of comfort for her—if her betrothed had jilted her he had married a commoner. This would insure innumerable troubles for him in the future and might cost him a crown.

But within a few days strange news came from a neighboring kingdom. The king of this country had recently died and left the throne to his daughter. The young queen was much beloved by her subjects, being given to charity. She was used to going among the poor and the institutions for the poor incognita for the purpose of studying the needs of the former and correcting abuses in the latter. She had found these incognitas so pleasant, relieving her, as they did, from the gaze of curious crowds, that she had adopted them when traveling. In one of her journeys she had been summoned to the palace of the reigning sovereign and had been assigned a duty by the princess royal, the latter thinking her to be a commoner. While in the palace she had happened to meet the heir apparent of another kingdom, a love affair had resulted and the queen had been privately married.

When the princess heard this news she was more astonished than before. What an imposition had been practiced upon her and what an extraordinary coincidence, the queen and the prince meeting under such circumstances! But what excited the wrath of her father, the king, was that two kingdoms being near his own would now be united under one sovereign, the two together being far stronger than he was himself.

Soon after his marriage Prince Adolf sent a deputation to the lady to whom he had been betrothed to offer an humble apology. They said that after informing her that he would be represented by another he had been seized with a desire to win her love in that way, but her adoption of a similar plan as his own had placed him under an influence that he had been unable to resist.

AGAINST HEAVY ODDS.

Canadian Blind Man Has a Host of Accomplishments.

As an example of wonderful ability and dogged perseverance, the experiences of Mr. S. C. Swift, blind librarian of the Canadian Library for the blind, West Toronto, stands out as an inspiration to his fellows in affliction and a revelation to those who enjoy the use of their eyes. In a recent interview, Mr. Swift told the story of his life and how he attained an education and wonderful facility in reading books, despite the handicap of blindness.

Born in Petrolea, Ont., Mr. Swift as a boy had perfect sight and enjoyed life to the full. At the age of ten he lost his vision in an accident.

The next five years were spent in the school for the blind, at Brantford, studying and learning to read the raised characters. It was during this time that he became an accomplished musician.

At twenty years of age, Mr. Swift was still thirsting for knowledge. The first step was to enter the Petrolea High School. As a blind pupil in a school for the sighted, he was terribly handicapped. Even his school books had to be copied by hand by him in order that he might study and keep up with the other members of his class.

After matriculation Mr. Swift determined to try for a scholarship which would put him through the first year at McGill University. The examination papers were sent to him but they proved to be on work which the blind student had not been required to cover for his matriculation. Undaunted by this setback, he set to work and tried the examinations at sight. In Latin the papers were based on certain books of Horace and Ovid which he had never seen before, while the French and English were equally unknown to him. Despite these obstacles he came through with flying colors and captured the prize of $150.

In the fall of 1903 Mr. Swift commenced his college course. By dint of perseverance and industry he took a foremost position in the first year, maintained it in the second, and on his third year's work won a $300 scholarship on account of general proficiency.

Completing his course in 1907, Mr. Swift received the degree of Bachelor of Arts after graduating with first-class honors. With the winning of a bronze and a silver medal for French public speaking the blind student climaxed one of the most brilliant of student records. Mr. Swift spoke with unassumed affection for the year '07, and of the kind and considerate treatment which had always been accorded him by fellow-students and professors alike.

As the blind student was never very strong, the strain of the work told on him to such an extent that after graduation he was laid up with typhoid fever. With his convalescence, however, he decided that he would take a post-graduate course in the Faculty of Education at Toronto University. This plan was followed out, and in recognition of his general proficiency he was awarded the degree of Master of Arts besides his diploma from the faculty. Mr. Swift emerged from college with a knowledge of seven languages and a master of five, namely, French, German, Italian, Spanish and English.

An interesting sidelight on Mr. Swift's life is that he has been to "see" hundreds of plays at the theatres. "I am passionately fond of the theatre," he said. He explained that, although he was unable to see the scenery and the actors, he had read a great many of the plays which he attended and could picture in his mind what was taking place by the sound of the movements on the stage and the intonation of the voices. He is also the author of a volume of short poems entitled "Treasure Trove and Other Poems."

PETER BILLY'S CLOTHES

They Were Characteristic of the Man

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"I got a hunch that this is my last year as a lone, lorn bachelor man," sang out Peter Billy as he put on a celluloid collar that cruelly sawed his sunburned neck. He picked up a brilliant red and blue striped necktie and tossed the end around the collar.

"I reckon you think that this nigger minstrel getup's going to put you at the head of schoolteacher's class," grumbled Phin Morris from the doorstep of the bunk house. "Looks like a barber's pole!"

"Nigger minstrel getup, eh? You're plumb jealous, Phin," retorted Peter Billy. "A feller can't put on a biled shirt and a plain, ordinary necktie what they wear in civilized parts but what you kick up a fuss."

Who can blame poor Phin for sitting on the doorstep and indulging in gibes at his more fortunate rival's marvelous garments?

"It's going to be some dance at the schoolhouse next week," volunteered Peter Billy as he stepped past Phin into the starlit night.

"Maybe I'll go," said Phin drearily.

"The Dray girls are coming and a big crowd from Onderdonk. Mazie's going with me!" Peter Billy dashed away into the night, and to the clatter of his pony's hoofs Phin could hear the refrain of Peter's last gay words: "Mazie's going with me!"

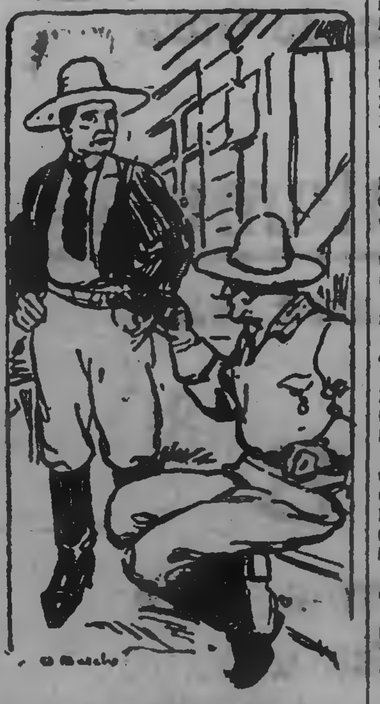
Mazie Fenwick was the schoolteacher.

* * * * * * *

Two hundred miles distant, in a Cheyenne hospital, an old man had suffered a sudden sinking spell. There was no time to send for his only relative, a cowpuncher, in another part of the state, so the nurse, a pale, sweet faced young woman, was listening to the weakening voice of old David Morris.

"Miss Drew, I got plenty of money of my own. It tells all about it in that letter I gave you. But you know I've been accepting charity from my nephew, Phin Morris? Of course you know; I told you all about it, and you wonder why I kept him stripped of his money for the last year.

"Phinny was a wild boy, and I've been afraid that he'd go wrong entirely with that wild bunch at Keeter's ranch. So I just let him think I was hard up, and so he's paid $20 a month out of his $30 on me, and I've sent it to the bank. I let him do it. It showed he's made of good metal. He's got the Morris blood in him, and he'll come out all right.



"LOOKS LIKE A BARBER'S POLE," SAID PHIN MORRIS.

"I'd like to have seen him, but I can't now, and you'll go down there and tell him all this and bring him back with you?"

"I'll go," promised the girl. "You know it's my vacation, anyway."

And later in the day, when there was no more to be done, Nan Drew took the letters and boarded the train that would reach Onderdonk Creek at daylight the following morning. Once there, she went to the hotel and sent word to Keeter's ranch for Phin Morris to come to her.

She was hardly prepared for the strapping young man whose head almost touched the ceiling of the hotel parlor and whose big voice filled every nook and cranny of the room.

And Phin was plainly embarrassed in the presence of the pretty little nurse who had come all the way from Cheyenne to carry out the last wishes of an old man.

Poor Phin was overcome with embarrassment when he discovered that Uncle David had confided all his affairs to Nan Drew, but the girl accomplished her mission so delicately and with such tact that Phin felt almost glad that his uncle had chosen such a sweet messenger.

"You don't look real strong yourself," said Phin, looking down at her delicate face.

"I'm not very well; I'm very tired," said the girl wearily, "but this air is wonderful. I feel better already."

"Can't you come and spend your vacation down here?" asked Phin eagerly. "They take lady boarders over to Dray's ranch. They learn to ride ponies and get brown as berries. You better come down here, and I'll teach you to ride."

"Perhaps I will!" cried Nan. "It sounds very attractive."

"Now I've got to go back to the ranch and tell Keeter I must have a few days off. I reckon I'll get in Cheyenne some time late tonight."

* * * * * * *

It was three months later when Phin Morris, riding down the trail toward Onderdonk Creek, overtook Mazie Fenwick riding her little calico pony.

"Stranger!" reproached Mazie, with a dazzling smile.

Phin could execute a dazzling smile as well, and he proceeded to make himself agreeable to Miss Fenwick.

He knew that for some reason Peter Billy was in the bad graces of the pretty schoolteacher, but Peter Billy was very reticent about the whole matter. As for Phin, he spent many of his evenings studying books, and Mazie had heard of it and dreamed that he was endeavoring to educate himself to her level.

"I'm nearly famished," sighed Mazie as they turned into the main street of the little town.

"Come in and have some ice cream," invited Phin cheerily.

They went, and Mazie's blue eyes gleamed when she saw that Phin Morris' pocketbook was not as empty as it had been in former days. Some one had whispered the story of the bedridden uncle who had left a fortune to the handsome young cowpuncher, and Phin had mounted higher in selfish Mazie's estimation.

Still he wore the same old clothes.

"Phin," said Mazie suddenly, dropping her hand on his big brown one in a friendly manner, "why don't you ever come to see me any more?"

"Too busy," smiled Phin uncomfortably. "Besides, Peter Billy's always had the front seat, you know."

"He's not sitting on the front seat now," retorted Mazie, with spirit.

"And he's some sore because he fell off," rejoined Phin.

"I'm not to blame for that—really, am I, now?" Mazie turned her cornflower blue eyes upon Phin, and her under lip trembled.

Time had been when that demonstration would have sent ecstatic shivers up and down Phin's spinal column. Now he shuddered uncomfortably, thinking what a blessing it was that he had missed marrying Mazie Fenwick.

"I am not to blame, am I, Phin?" quavered Mazie, with tearful eyes.

"I'm not a good judge. Peter Billy knows more about it than I do," said Phin reluctantly. "You see, Mazie, I was way back in the thirteenth row"—

"You're only joking!" cried Mazie angrily. "I guess it won't be any joke if that white faced nurse over at Dray's goes back to Cheyenne. She's"—

"She's my girl," said Phin slowly, and Mazie flinched at the cold anger in his voice and the hostility in his gray eyes. "I reckon we won't talk about Nan Drew."

Mazie said never a word, but she set her teeth hard and left the store at once. By the time Phin had paid the bill and had reached the sidewalk Mazie had mounted her pony and flown back along the trail toward home.

"Poor, selfish little girl!" muttered Phin uneasily.

On the way home Phin met Peter Billy riding desperately toward the town. He was wearing all his gala attire, and there was a glad look in his black eyes.

He stopped short at the sight of Phin.

"I reckon it won't hurt none if I tell you that she's sent for me!" he cried eagerly. "I guess that there bunch of mine has come true! I won't be no bachelor next year!"

"You mean Mazie?" asked Phin, and when the other held out his hand Phin gripped it hard. How was Peter Billy to know that the prize he dreamed he was getting was merely a poor tinseled package stuffed with sawdust?

So Peter Billy went joyfully on his way, and Phin turned into the trail that led to Dray's farm, where Nan Drew had been spending many happy months.

He met her on the trail. She was riding a cream colored pony and looking bewitching in her brown riding dress, with a wide brimmed hat on her golden brown hair. She had grown plump and rosy, and a golden tan covered her face and hands.

"She's my golden girl," whispered Phin, and then he felt suddenly scared at something he had to confess to Nan Drew.

"Come with me to Little Green canyon; I got something to say to you," said Phin seriously, so they rode there almost in silence.

And when they looked down on the green, cuplike hollow in the hills Phin leaned over and took Nan's little hand.

"Nan Drew," he said solemnly, "I just told somebody that you was my girl! Is it true?"

Nan lifted lovely, long lashed eyes and looked long into his loving gray ones. Then she turned to him with a little tender gesture of surrender and said:

"Of course I am your girl, Phin. I've never been any one else's!"

"Gee, but I'm glad Peter Billy's a swell dresser!" remarked Phin after awhile, and, although Nan tried many a time to discover Phin's reason for making such a remark, Phin never told her. Perhaps poor Peter Billy might have guessed, or Mazie herself!

WANTED ONE MORE RIDE.

But Neither Pride Nor Glory Figured In His Ambition.

The Boston Transcript tells an amusing story of one of the subjects of Lord Kitchener, consul general in Egypt, who turned the power and influence of the famous English soldier to his personal profit.

While driving one day Lord Kitchener noticed an old man in the street whom he recognized as an acquaintance from the Sudan. The consul general ordered the driver to stop and invited the old man to take a seat in the carriage. So the two drove together through the town to the place to which the Sudanese wanted to go.

A few days later the dark friend of Lord Kitchener was seen hovering about the British agency. At last an officer asked him what he wanted.

"I should so much like to drive out with Lord Kitchener once more," the old man replied.

"Why?" the officer asked.

"You see," the Sudanese answered naively, "after my friends and acquaintances saw me sitting at the side of Lord Kitchener they came to me, one after the other, and from one I received £5, from another £2, from others £1 and 40 piasters from the very poorest. They all believe that I could speak in favor of El Lord.

"And," the old man added, "I should very much like to see that happen all over again."

VARYING FORCE OF RADIUM.

Powers of the Three Different Rays—Alpha, Beta and Gamma.

There are three kinds of so called rays having their inciting origin in radium. The three rays are known as alpha, beta and gamma rays, and each of these has characteristic peculiarities.

The alpha rays have a range inside of half an inch from their source, the beta rays reach about three times as far, and the gamma rays are yet more penetrating. A thin sheet of paper or a film of tin foil or mica will effectually halt the alpha rays. A millimeter of lead or five millimeters of aluminum will stop the further progress of the beta rays, but the gamma rays will go through nineteen centimeters of iron or seven centimeters of lead before their original intensity is reduced 1 per cent.

The alpha rays consist of positively charged atoms of helium advancing at a velocity of 12,000 miles a second, and the beta rays are negatively charged bodies projected at a speed of quite 150,000 miles in the same interval of time. Roughly, the beta rays are a hundred times more penetrating than the alpha rays, while the gamma rays, in their turn, are a hundredfold as searching as the beta rays.—Exchange.

ANIMALS IN "MOVIES"

SCHOOL FOR WILD BEASTS SUPPLIES QUADRUPED ACTORS.

Business Is One Full of Danger for the Human Being Who Participates In the Show—Greater Difficulties Beset Trainers Than In Teaching Animals for Stage Because Break Will Spoil Film.

Undoubtedly the most unique school of dramatic art in the world is a place where all manner of wild creatures are trained to pose along with human actors for the moving picture manufacturers. Such a school has just been visited by Mr. Robert H. Moulton. He says:

I found the school for animal actors a long, one-story structure, located in the middle of a wood. Monsieur Bourgeois himself answered my ring. Slight, almost frail in appearance, with a boyish face and manner, he looked anything but a tamer of ferocious wild beasts.

Monsieur Bourgeois led the way to a large room fitted up with a stage, scenery, skylights, and all of the accessories usually found in a moving picture studio.

"The films are made here," Monsieur Bourgeois explained, "because the animals do not act so well when we take them to a strange place. Here they are at home—and behave. So the other actors—the men and women—come to us, and we have no trouble at all. Now for the animals."

A door at one side was opened, and we passed into a long room lined on either side with iron cages and resembling an ordinary menagerie or zoo. Wild animals filled the different cages, a few of them apparently dozing, while others were pacing nervously back and forth. At our entrance all ran to the bars and peered anxiously through, some rearing up on their hind legs to obtain a better view.

"They think it is dinner time," laughed Monsieur Bourgeois. "Such enormous appetites, too! Raw eggs, bread and milk, beef, vegetables, hay, and other things—we feed them often, even if the market price is high."

Suddenly a roar that shook the whole building came from a cage at the rear. Immediately there followed a chorus of lesser roars, snarls, barks, and trumpets, while through the din could be heard a deep voice bellowing, "Monsieur Paul! It is Nero. Come quick!"

Running swiftly to the scene of the uproar, Monsieur Bourgeois vaulted lightly over a railing beside a cage in which a huge lion stood alternately snarling and roaring, while he made desperate efforts to get at one of the keepers.

I watched the lithe young Frenchman who had distinguished himself in the special and dangerous vocation of training wild beasts to take part in plays in which he assumes roles with them. Seizing a long whip he applied it vigorously through the bars until the lion retreated sullenly to a corner. Then the trainer jumped into the cage, the door of which was swiftly closed after him, and confronted the angry lion. Then began a series of advances and retreats of panther-like stealth, again and again with whirlwind movement, the eyes of the man never leaving those of the big beast. Little by little, amid wild roars and an evil showing of Nero's teeth, the lash and the pistol did their work and the great lion quieted down.

"Nero is not in good humor this morning," said Monsieur Bourgeois, as he returned to my side. "He has what you call the temperament. But he is a star, and we must put up with his moods."

"How then," I asked, "when the animals are really dangerous, can women be induced to run the risk of being torn to pieces in the brief, but all too long, period of posing?"

"Oh, the animals are not as dangerous as they look," replied Monsieur Bourgeois. "And then— I do not know how to explain it—the women seem to be more fearless than the men. They are willing to take greater risks when posing. Look!" and he pointed to a beautiful young tigress in a nearby cage. "That is Princess, one of our stars. She has taken part in four productions, so far. Doesn't she look gentle? Women regard her as a pet."

One of the productions referred to, the trainer told me, was "Beasts of the Jungle. Princess, the tigress, while something of a pet, was not exactly the playmate a child would choose, but the little actress nestled up to the beast and apparently felt no fear of the great yellow eyes and dangerous claws. The company, the trainers, and the employes of the moving picture company were not so secure as to the disposition of Princess, and stood in breathless silence, each carrying a loaded revolver pointed at the beast.

Although Monsieur Bourgeois has made a business of furnishing domestic and wild animals to the different moving picture manufacturers, and although he has, at one time or another in his eventful career, come in contact with most birds, beasts and reptiles, he says he has not yet discovered any real histrionic ability among these creatures.

Accustoming a wild animal to a number of people, according to Monsieur Bourgeois, is even more important in training such creatures for moving picture acting than in training them for the variety stage, since in the "movies" the animal actor has actually to take part in a cast of real people, while the stage animal performer need only grow accustomed to the audience and his keepers. Another important difference is that the animal can walk, trot, amble, or perform his numerous tricks without being hampered by space restrictions, but in the average indoor moving picture studio setting the stage is not much larger than an ordinary bedroom.

Primrose League.

The Primrose league was formed in 1884 in memory of the late Lord Beaconsfield, whose favorite flower the primrose is thought to have been. Beaconsfield died on April 19, 1881, and the anniversary of that day is termed "primrose day," when the flower is generally worn by his admirers and also placed upon his statue in Parliament square. The joke of it is, the primrose was not the great statesman's favorite flower. It was, however, the favorite flower of Queen Victoria, and when asked about the floral tribute to be sent to Beaconsfield's funeral she advised sending "the primrose, my favorite flower." In some way the matter got mixed up, and the delusion sprang up that materialized in the Primrose league.—New York American.

Persistent Carlyle.

The father of Thomas Carlyle was a stonemason and a good one, so his son said. The elder was as proud of his stone walls as was the son of his own "French Revolution" when he threw the complete manuscript on the table and said something like this to his wife:

"There, let the world have it. I have put my best blood into it."

But his patience and pride in his work was to receive a severer test. He lent the manuscript to a friend, who did not safeguard it. As a result a servant threw it into the fire. The author was not mirthful by nature, yet he went cheerfully at his work again and for the second time put his best blood into it.—Boston Globe.

ACTIVITY AT WAR OFFICE--REGULARS IN ULSTER TOWNS

SOME ARMY OFFICERS IN IRELAND HAVE RESIGNED

Sir John French Arrives in Dublin In Connection With the Resignations---Four Battalions of Infantry, With Machine Guns and two Batteries are on the Scene

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, March 21.—The utmost activity prevails at the War Office and other departments affected by the apparently grave situation in Ulster. The first Lord of the Admiralty and the Secretary for War conferred this morning and the statement was issued, confirming the report of the resignation of some army officers serving in Ireland and stating that these cases will be dealt with in due course by General Paget, Commander-In-Chief in Ireland. In the meantime the officers concerned are "Performing duties which naturally include obedience to orders."

Reports from Belfast say Ulster presents a very martial aspect with all the towns occupied by detachments of regular soldiers and detachments are on the march along the roads with baggage and ammunition trains. A feeling of intense excitement prevades the Province. Orders have been issued to the military to avoid any provocative step like the seizure of arms and the greatest danger is believed to lie in the possibility of Orange and Nationalist workmen coming in collision, which might start a general conflict.

Belfast, March 21.—Sir John French, chief of general army staff, has arrived in Dublin in connection with the resignations of officers. Within twenty-four hours three thousand regular troops, including four battalions of infantry with machine guns and two batteries of artillery, have arrived in various towns of Ulster and still more troops are on the way. The Fourth Hussars and the Sixteenth Lancers, in camp at the Curragh, were to have been marched into Ulster this afternoon, but resignations among their officers have caused delay in this movement.

THE SHORT AND CHECKERED LIFE OF FRANCIS THOMPSON

PAPER READ TO LITERARY SOCIETY

The Ladies' Aid Society of St. Peter's T. A. S. held a meeting in St. Aloysius' Lyceum last evening, when a very interesting paper was read by Miss Mamie McCarthy, on "Francis Thompson." The musical programme, in charge of Miss L. Hurley, the chairlady, was as follows:

Instrumental Solo—Miss Marion Gorman.

Recitation—Miss Carr.

Vocal Solo—Mr. Collins.

Miss McCarthy gave a brief sketch of the life of Francis Thompson, the English poet, who was born in 1859, and died in 1907. His short life was indeed a checkered one, and marked by poverty from beginning to end. The flame of his genius burned in a naturally noble frame, that was weakened, however, by a lifelong use of opium. This disastrous habit was contracted and fostered after reading De Quincy's "Confessions of an Opium Eeater," that realistic account of the struggles and trials of the habitual drug-fiend. This habit, which clung to him all through life, was doubtless the cause of shortening his days, and depriving the world of further manifestations of his genius. He lived, for years, a life of helpless destitution, sleeping in cheap lodging houses, and in the city parks, selling matches and newspapers, and finally becoming an odd man in the shop of a friendly bootmaker.

In 1888, he fortunately became acquainted with Mr. Oldfield Meynell, the father of his biographer, who watched over him with almost paternal devotion, sending him to a private hospital, where, for a time, he overcame the opium habit. Mrs. Meynell, the poetess, encouraged, consoled and tended him with perfect sweetness and patience. It was at the age of thirty-two, when living for a time at a monastery in Sussex, that his genius blossomed suddenly, and he wrote his masterpiece, "The Hound of Heaven," that inimitable "litany of the soul" which portrays the undying love of God for man, and His unceasing pursuit of the soul which is seeking for happiness in earthly things. It has been termed the "sweetest, deepest, strongest song ever written in the English tongue," and although comparatively little known now, people will still be learning it by heart two hundred years hence, for it has about it the unique thing that makes for immortality. It is the return of the nineteenth century to Thomas a Kempis."

At the conclusion of the paper Rev. Dean McColl spoke for a few minutes.

Hon. T. B. Lucas.

Provincial Secretary for Ontario who introduced the Workmen's Compensation Act to the Ontario Legislature.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT

The Workmen's Compensation Bill, drafted by Sir William Meredith and introduced in the Ontario Legislature by Hon. T. B. Lucas, is said to emody the best features of all similar legislation in force in Europe and the United States. Briefly the chief features may be stated as follows:

Compensation for total disability calls for weekly payment equal to 55 per cent. of average wage for pervious twelve months.

No contributions by employes to funds directly or indirectly. Heavy penalty to employers in case premiums are deducted from wages.

"Waiting period" set at seven days. Compensations only allowed if worker is off, due to accident, more than seven days.

Burial expenses a straight gift of $75.

Allowance of $20 a month where a widow or invalid husband is sole dependent; $5.00 additional for each child up to 16 years.

Farmers are only employers exempted from operation, according to the bill.

Clerical staffs of all manufacturing concerns included under same liability and rates as other employes.

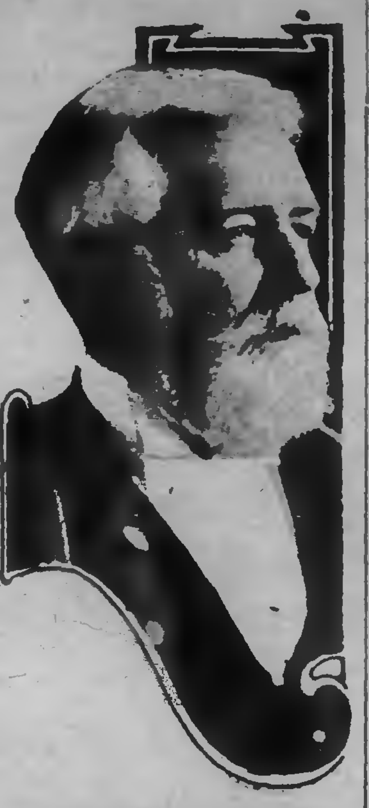
Board of management to consist of three memers, appointed for ten years each.

Board to have exclusive jurisdiction. Its decisions will not be subject to appeal or review in any court, nor can it be restrained in any way by injunction or otherwise.

Employers will be grouped for payments to accident fund.

Board will maintain accident fund, with adequate reserves to prevent too heavy burden in future.

Employer will have to notify the Board within three days of any accident.



SIR WILLIAM MEREDITH
the Commissioner who investigated the subject of Workmen's Compensation and drafted the Ontario measure.

Court Stanley, No. 7680, A.O.F., meets in the Sons of England Hall, Hunter St., every 2nd and 4th Tuesday of the month.

On Monday, March 23rd, they expect to have one of their ablest High Court officers, High Sub-Chief Ranger A. Martin, from Hamilton, who will give an address on "Ancient Forestry." All Old Country Foresters are invited to the meetings.

The annual meeting of the Head Camp of the W. O. W. was held last Wednesday and Thursday in London. Mr. A. Graham represented the local Camp, No. 50.

The next meeting of the Head Camp will take place in Niagara Falls, Ont.

The Sons of England, at their meeting last Monday, followed up the regular business with a musical programme, which, although short, was exceedingly good. Those taking part, namely, Messrs. J. Runnett, D. Eldred, F. Potts and R. Briggs, were given the hearty appreciation of all those present.

The members of the Sacred Heart Branch No. 509 of the C. M. B. A., are urgently requested to attend the important meeting of that body on Monday night.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., has returned from Toronto, where he attended the meeting of the Grand Lodge of the A. O. U. W. as delegate from the local lodge No. 135. Mr. Turner made a big fight for the honor of housing next year's gathering here, but the majority again favored Toronto.

Loyal Orange Lodge No. 2519 was instituted last week in Belleville, under most favorable auspices. This makes the fiftieth Orange lodge in Hastings County.

All the members of the Marathon Lodge No. 39 of the Knights of Pythias are requested to be on hand Tuesday evening, when Grand Chancellor O. Rumple, of Berlin, will pay an official visit. Visiting Knights will be present from Lindsay, Port Hope, Havelock and Toronto. Some seven new local members will be initiated.

The April open meeting of the Peterboro Lodge of Oddfellows No. 111 will be featured by an open discussion on "Woman Suffrage." The meeting will be held on the evening of the 16th.

The sixth anniversary of the Duke of Manchester, L. O. L., No. 50, will be held in the W. O. W. Hall, on Tuesday, March 24th.

Messrs. Jas. Davis, John Waldie, and A. Holden, three local delegates to the meeting of the Grand Orange Lodge in Lindsay, this past week, were implicated in a little joke. After their lengthy meeting on Wednesday evening they found the hotel where they were staying locked tighter than Noah's Ark. After searching for a policeman they eventually discovered him, and although angry at being aroused from his slumbers, he let them into the hotel via the "side door."

BROTHER WHO ESCAPED TELLS OF HOW WALTER LIBBY MET HIS DEATH

On His Appearance at Window Firemen Spread Net, But the Young Man Was Probably Overcome by Smoke —Funeral on Sunday

The remains of the late Walter Libby, who met his death in the fire at Detroit on Thursday afternoon, were brought to the city last night on the second C.P.R. mid-night. Mr. Martin Libby, who was employed in the same factory as the unfortunate young man, accompanied the body.

In speaking of the fire, Mr. Martin Libby stated that it occurred shortly after one o'clock, on the third floor of the building, from an unknown cause. It was later reported to be an explosion, but this was erroneous. Mr. Libby had just left his brother, who had been left in charge of the plant, the proprietors, Messrs. Wilson and Short, being absent from the city. Walter Libby was working at his desk and could not have noticed the smoke. Martin and several other employes, saw it, however, and their fears of fire were confirmed when flames shot up the elevator. They rushed through the building to safety and when passing the office Mr. Libby noticed his brother. He thought he started out after him, but when he reached the ground floor Walter was no where to be seen.

One employe, named Charles Todd, stated afterwards that he had been about the last to leave the flat and when he was rushing out he saw Libby in the office frantically endeavoring to get in touch with the Fire Station via the telephone. In his first attempt he was unsuccessful, but he apparently did so a few seconds later. These few seconds cost him his life.

The fire had gained great headway on the intermediate flats and it was impossible for the young man to get out. He gathered up several of the company's drawings, etc., and later appeared at the window amid a cloud of smoke, with these articles in his hands. The firemen arrived and Walter Libby dropped his hat down to notify them where he was and the firemen immediately spread a net. The feeling of the vast crowd and of Martin Libby can hardly be imagined when Walter disappeared from the window. Whether overcome by smoke or whether he went back for some more of the company's goods will never be known. A ladder was strung up to the window and several firemen went up and commenced looking for the victim, but to no avail.

His body was found about six o'clock.

The funeral will take place from the residence of his father, Mr. Walter Libby, Parnell street, tomorrow afternoon at 2.30, to the Little Lake cemetery, service at the house at 2 o'clock by the Rev. H. J. Keith.

LARGE AUDIENCE GOOD CONCERT

A Pleasant Evening With St. George's Society.

The last monthly social evening of the season of St. George's Society held last evening was largely attended, and a delightful evening's entertainment provided.

President Walter Stocker presided, while the following assisted in the varied programme: Mrs. Read, Miss Ada Lees, Mr. T. Ward, Mr. F. Wainwright, Mr. Carter, Mr. C. Thorp, Mr. W. A. Greenslade, and Mr. M. Brooks.

No doubt the feature of the evening was the singing of Mr. Edward Jones, who rendered in excellent manner a song composed by Mr. Herbert Treener, the well-known organist of St. Andrew's Church. Mr. Treneer gave two beautiful instrumental solos.

Refreshments were served at the close.

OBSERVE ST. GEORGE'S DAY

Archbishop of Ottawa Will Come to Take Part

Arrangements for a special service on St. George's Day, April 23rd, are now well advanced. The Archbishop of Ottawa will take part in the service, and will give the Blessing. The sermon will be preached by the Bishop of Kingston, (Dr. Birdwell.) It is expected that the Archdeacon Canons and al arge number of clergy in the Archdeaconary of Peterorough will be present at the service.

Canon Davidson has very kindly offered the Rector and Churchwardens of St. George's church, the use of St. John's church for the occasion. The service will be held on Monday evening, April 20th, instead of St. George's Day proper, the 23rd April. This arrangement is necessary on account of the Archbishop's inability to visit Peterborough on any other day during April.

It is understood that this will be the first visit ever paid by an Anglican Archbishop to the city. It is true that the late Archbishop Sweetman, of Toronto, visited Peterborough, but his visit was that of a diocesan rather than that of a Metropolitan.

HON. ARTHUR MEIGHEN IS A GREAT DEBATER

HON. ARTHUR MEIGHEN, M.P., SOLICITOR-GENERAL.

The Hon. Arthur Meighen, M.P., Solicitor-General for Canada, who speaks at the public meeting in the Opera House on Monday evening, March 30th, is described in the Parliamentary Companion as having been born in Perth County, Ont. He is a Presbyterian and was first elected to Parliament in 1908. He first rose to prominence in 1912-13, when by his masterly analysis he paved the way for the closure and straightened out the Miller case. The state prisoner seemed likely to cause infinite trouble and ridicule, but Mr. Meighen showed the House how intimately its own jurisdiction was concerned and triumphed over all obstacles. He is a fluent and convincing speaker full of attack and sarcasm, when necessary. By some he is regarded as even the superior of Hon. Geo. E. Foster.

FATHER MINEHAN.

Rev. L. Minehan, perhaps the most noted Catholic priest in the Toronto diocese will speak at both the eight-thirty and ten-thirty masses to-morrow at the Church of the Sacred Heart. He will also speak at Vespers.

Prominent Hamilton Man Slashes His Throat With Razor.

HAMILTON, Ont., March 21.—James Gow, prominent business man, out on bail on a serious charge, committed suicide here yesterday afternoon by slashing his throat with a razor.

Gow shook like a leaf Thursday afternoon, being admitted to $2,000 bail. He rested uneasily Thursday night, and paced the hall yesterday like a man who had a tremendous load on his mind. He ate his dinner and then went back to the corridor, where he paced up and down. He suddenly turned into his room and then slashed his throat.

Gow was separated some time ago from his wife, who now resides in Buffalo. She sued for alimony and got an order.

It was stated on good authority here that when A. B. MacKay, now the remaining accused in the Gow-MacKay case, is brought for trial, the girl witnesses who testified at Thursday morning's police court hearing will not be called to give evidence again. The court stenographer's typewritten verbatim report of their testimony will be submitted as a substitute for their personal attendance. This would remove Crown Attorney Washington's objection to the press being admitted to the trial.

His Sister Receives an Annuity of $1500—Legacies for Relatives

Among the applications for probate of wills at the Surrogate Court here is that of the late Margaret Taylor, who died on June 28th, 1913, leaving an estate of $29,960.10 to be disposed of. The application is made by Messrs. Hall, Hayes and Hall, solicitors for the applicants and beneficiaries who are children of the deceased. The husband, William J. Taylor, has renounced all right to probate.

The children, George Ernest, Frederick Herbert, Anna Jane, Wm., all of Peterboro, Isabella Wilson Perry, of Toronto, are the beneficiaries. The amount for each is $5,487.22. The real estate evolved is, north half lot south of Charlotte Street, and west of George St., $24,500, and lots 17 and 18, and unsold lots 19 and 20, $4,160.00.

Dr. William Caldwell who passed away recently, left an estate of $48,727.55. Application is made for probate by Messrs. Peck, Kerr and McElderry.

The beneficiaries and amount for each are:

Annie Caldwell, sister, Peterborough, annuity of $1,500.

Eliza A. Brodigan, half sister or family, furniture and use of residence, residue of income for life.

Chas. A. Brodigan, nephew, or family, legacy of $3,000.

Jas. E. Oles, nephew, or family, Winnipeg, legacy of $3,000.

Mrs. Wm. Graham, cousin, or family, Fergus, Ont., legacy $2,500.

Mrs. Jos. Adams, cousin, or family, Montreal, legacy $1,000.

Mrs. James A. Stewart, cousin, or family, legacy of $2,500.

Mrs. T. Gardiner, friend, or family, Huntington, Que., legacy of $1,000.

Grace Henderson, niece, or family, legacy of $1,000.

John Henderson, nephew, Toronto, legacy of $1,000.

Ruth Henderson, niece, Toronto, $500.

Others benefitting by the will are Mary Cooper, legacy; servants, Children's Aid Society, and County of Peterborough, amounts not fixed.

The late Rev. T. J. Mansell left an estate of $3,000 to his widow, Jessie Mansell. Application for probate is made by G. N. Gordon, solicitor for the applicant, Mrs. Mansell. The estate includes real estate and insurance monies and an island in Harriman.

The late Katharine Rudkins, who passed away on Jan. 18th, 1914, left $7,330. Application is made for probate by Messrs. O'Connell and Corkery. The beneficiaries are William Rudkins, brother, Geraldine Rudkins niece, Kathleen Rudkins, and Patrick Rudkins. Each will receive an equal share of the estate.

THE LAKEHURST MAIL ROUTE

Bridge at Gannon's Narrows in Need of Repair.

Word comes that the bridge at Gannon's Narrows is not in shape to be used by the mail carrier and the consequence is, the service is interrupted. Reeve Shaw got an order from the County Council to go to work and mend the bridge at the county's expense. No government aid was asked for. It is an easy way to put the burden on the county. But it ought to be done promptly if it is to be done so that the public service will not be interrupted.

THREE SERVICES AT PARK ST. FOR SUNDAY

Meetings Yesterday Afternoon and Evening Brought Results

Friday was a great day at Parke Street Church. At the afternoon service from three to four, Evangelist Pugsley gave an address on The Joy of the Church. From four to five, he addressed over 100 school children on A Hive of B's. At the close 40 children confessed Christ.

At the evening service a large audience heard an address on the Four C's of Savation, Courage, Conflict, Conviction and Conversion, and every division was fully demonstrated in the after meeting when six persons, four adults and two boys, publicly confessed Christ.

Sunday will be the biggest day in the series. Services will be held as follows: 11 a.m., subject, Scars; 3 p.m., for women only, subject, My Mother; 7 p.m., subject, What is Hell? A large chorus will assist in the service. And everybody is welcome.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

Notes by Official Scribe.

The usual fortnightly meeting was held on Wednesday last, J. J. Hartley presiding.

The 25c. Minimum.

The City Clerk sent a reply to the Council's request for a 25c. minimum for city street employees. Mr. Armstrong stated that the Chairman of the Board of Works had to give work to aged and infirm men, to whom such a sum per hour was excessive. The Trades and Labor Council decided, after the letter was read, that old men have to be cared for as well as their younger brethren, and a strong committee was nominated to interview the Board of Works at its next session, and personally plead the cause of the city's laborers.

Labor Leaders Needed.

On a motion brought forward by a representative from the largest existing local, the Council decided that a move would be made in the direction of labor education, by asking speakers prominent in the labor world to speak on subjects of vital importance to the working man. The meetings would be open and announced in the local press, and it is to be hoped that the working men of the city would attend and take advantage of lessons learned from wide experience, as a galaxy of talent is always available.

A Technical Point.

Representatives from Local 191, American Federation of Musicians, wanted to know why the Council endorsed the Clayton houses and placed the Grand Opera House in the unfair list. The Royal employed union stage hands and non-union musicians, the Grand, union musicians and non-union stage hands. A warm discussion took place over this point, the union musicians of the Grand saying they could not come out without the sanction of their International, and objected to being villified by their action in not leaving the Opera House in sympathy with the stage employees. The Secretary then read a communication from Owen Miller, Secretary of the A. F. of M., who reported himself looking into the matter so as to bring about a settlement.

THE BILL OF INDEMNITY.

THE ROWELL Opposition in the Ontario Legislature was hard up for an excuse to assail the Whitney Government, when they provoked an all-night session over the bill to indemnify Mr. G. H. Ferguson for holding a commission to investigate the Trent Valley Canal affair. In Mr. Ferguson's case, the Ontario Legislature was not passing a special bill to indemnify a breach of constitutional law, but merely re-enacting a clause that had originally formed part of the statutes. This clause was embodied in the Statutes of Ontario for 1903, by the Liberal Government under the late Hon. G. W. Ross, with the assent of the then Whitney Opposition. When the statutes were revised in 1908, the clause in question was inadvertently omitted, and hence, when Mr. Ferguson took charge of the investigation, the old clause had to be re-enacted to protect him.

The clause that the Ross Government passed is as follows:

"(5) Nothing in this section shall render ineligible or disqualify to sit and vote in the Legislative Assembly any person holding any temporary employment in the service of the Dominion of Canada requiring professional skill."—Statutes of Ontario, 1903, c. 7.

Here is the clause passed the other day by the Whitney Government:—

"d—Any person holding any temporary employment in the service of the Dominion of Canada requiring special qualifications or professional skill, or a commissioner appointed under the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906, chapter 104."

How futile, inconsistent and ill-timed the Rowell Opposition to the bill was is apparent to all when the history of the point in question is reviewed. These points were well known to the Opposition, yet in spite of that and the futility of opposing a good measure tney set up a howl, the like of which has not been heard for many a long day. Their position illustrates their want of perspective, to say nothing of the bad manners of repudiating an act of their own party.

PRICE OF LABOUR RISING.

THE REVIEW has just received the fourteenth report on the Bureau of Labour, showing much satisfactory Municipal progress. There were reported 27,912 new buildings erected in 1912 costing $69,539,807, the expenditure on permanent improvements, such as roadways, bridges, etc., was $8,739,241 and on sanitation including sewers $4,008,545. The report shows a wider application of the principle of public ownership, the capitalization of utilities being considerably over $45,200,000 for the 223 Municipalities making returns.

The tables show that during the year 1912, two hundred and thirty buildings having cost $465,905 were erected in Peterborough and that $18,486 were spent on permanent improvements, while $16,749 were spent on sanitation including sewers. The value of the city's public utilities is placed at $539,920 which sum is credited to waterworks. The report shows that twelve labour unions exist in Peterborough with a total membership of 715. Changes in wages throughout the province have been fairly general. In seventy-three cases reported, the change was for an increase in wages, or a reduction in the number of hours of labour. In Peterborough, the bookbinders received an increase of $1.00 per week; flour-mill workers received an increase of $1.00 and $1.50 per week; iron moulders received an increase of seven per cent. and printers received an increase of $1.00 per week. The tables referring to strikes show that there were 554 strikes won, eighty-nine compromised, 261 pending, while sixty-five were lost. The strikes lost were mostly in those employments, where skill is at a minimum such as brewery workers, cigar makers, hotel employees, teamsters, but the same list included boiler makers, boot and shoe makers, carpenters, cloth hat makers, electrical workers, steam engineers and stereotypers. The total cost of strikes was $3,345,721.48.

The general tenor of the report, indicates that labour is in a healthy condition throughout the province, that the cost of labour is rising in proportion with the cost of living. It might be stated the reverse way that the cost of living is rising with the cost of labour and production. This fact is certain however, that prices are rising, not only in the selling price of goods, but also in the cost of goods. If more is to paid for goods in the store than was paid a couple of years ago, the buyers have more money with which to purchase goods. Whether the general rise in the price of goods and of labour is a beneficial thing for Canada's economic position in home and world competition, the future alone will tell. Whether it will permit a larger sale of European goods, manufactured under lower price conditions than prevail in Canada, the future will decide. Up to the present time, however, Canada has not felt seriously the upward trend in prices.

Winston Churchill Knocks Laurier.

Guelph Daily Herald.

Hon. Winston Churchill has once more earned the undying hate of Canadian Liberals. He emphasises the fact that Canada's contribution to Empire defence is as greatly needed as it ever was, and that the Admiralty's memorandum has been strengthened by the passage of time. The pity of it is that Canadians have to be reminded of the fact so plain to all but the obstinate Liberals.

IS THERE AN HONEST MAN?

IN ANCIENT DAYS, the people laughed at old Diogenes for going through the streets with a lantern in the day time, looking for an honest man. This old cynical criticizer of Grecian standards would have just as hard a time finding an absolutely honest man to-day as he did 2400 years ago. When we read in the papers of scandal in high places, we sometimes think that perhaps Diogenes would have a harder task than in his own far-off time. The Trent Valley scandal, the Evanturel episode, the misappropriation of forty millions on the Grand Trunk Pacific, the Quebec Legislature scandal, all emphasize the lack of honest men. Recently we read of a legal scandal, in regard to the trial of the murderer, Krafchenko, in Winnipeg. From Hamilton a day or so ago, comes the story of two prominent business men being charged with very serious offences. These are only a few isolated cases of persons who have taken the step beyond the limit of toleration or endurance, and who are held up to public scorn. One is tempted to ask, in view of the widespread prevalence of scandal among persons occupying public or high social positions, if our national standards of honesty do not invite such offences. When it is commonly stated that merchants do not tell the truth about the goods they sell; when ministers compromise with evil and do not preach what they believe; when buyers invariably try to haggle down the price on the assumption that a man always asks more than he will take for the article; when the article has to be represented to be twice as good as it is to sell it, one questions very much, whether the rule, "Honesty is the best policy," has any real bearing on the details of every-day life. Much as we may deprecate such affairs as the Trent Valley Canal scandal, does it not show that the beginning of such misdeeds is due to a two great emphasis on the pursuit of the almighty dollar, to the lack of proper home training on the value of money and its relation to the higher, perhaps non-essential, things in life? There certainly appears to be too little training in the home of what real honesty means, too great a desire to sacrifice principles and morality in the pursuit of money for its own sake.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

RECENT HOTEL fires in Toronto and other places should not pass into memory without performing some service to the public. Ontario has been advancing rapidly along the line of license inspection, prohibition, regulations, and early closing. Practically all reforms have been directed towards the bar end of the business, with the result that the most important function of a hotel, a safe resting place for the travelling public, has been neglected. In the effort to cater to temperance and prohibition sentiment, recent fires would indicate that safety for guests has been overlooked.

In regard to Peterborough, we are informed by Chief Howard, that a local by-law compels him to make inspections of hotels once a year in company with the License Inspector and also to make occasional visits as often as required if some alderman or citizen makes claim of its advisability. There is also a law of the Provincial Legislature compelling fire chiefs to make these inspections, but it seems that the practice is to have the law carried out by the local municipal bodies.

In large cities like Toronto, the Chief is relieved of these inspections by Battalion Chiefs, but this practice appears to be inadequate for the matter is really under the jurisdiction of the city architect's department. In small cities like Peterborough, the chief has to inspect all public buildings and his inspections seem to provide the necessary protection.

It would appear that there is little uniformity throughout the Province as to laws and regulations regarding fire protection in hotels and public buildings. The smaller cities like Peterborough seem to enjoy the best protection because the fire chief's duties permit adequate inspections, but there are many other places, towns and villages, where inspections are not made, where there is little fire protection and where there are many old shacks that are just fire traps for those that have to stay in them. In the larger cities like Toronto, the safety from fire provided by the architect's department seems to be a minus quantity.

The problem is one for provincial legislation. There should be some standard throughout the Province for hotel buildings and fire protection, by which licenses would not be granted unless the buildings were perfectly safe for guests.

THE ELECTRICAL NEWS draws attention to the export of Canadian power to the United States. While there is a proviso that Canada is allowing power to be exported till only such time as the Canadian industrial activities will require its use in Canada, it is doubtful whether the proviso could ever be enforced. When such large units as 46,000 horse-power are exported, and American industries are built up on the use of this power, it is more than likely that Canada could not stop the export if she wanted the power for herself, without creating serious international difficulties. Owing to Ontario's great industrial development, more and more power will be required, and no Ontario municipality should be hampered by having large quantities of power exported for use in American factories.

THE MONTREAL GAZETTE contained the following paragraph:—"Some Conservatives, it is stated, were among those charged with making improper profits out of the Trent Canal construction works. The situation thus created is easy of solution. Let wrongdoers be treated as wrongdoers and sort themselves politically afterwards."

The Gazette has the right view. We believe there are some honest Grits left who will insist that their party prune itself of barnacles. Conservatives can take the same attitude and politics will be better for the renovation.

A Verdict.

Toronto News.

It is said that asafoetida is used in the manufacture of cigarettes. After a few minutes with a Frenchman in our acquaintance we are convinced that the statement is not true enough.

STATESMEN

By Walt Mason

They do not sow, they do not reap, they do not shear the gentle sheep, or milk the sad-eyed cow; they do not build, they do not till, they toil not in the noisy mill, nor guide the mule-drawn plow. We've heard them tell us we are grand, the bone and sinew of the land, and we have cheered and grinned; but words were all we ever got from all that smiling statesman lot, for all they sell is wind. We take our produce to the store, and haul it twenty miles or more, to get provisions tinned; but statesmen get all things they need, the very finest goods, indeed, and all they pay is wind. We work till we are halt and blind, and if we get a month behind, threats in our ears are dinned; but statesmen do not work at all; they loaf in palace and in hall, and square the bill with wind. They drink the noblest wines of Spain, and eat the butter of the Dane, and fruits from tropic Ind; the luxuries of every land are evermore at their command, and all they pay is wind. What chumps we are, to toil and strain, and worry till we go insane, supporting such a group of parasites, who live at ease while we are spavining our knees to get the children soup!

Birthdays of Note

SATURDAY, MARCH TWENTY-FIRST

This is the sixty-third birthday of W. H. Rowley, president of the E. B. Eddy Company, Ottawa, and one of the foremost manufacturers of the Dominion. Mr. Rowley belongs to a banking family. His father, the late Lt.-Col. Rowley of Yarmouth, N.S., was a banker and he and three younger brothers all went in for banking. While the latter are still prominently connected with Canadian chartered banks, W. H. Rowley was early switched into industrial management. The Merchants' Bank, of which he was local manager in Ottawa, became so much involved in the Eddy undertakings that it was found necessary in 1887 to step in and reorganize the company. Mr. Rowley was made secretary-treasurer and on the death of E. B. Eddy, succeeded to the presidency. This arrangement gave him an opening for the exercise of his administrative ability and he has been wonderfully successful.

SUNDAY, MARCH TWENTY-SECOND

This is the fifty-third birthday of a Canadian, who is trying to do something for his country by rescuing from the rushing current of time, records, manuscripts and documents, that would otherwise be swept into oblivion. He is Dr. Arthur G. Doughty and his official title is Dominion Archivist. In a plain stone building near Parliament Hill in Ottawa, he is almost feverishly busy in classifying, indexing and storing away everything of historical value that he can lay his hands upon. Some day the value of his work will be better appreciated than it is at present. Meanwhile he is the right man for the job. An Englishman by birth, he has spent a good many years in Canada, first as a clerk in Montreal, then as a private secretary to a Quebec minister, later as joint librarian of the Legislative Library and since 1904 as Dominion Archivist.

STANDING OF FORCES.

Wide Difference Shown in Reports of Covenanters' Strength.

LONDON, March 21.—In view of the partisan claims regarding the number of men, the organization and equipment of the Ulster volunteers' statements by Col. Decourt, military correspondent of The London Times, and H. W. Nevinson, a prominent Liberal writer of The Nation, who have been touring Ulster, are important.

Col. Decourt says the 110,00 men enrolled are in the flower of their age and of excellent physique. Decentralization has been the system of organization. Each county forms a separate unit. There are 65 battalions, of which there are eighteen in Belfast. The volunteers have 400 motor cars, 200 motor cycles, and a complete system of communication by flags, lamps and heliographs. Eighty thousand rifles, according to Col. Decourt, have been distributed in parcels each containing five, to selected men so that wholesale seizure of the weapons would be impossible.

Mr. Nevinson intimates that between 20,000 and 100,000 men will respond to call for the mobilization of the volunteers. He thinks the rifles of the volunteers obsolete and of several different patterns, and that ammunition is scarce.

"In scattered groups," continued Mr. Nevinson, "they would try to harass the regular army sent to occupy the country. The movement, therefore, is not a bluff proper. Neither is it formidable from a military point of view. The intention is serious though fantastic, and it is formidable because no one wants to shoot his own people."

WRONG BODY SENT.

Remains Shipped to New York Not Those of Max Cohan.

TORONTO, March 21.—Five bodies have now been removed from the ruins of the Woodbine Hotel and only four have been identified. These are those of Cohan, Graham, Wilmot and Levenson. The body first taken out was not Cohan's, and its presence in the building cannot be explained.

The mystery of the unknown body, the first one found, is difficult of solution. When first taken from the hotel it was positively identified as that of Max Cohan, New York, by his own brother, and was sent to New York for burial. Now it has been proven this was all a mistake. Cohan's and Levenson's bodies were found yesterday afternoon side by side ten feet from that of the bull terrier they presumably re-entered the building to rescue.

Either the body first thought to be Cohan's is that of an unknown guest or of a person who entered the hotel after the fire was discovered, perhaps to lend assistance.

Anti-Catholic Letter Written?

BERLIN, March 21.—An alleged letter from Emperor William, in which he is said to have expressed strong anti-Catholic views, is attracting much attention in the press. The letter is understood to have been written by His Majesty to the Landgravine of Hesse, who was a princess of Prussia and was converted to the Catholic faith on Oct. 2, 1901.

The Volksfreund of Aix-La-Chapelle, a Catholic newspaper, declares the letter to contain the phrase: "I hate the religion which you have adopted."

The letter is said to have been found among the papers of the late Cardinal Kopp.

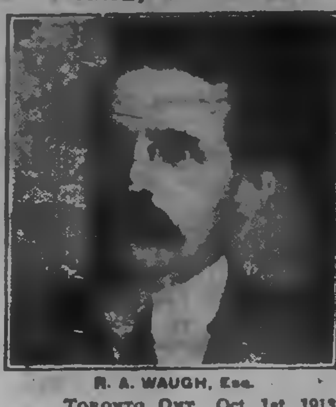
Supt. Of Sunday School In Toronto Cured By "Fruit-a-tives"



R. A. WAUGH, Esq.

TORONTO, ONT., Oct. 1st, 1913.

"For a long time, I have thought of writing you regarding what I term a most remarkable cure effected by your remedy "Fruit-a-tives". I have lived in this city for more than 12 years and am well known. I suffered from Rheumatism especially in my hands. I have spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now and am pleased to tell you that I am cured. All the enlargement has not left my hands and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in 18 months".

Tarzan of the Apes

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

Copyright by the Frank A. Munsey Co.

"I have read everything that was in the cabin with the exception of one book, which I know now to be written in a language other than English. Possibly you can read it."

Tarzan fished the little black diary from the bottom of his quiver and handed it to his companion.

"It is the diary of John Clayton, Lord Greystoke, an English nobleman, and it is written in French," he said.

D'Arnot read it aloud. Occasionally his voice broke, and he was forced to stop reading for the hopelessness that spoke between the lines.

Often he glanced at Tarzan, but the ape man sat upon his haunches like a carven image, his eyes fixed upon the ground.

Only when the little babe was mentioned did the tone of the diary alter from the habitual note of despair which had crept into it by degrees after the first two months upon the shore.

Then the passages were tinged with a subdued happiness that was even sadder than the rest.

One entry showed an almost hopeful spirit:

> Today our little boy is six months old. He has grabbed my pen in his chubby fist and with his ink begrimed little fingers has placed the seal of his tiny finger prints upon the page.

Upon the margin of the page were the partially blurred imprints of four wee fingers and the outer half of the thumb.

When D'Arnot had finished the diary the two men sat in silence for some minutes.

"Well, Tarzan of the apes, what think you?" asked D'Arnot. "Does not this little book clear up the mystery of your parentage? You are Lord Greystoke."

Tarzan shook his head.

"The book speaks of but one child," he replied. "Its skeleton lay in the crib, where it died crying for nourishment, from the first time I entered the cabin until Professor Porter's party buried it, with its father and mother, beside the cabin."

A week later the two men came suddenly upon a clearing in the forest.

In the distance were several buildings surrounded by a strong palisade. Between them and the inclosure stretched a cultivated field in which a number of negroes were working.

Tarzan started straight across the field, his head high held and the tropical sun beating upon his smooth, brown skin.

Behind him came D'Arnot, clothed in some garments which had been discarded at the cabin by Clayton when the officers of the French cruiser had fitted him out in more presentable fashion.

Presently one of the blacks looked up and, beholding Tarzan striding toward him, turned, shrieking, and made for the palisade.

In an instant the air was filled with cries of terror from the fleeing gardeners, but before any had reached the palisade a white man emerged from the inclosure, rifle in hand, to discover the cause of the commotion.

D'Arnot cried loudly to him:

"Do not fire! We are friends!"

"Halt, then!" was the reply.

"Stop, Tarzan!" cried D'Arnot, halting the ape man in his tracks.

"He thinks we are enemies."

Tarzan dropped into a walk, and together he and D'Arnot advanced toward the white man by the gate.

The latter eyed them in puzzled bewilderment.

"What manner of men are you?" he asked in French.

"White men," replied D'Arnot. "We have been lost in the jungle for a long time."

"I am Father Constantin of the French mission here," said the other. "I am glad to welcome you."

"This is M. Tarzan, Father Constantin," replied D'Arnot, indicating the ape man, and as the priest extended his hand to Tarzan D'Arnot added, "And I am Paul d'Arnot of the French navy."

Father Constantin took the hand which Tarzan extended in imitation of the priest's act, while the latter took in the superb physique and handsome face in one quick, keen glance.

Thus came Tarzan of the apes to the first outpost of civilization.

For a week they remained there, and the ape man, keenly observant, learned much of the ways of men, while black women sewed upon white duck garments for himself and D'Arnot that they might continue their journey properly clothed.

Another month brought them to a little group of buildings at the mouth of a wide river, and there Tarzan saw many boats and was filled with the old timidity by the sight of many men.

Gradually he became accustomed to the strange noises and the odd ways of civilization, so that presently none might know that two short months before this handsome Frenchman in immaculate white ducks, who laughed and chatted with the gayest of them, had been swinging naked through primeval forests to pounce upon some unwary victim, which, raw, was to appease his savage appetite.

The knife and fork, so contemptuously flung aside a month before, Tarzan now manipulated as exquisitely as did the polished D'Arnot.

So apt a pupil had he been that the young Frenchman had labored assiduously to make of Tarzan a polished gentleman in so far as nicety of manners and speech was concerned.

"Heaven made you a gentleman at heart, my friend," D'Arnot had said; "but we want its work to show upon the exterior also."

As soon as they had reached the little port D'Arnot had cabled his government of his safety and requested a three months' leave, which had been granted.

He also cabled his bankers for funds, and the enforced wait of a month, under which both chafed, was due to their inability to charter a vessel for the return to Tarzan's jungle after the treasure. At last, however, D'Arnot succeeded in chartering an ancient tub for the coastwise trip to Tarzan's landlocked harbor.

It was a happy morning for them both when the little vessel weighed anchor and made for the open sea.

The trip to the beach was uneventful, and the morning after they dropped anchor before the cabin Tarzan, garbed once more in his jungle regalia and carrying a spade, set out alone for the amphitheater of the apes where lay the treasure.

Late the next day he returned, bearing the great chest upon his shoulders, and at sunrise the little vessel was worked through the harbor's mouth and took up her northward journey.

Three weeks later Tarzan and D'Arnot were passengers on board a French steamer bound for Lyons, and after a few days in that city D'Arnot took Tarzan to Paris.

The ape man was anxious to proceed to America, but D'Arnot insisted that he must accompany him to Paris first, nor would he divulge the nature of the urgent necessity upon which he based his demand.

CHAPTER XX.

The Light of Civilization.

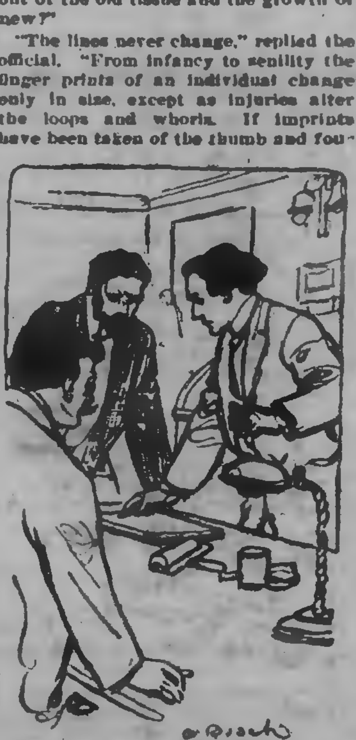
ONE of the first things which D'Arnot accomplished after their arrival was to arrange to visit a high official of the police department, an old friend of D'Arnot's. He took Tarzan with him.

Adroitly D'Arnot led the conversation from point to point until the policeman had explained to the interested Tarzan many of the methods in vogue for apprehending and identifying criminals.

Not the least interesting to Tarzan was the part played by finger prints in this fascinating science.

"But of what value are these imprints," asked Tarzan, "when after a few years the lines upon the fingers are entirely changed by the wearing out of the old tissue and the growth of new?"

"The lines never change," replied the official. "From infancy to senility the finger prints of an individual change only in size, except as injuries alter the loops and whorls. If imprints have been taken of the thumb and four fingers of both hands one must needs lose all entirely to escape identification."



"Do finger prints show racial characteristics?"

"It is marvelous," exclaimed D'Arnot. "I wonder what the lines upon my fingers resemble."

"We can soon see," replied the police officer, and, ringing a bell, he summoned an assistant, to whom he issued a few directions.

The man left the room to return presently with a little hardwood box, which he placed on his superior's desk.

"Now," said the officer, "you shall have your finger prints in a second."

He drew from the little case a square of plate glass, a little tube of thick ink, a rubber roller and a few snowy white cards.

Squeezing a drop of ink on to the glass, he spread it back and forth with the rubber roller until the entire surface of the glass was covered with a very thin and uniform layer of ink.

"Place the four fingers of your right hand upon the glass thus," he said to D'Arnot; "now the thumb. That's right. Now place them in just the same position upon this card here; no, a little to the right. We must leave room for the thumb and the fingers of the left hand. There, that's it. Now the same with the left."

"Come, Tarzan," cried D'Arnot, "let's see what your whorls look like."

Tarzan complied readily, asking many questions of the officer during the operation.

"Do finger prints show racial characteristics?" he asked. "Could you determine, for example, solely from the prints whether the subject was negro or Caucasian?"

"I think not," replied the officer, "though some claim that those of the negro are less complex."

"Could the finger prints of an ape be detected from those of a man?"

"Probably, because the ape's would be far simpler than those of the higher organism."

"But a cross between an ape and a man might show the characteristics of either progenitor?" continued Tarzan.

"I should think likely," responded the official. "But the science has not progressed sufficiently to render it exact enough in such matters. I should hate to trust its findings further than to differentiate between individuals.

"There it is absolutely definite. No two people born into the world probably have ever had identical lines upon all their digits."

"Does the comparison require much time or labor?" asked D'Arnot.

"Ordinarily but a few moments, if the impressions are distinct."

D'Arnot drew a little black book from his pocket and commenced turning the pages.

Tarzan looked at the book in surprise. How did D'Arnot come to have his book?

Presently D'Arnot stopped at a page on which were five tiny little smudges.

He handed the open book to the policeman.

"Are these imprints similar to mine or M. Tarzan's? Can you say that they are identical with either?"

The officer drew a powerful glass from his desk and examined all three specimens carefully, making notations meanwhile upon a pad of paper.

Tarzan realized now what was the meaning of their visit to the police officer.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Severe Case of a Philadelphia Woman—Her Symptoms.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, constipation, headaches, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness.

"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I threw away the medicines the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to sit up and in a short time I was able to do all my work. Your medicine has proved itself able to do all you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited."—Mrs. MARY JOHNSTON, 210 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Bad Case.

Ephrata, Pa.—"About a year ago I was down with nervous prostration. I was pale and weak and would have hysteric spells, sick headaches and a bad pain under my shoulder-blade. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand long enough to do my dishes.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and happy and I have begun to gain in weight and my face looks healthy now."—Mrs. J. W. HORNBERGER, R. No. 3, Ephrata, Pa.

Schiller and Goethe.

Schiller was, from all accounts, a much finer man than Goethe, but in mental grasp and artistic power the Sage of Weimar was head and shoulders above his dear friend Schiller. The Germans know this, and while they love Schiller far more than they do Goethe, they are not blind to the fact that the latter was much the greater intellect.—New York American.

A Candid Opinion.

Mr. Harris had been considering for some time the advisability of approaching his son's schoolteacher in regard to that young man's studies. He was sure William was not getting along as fast as he should, and this fact worried the father greatly.

He was greeted kindly by the teacher, and after a few preliminary questions the father inquired:

"What branch do you consider the most profitable for my son William, Mr. Flint?"

"I can hardly say, but I think a good, stout blue beech or a long, sinuous birch would do him as much good as any."

Located at Last.

Drummer (settling bill in Eagle House, Hayfield)—Pardon my curiosity, sir, but what do you stuff your beds with in this hotel?

Landlord (proudly) — Best straw to be had in this bull county, b'gosh!

Drummer—Ah! That is very interesting. I know now where the straw came from that broke the camel's back!

Novels.

Novels are sweets. All people with healthy literary appetite love them. Almost all women, a vast number of clear, hard-headed men, judges, bishops, chancellors, mathematicians, are notorious novel readers, as well as young boys and sweet girls and their kind, tender mothers. — William Makepeace Thackeray.

Woman's World

The Ill Health of the Kaiserin a Matter of International Interest.

THE KAISERIN OF GERMANY.

Rumors of the ill health of the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria have been circulated for some time. While long officially denied, it is at last apparent that they are not without foundation for at the latest court function in Berlin, where the kaiserin is expected to stand with the kaiser through part of the ceremonies, she remained seated on the dais. It is said she is suffering from heart trouble. Gossip says that this affliction was brought on by her use several years ago of anti-fat preparations which contained iodine. Knowing that her husband was an admirer of slender women, the royal lady tried to keep down her own increasing weight by the use of these preparations, whose injurious properties were discovered too late.

The kaiserin is fifty-six years of age. She has been married to the kaiser for thirty-three years, and the union, for a royal one, has been singularly happy. In the numerous differences that the kaiser has had with the crown prince she has acted as mediator. She is a woman of tact, good sense and amiable disposition and has endeared herself much to the German people. Her ill health is therefore a matter of much concern to her husband's subjects. It is said that the kaiser has much confidence in her judgment, and in many international affairs her cool, good sense has served to restrain her impulsive and hot headed husband when he was tempted to act rashly. She is believed to be the real power behind the throne in Berlin, although her influence is exercised so quietly and tactfully that most of the world and chiefly those interested are unaware of it.

A SUCCESSFUL VENTURE.

Municipal Market Due to the Enterprise of Local Housewives.

No less a city than Los Angeles has been quietly but successfully developing a plan for municipal markets. Three markets were opened the first week of last May and three more last July. In the first two months about 3,000 people appeared in the markets, many of whom were women who sold bread, cake, jelly, etc., and who were encouraged in every way.

Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday were chosen as market days, and a charge of 15 cents a day for the use of a stall was made to each vender. This trifling expense, however, covers the operating expense of the market and includes the services of the superintendent and an inspector. These men go the rounds of the market to see that no inferior goods are offered for sale and to prevent the operation of disreputable hucksters who buy up tainted food.

The city did not appropriate funds for this market, but lent a certain sum, which paid for the lease of the ground and the various salaries. At first the stalls and booths were not permanent, but the success of the scheme has been so great that permanent stalls are being made and fitted up.

Los Angeles has benefited by this market to the extent that fully 25,000 people on market days come with their own baskets to carry things home. The result has been not only reduced cost to the consumer, but a great increase in the production, because every owner of a small lot of suburban property has begun cultivating produce to bring to the market where he can exhibit almost free and with very little expense of transportation.

One of the interesting phases of the market is the issuing of a monthly bulletin suggesting what to plant. All questions on gardening are also answered by an expert. These bulletins are widely distributed among school children, as in many Los Angeles schools gardening forms part of the work.

Recipe Notes

Rich Fruit Cake.

One pound each of seedless raisins, figs, currants and almonds, one-quarter pound each of orange and lemon peel, one large piece of citron, one-half pound candied cherries. Coarsely chop the figs, peel and citron. Roll the fruit in flour and have ready. Mix one cupful of butter with two cupfuls of brown sugar until it becomes like thick cream, add the yolks and whites of six eggs beaten separately, one and one-half cupfuls of cane molasses, one cupful of milk or cold coffee, the juice and rind of two large lemons, two teaspoonfuls each of ground allspice, cloves and cinnamon, four heaping cupfuls of flour mixed with two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Add the fruit and mix thoroughly. Line a deep pan with buttered paper, fill half full with the mixture and bake in a moderate oven three hours.

Attractive Salads.

Grape salad is delicious. Seed, skin and cut into halves two pounds of green Malaga grapes; mix with one cupful of nice celery, cut into small pieces, and a little chopped cucumber pickle. Serve with the following dressing: Heat in a saucepan two eggs, one cupful of vinegar, one-half cupful of sugar, a seasoning of salt and pepper, a teaspoonful of mustard, butter the size of a walnut and a teaspoonful of cornstarch, wet and made smooth with a little cream. Stir until it comes to a boil. Set aside, stirring occasionally until cool, then add a small cupful of cream which has been beaten with a little sugar.

Harrison Cake.

Harrison cake is a rare old classic among American cakes. It calls for four cupfuls of flour, three cupfuls of molasses or half this amount of sugar, one cupful and a half of butter, two cupfuls of milk, four eggs, a teaspoonful of soda and two pounds of raisins. Cream the butter, add the sugar or molasses and then the milk and eggs beaten together. Stir this mixture into the flour and soda, which should be sifted together several times. Add the fruit after sprinkling it with a little flour. Bake the cake in a slow oven for four hours.

Stewed Beef Fillet.

To prepare this take a piece of beef from the undercut of the sirloin, two or three slices of bacon, an onion, a carrot, a turnip, stock, herbs and seasoning. Slice the vegetables and put them in a saucepan with a bunch of seasoning herbs, a few peppercorns, allspice, a clove, the bacon and beef. Add stock to come about halfway up the meat; cover and simmer gently for about two hours. Put the meat on a hot dish. Strain the gravy, rubbing the vegetables through a sieve to thicken it. Reheat and serve very hot.

Oyster Salad.

For this take one pint of celery cut in half inch pieces, fifty large oysters, a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, a little red pepper. Pick over and wash the oysters, put in a saucepan with the salt and a dash of red pepper, shake over the fire until plumped. Drain, set aside until cold; then mix with celery and French dressing. Line a salad bowl with lettuce leaves, arrange salad in it and garnish with mayonnaise and nasturtiums.

Silver Sponge Cake.

Beat the whites of five eggs until stiff and dry and add gradually while beating constantly three-quarters of a cupful of sugar, mixed and sifted with one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar.

Sift in one-half cupful of bread flour and one teaspoonful of vanilla and cut and fold until well blended. Fill buttered gem pans two-thirds full, sprinkle with powdered sugar and bake in a moderate oven.

The Limit.

I can stand for the man with the cute little bow
  On the back of his green colored hat.
For there are a lot of good fellows I know
  Who sometimes have fallen for that;
The fedora of plush is a lid I don't like—
  It's a fad that will never be missed—
But somehow I've always an itching to strike
  The man with the watch on his wrist.

I grow peevish at times at the ladylike man
  Who says "Mercy me!" and "Oh, dear!"
And the chap in the ballroom who uses a fan
  Is the chap I could swat on the ear,
The swell with the cane in the crotch of his arm
  Isn't human, I often insist,
But some day somebody is going to harm
  The man with the watch on his wrist.

IN LOVE WITH PICTURE.

Portraits Have Frequently Exerted Fascination on Beholders.

"I fell in love with 'Mona Lisa'."

That was the declaration of Vicenzo Perugia, the man who stole the famous picture, made to the police. After he had taken it from the Louvre he said that he went home, locked himself in his room, and stood entranced before it, bewitched by the smile of La Gioconda.

There were times, he said, when he felt that he must destroy the picture or he would go mad, so haunting was the smile.

"Mona Lisa" has always had admirers. One of the Louvre guides at the time the picture was stolen, stated that he had seen visitors sit in front of it for hours, captivated by the seductive smile; and the museum authorities often used to have letters addressed to "The original of 'Mona Lisa'."

Far more famous people than Vicenzo Perugia have fallen madly in love with well-known pictures. It was Millais' picture "Ophelia," exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1852, that gave Dante Gabriel Rossetti his wife.

Millais searched for a very long time before he obtained a suitable model for his well-known painting, but he, at length, found the lady he wanted serving as an assistant behind the counter of a bonnet shop. She was the daughter of a Sheffield tradesman, and so beautiful did Rosetti think her as "Ophelia" that he implored the great artist to introduce him to her. Deeply as he had fallen in love with the picture, he fell head over ears with the original, and married her shortly afterwards.

A romantic story is attached to a picture exhibited at the Royal Academy a few years ago. It showed a sweet-faced young girl "in maiden meditation," and one of the visitors who stopped in front of it was a middle-aged Australian named Phillips.

To his amazement he recognised the girl as his first and only love, the one through whom he had left England and sought a living in far-away Australia.

He at once sought out the painter and discovered that the original of the picture was the daughter of the love of his younger days. She had lost both her parents and was making a precarious living as an artist's model, but before six months were out, she was the wife of the wealthy Australian who had so romantically found her.

Some people actually fall in love with statues, and it would be a bold man who would state the number of people in love with the Venus de Milo.

Everyone knows Luke Field's great picture, "The Doctor," with his kindly tense face, gazing anxiously at the little child who hovers between life and death.

When it was exhibited one of the most distinguished of British actors, now dead, used to visit the Academy day after day to look at it, and he related that one afternoon he saw a young couple come suddenly before the picture.

The young wife, evidently struck by some likeness in the child's face, burst into tears, and her grief and that of her husband were so distressing that for some moments the great actor himself felt overcome with emotion, and the tears came to his eyes, as to those of many people standing round.

"It was one of the most pathetic scenes I ever witnessed," said the actor afterwards.

The late King of Bavaria fell so much in love with a stone bust of the ill-fated Marie Antoinette that he came at last to regard the stone image as the reincarnation of the queen herself! He always had it placed by his side when he had his meals, ordering the most costly food to be placed before it, and speaking to the bust in the most tender tones.

THE COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL SERVICE AND EVANGELISM

of the subjects it discussed. One feature that impressed itself on all was the fact that only a very few years have elapsed since it would not only have been impossible to get together a gathering with the aims and objects that animated the congress, but the people who listened last week with thoughtful and earnest concern would have refused to hear. A new attitude toward these things has brown up both within and without the church.

The congress held 6 day and 3 evening sessions. Of the former, one whole session was devoted to each of The Church and Industrial Life, Commercialized Vice and the White Slave Traffic, Political Purity, and Temperance. One forenoon was devoted to sectional conferences on Child Walfare, The Problem of the City and the Problem of the Country.

At the evening meetings speakers of note who took part were Dr. Chas. Stetzle, consulting sociologist, of New York, who spoke on "The Call of the New Day to the Old Church," and "Capturing the Labor Movement." Prof. Graham Taylor, of Chicago, spoke on "The Great Social Awakening." Dr. G. C. Pidgeon, Vancouver, discussed Immigration and the Labor Situation. Dr. C. N. Gordon (Ralph Connor), dealt with the "The New Church and the New State," and Ven. Archdeacon Cody, who spoke on Gambling.

Common Man.

Dr. Stelzle, in his great address on capturing the labor movement, said: "This is the era of the common man. Slowly but surely the mass of the people are coming into their own. For ages they fought for religious democracy and they won. For centuries they strove for political democracy and again they won. To-day they strive for industrial democracy and if I read the signs aright, they will win. Laboring men are familiar with this spirit of democracy in their clubs, in their lodges, yea in the saloon. They must meet this spirit of democracy in the church. Some day God will raise up a prophet who will win unto himself the common people, and that day will decide whether the church is to capture the labor movement or the labor movement is to capture the church."

Professor Andrews, of Regina, is one of the fost thoughtful and convincing address of the congress, speaking on political purity, enunciated and elaborated three principles:

1. Christ will never be King till He is supreme in politics. There is no salvation but through politics.

2. We are living in an age in which the functions of parliament are gradually widening.

3. Enormous increase in the resources of the world makes them now for the first time equal to the needs. Therefore poverty and war, the age-long crimes of civilization, must cease.

Resolutions.

Resolutions were passed dealing with the following matters. The Dominion Government was called on

To appoint a Royal Commission to investigate and make a report on the coal miner's strike on Vancouver Island.

To prevent the manufacture, importation and sale of cigarettes in Canada.

To establish free employment bureaus.

To appoint a Royal Commission to investigate the unemployment problem.

To enact a policy that will raise the Indians to a level of citizenship.

To adopt a closer inspection of immigrants from Southern Europe.

To create a department of child welfare, to give pensions to mothers.

To initiate an old-age pension scheme, and

To assist the extension of co-operative societies.

The congress went on record as being in favor of woman suffrage, labor unions, total abstinence, and social survey work, and passed a resolution recommending that civil servants be appointed for the outside service in the same way as for the inside service.

SUPERVISED PLAY GROUNDS THE BENEFITS TO BE HAD; FOR BETTER CITIZENSHIP

The public meeting of the Council of Women, held yesterday afternoon, was very largely attended. Those who were present were indeed fortunate for two exceedingly interesting and very instructive addresses were given. The first one, delivered by Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton, dealt with a question which confronts this city at the present time. That is, "Supervised Playgrounds."

"In this age," began Mrs. Middleton, "when we boast of our 20th century civilization with all its advantages to promote health and happiness, is it not well for us to ask ourselves if these benefits are divided, in proper proportion between the child and the adult?

In the early history of our country, child life was a vastly different problem from the complexity of things we find in our crowded cities to-day. In the open country there was such a diversity of occupation for the child that the play element was largely combined with the struggle for existence. The physical part developed often out of due proportion to the intellectual and moral, but a great essential foundation was being laid and it required only a proper invironment to make the being master of the other phases.

We hear the statement of, and see on every hand, the many ills that are besetting the average city child of to-day, and that city will do well, which provides a means of prevention rather than a cure, when the case is almost hopeless.

One of the natural, Heaven sent tendencies of childhood is play, and under what great difficulties is this trait developed in our own city. Our authorities and guardians of our city property, would seem to place more stress on blades of grass, than on boys and girls. Our plea then, is more playgrounds, more play, and a better kind of play.

Not For Play Only.

Rev. John McCoy, of Massachusetts, a great mover in organized playgrounds, in a lecture delivered at a church in his native city, said, in part:—

"The word playground does not mean simply a place to play, where children can gather and follow their own sweet will. It means a place where play is under trained and wise direction, where a game master, as skilled in his line as a grammar master in his, or a high school teacher in his, controls. This game master or director must of necessity be a man of at least as high character as the school teacher. He deals with boys in their tennest hours, when the blood is leaping, when every enthusiasm is flaming, and to direct them in such an hour for the greatest good a superior man is needed. He must know games, and if an athlete himself, so much the better, ut this is not the half of it. He must be a real man, clean, truthful, firm, fair, gentle, enthusiastic, with imagination and with kindly heart. Any other will be a failure with the young, whose vision is clearer than that of their elders where goodness lies.

The promoters of the playground idea had in mind at first only the physical and moral dangers of the streets, and wished to take the children from these dangers. Every season the possibilities for good in the playgrounds widen, become more surely defined, and now we look for ideals not only in conduct but in educational advances as well. Dr. Curtis says that six things are sought in the playgrounds:—

First—The promotion of physical health of children in the open air.

Second—The development of physical strength.

Third—The development of vital or organic strength.

Fourth—The establishment of right habits.

Fifth—The development of energy and enthusiasm.

Sixth—Pleasure.

The open air is the breath of God and it heals forever. The Germans look upon the open playground as the first and best of sanitaria and find it cheaper and more wholesome than hospitals. The study of the great white plague has made playgrounds in the fatherland a multitude. The child in the city has little chance for exercise.. He has no work, and a few minutes each day in school under a teacher of gymnastics is all that keys him up to the muscular measure required for a vigorous manhood. He is deeply wronged when not given chance for play. Most games of children have to do with running and leaping wherein their feelings have vent in shoutings. All this strengthens the lungs and heart and other vital organs .To this end they must have place to play. The finer side of the child nature has small chance for development when the child is alone. He should have his sense of loyalty and friendship awakened. Teamwork, the glory of his playground in every contest, does this, and the greater glory of love for country is not far away. Loyalty and enthusiasm are near akin and both are good. The joy that comes from play makes the heart sound, and victory begets hopefulness and courage. The playground hours even more than the school hours are the very best seeding time for all of this.

Directed play begets energy and seriousness. Children, wholesome children, are always in dead earnest at their play. All they have or are depends upon the outcome, and life for them at that hour has rosy skies or gloomful night, just as the victory comes home to them or flies from them to their adversaries. The young baseball or football captain has as much at stake in his boy's world, as afterwards that same boy, a general, has in his battles or a merchant in his ventures, or a maker of mines or railroads or canals in his nation-changing enterprises."

Having satisfied ourselves that organized play is of transcendent importance to the child life of our city, should we not endeavor at once to make a beginning in this movement?

"It is suggested," concluded the speaker, "that in the near future a meeting be called with representatives from our local branch of the National Council of Women, the Board of Education, the City Council, the Y.M.C.A., the Y.W.C.A., the Canadian Club, and the Big Brothers' Organization, with the hope that some workable scheme may be arrived at and thus helped the boys aud girls to a better citizenship."

RHEUMATISM

Sciatica and Lumbago, Quickly Cured by "Kephaldol."

A druggist in Toronto said that he was asking an Old Country customer of his about KEPHALDOL TABLETS. This customer told him "I suffered from severe Rheumatism and Sciatica for twenty years, hardly ever being free from these troubles. I read about KEPHALDOL in the Glasgow papers and sent for some. Three hours after taking two tablets, the pain was almost gone, and after taking six or seven, I hadn't a bit of pain."

This druggist went in to see his doctor about his wife and asked him if he had ever heard of KEPHALDOL. The doctor said, "Yes, I understand KEPHALDOL is a reliable sedative and anodyne, relieving pain without affecting the heart or vital organs. Since KEPHALDOL has been introduced into Canada, I have prescribed it in cases of severe Headache and Neuralgia, and just recently succeeded in helping a most severe case of La Grippe with it."

Since then, this druggist has ordered KEPHALDOL and recommended it to those of his customers who wanted something to relieve pain. If you are unable to get KEPHALDOL Tablets at your druggists, send 50c. to Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

LEGISLATURE PASSES BILL

PLEBISCITE TO BE TAKEN ON OTTAWA'S WATER QUESTION.

TORONTO, March 21.—A quiet afternoon was spent in the Legislature yesterday. A host of little matters were advanced a stage, and several new bills introduced by members. The Toronto bill in its different sections was brought in by three city members, and first readings were granted. For the second time in the session a special Government bill was hurried through the three readings at one sitting and became law at the sanction of Sir John Gibson, who appeared for a few moments. This measure provided for a special ballot to be used for a plebiscite on the water question in Ottawa, and both sides of the House concurred in treating it with expedition because of the local conditions prevailing in the capital city.

William Proudfoot (Centre Huron) brought in three bills for first reading. One of these provided for the creation of a divisional court of appeals to be composed of judges of the high court drawn from the county, division and district courts. The object is to reduce the work of the appellate court. Another bill aims at making all hawkers bear licenses before being allowed to work in the counties of the province.

One of the measures brought in again after a year's lapse was that of Dr. Forbes Godfrey (West York) which would by means of a medical operation tend to reduce the number of feeble-minded in Ontario. It was granted a first reading.

C. S. Cameron's bill to amend the Assessment Act making provision for the assessment of railway lands, wharves and docks received a second reading. Mr. Cameron explained that such property was now exempt, and it was the desire to have it assessed on account of the effect in determining the value of adjoining property.

Hon. Mr. Hanna explained the purport of Mr. Ellis' bill to amend the Municipal Act. It provides that new streets less than 66 feet in width must have the approval of the Railway Board.

PRIEST SUED FOR SLANDER

OTTAWA, March 21. — Action has been entered by Samuel Dalby, of Farrelltown, Que., against Rev. Father Auguste Chenier, parish priest of the same place, for $2,500 damages for alleged slanderous statements made by the latter. The statement of the claims sets forth that in an effort to have Dalby deposed from a committee on bridge building in the district the priest intimated that he knew secrets derogatory to Dalby that he was unable to divulge. An apology was demanded but Father Chenier refused to comply.

Music Is More Heart Than Fingers

THAT'S why the simple things that mother used to play mean more to you than the brilliant fingering of some merely technical performer. Expression is what counts in music.

You can set your musical heart free from your untrained fingers with the

New Scale Williams Player Piano

With the "Meister-Touch—most human of all."

It provides the technique that otherwise would take years to master. It gives free rein to your desire to play and interpret the world's masterpieces. Through the "Meister-touch—most human of all"—you can give a rendering, not only perfect in technique, but truly expressive of your own individual temperament.

Call and play this wonderful instrument at our showrooms. We will make a generous allowance in exchange for your present piano.

CONSPIRACY PROVEN.

Jury Convicts Hagel and Westlake of Plotting for Krafchenko.

WINNIPEG, March 21.—The jury yesterday afternoon, as the assizes in the Hagel-Westlake case, returned a verdict finding Percy Hagel and J. H. Westlake guilty of conspiring to release John Krafchenko from the jail where he was confined pending his trial for the murder of H. M. Arnold.

On the second indictment the jury returned a verdict finding each of the accused guilty of aiding Krafchenko to escape. The maximum penalty on each indictment is seven years in the penitentiary. Each prisoner took the verdict coolly.

Reject Compulsory Service.

LONDON, March 21.—The House of Lords, by a vote of 53 to 24, yesterday rejected the bill introduced by Lord Willoughby De Broke for the purpose of making military service compulsory amongst the well-to-do. Lord Harris dubbed the proposal one to "form a kid glove brigade." Lord Methuen said that it would be better to establish national cadet training; and Lord Lansdowne expressed the fear that the proposition if adopted, would establish a military caste which would be repugnant to British public opinion.

Steamer Lady Grey Damaged.

QUEBEC, March 21.—The Canadian Government steamer Lady Grey, which was cutting at the ice bridge above Portneuf, returned to port yesterday morning with her propellers out of order. What the trouble is is unknown, but a diver will be sent down in the morning to ascertain.

ANTI-CATHOLIC LETTER WRITEN

BERLIN, March 21. — An alleged letter from Emperor William, in which he is said to have expressed strong anti-Catholic views, is attracting much attention in the press. The letter is understood to have been written by His Majesty to the Landgravine of Hesse, who was a princess of Prussia and was converted to the Catholic faith on Oct. 9, 1901.

The Volksfruend of Aix-La-Chapelle, a Catholic newspaper, declares the letter to contain the phrase: "I hate the religion which you have adopted."

The letter is said to have been found among the papers of the late Cardinal Kopp.

REVIEW'S BIG VOTE OFFER CLOSES TO-NIGHT

The last large vote offer closes to-night at 8 o'clock. Yesterday was a big day in the contest department. Many candidates have surprised the manager with the amount of subscriptions they have secured. Others have not done so well, and it is up to those to get good and busy from now until 8 o'clock to-night in the great struggle. There still remain a few hours in which to get extra votes. Candidates should make every effort until the close. This is a battle among candidates with a fair field and no favorites. The hardest and most energetic workers will win, but who the winners are will not be known and can not be known until the final decision is made.

Candidates, relatives, friends and acquaintances alike are making the last hours of the campaign count greatly. All are securing subscriptions to place them at the top of the list. There are a number of rivals that stand so close in the race that the last few hours of hustling may decide the winner one way or the other.

You can bet that they are going to use those last few hours to the limit. To lie down at this stage of the game means permanent retirement from the racing career. But there are no quitters in the race. The finish is going to be close; you can make that as emphatic as you wish.

If you have "promised" some candidate your subscription, now is the time to fulfil your promise. Just think of the disappointment the one you have promised the subscription would feel if he or she would fail to win a prize by one subscription, which you had failed to give them. Just think how happy you would be by giving that one subscription. The time to think about that is now, not after your favorite candidate has lost by only one subscription—the one you promised.

If you have not given your subscription to some energetic candidate now is the time to think about it. If you have promised it to some one keep your promise. Now is the time to make the best of your promises.

By taking advantage of this offer it will be possible to get thousands of votes that will not be secured by your competitors during the last two days. Neglecting this offer may mean defeat to you.

Remember, candidates, that this is the last vote offer that extra votes will be given, after to-night the vote schedule will be just the regular votes and the weekly subscription votes will be worth just half of what they are to-day.

HAVE PRETTY HAIR

Soft, Fluffy, Abundant—Use Parisian Sage. It Stops Falling Hair and Itching Scalp.

If your hair is not as soft and beautiful, or as fresh and full as that of some friend, do not despair—do as she does—give it daily attention. Beautiful hair is largely the matter of a little care. If it is too thin, make it grow. If it is too dry and brittle, soften it up—lubricate it. If you have dandruff it is because the scalp is too dry and flakes off. Freshen up the scalp and dandruff will go.

Parisian Sage, sold in fifty cent bottles at drug and toilet counters, is just what you need—it softens the scalp, nourishes the hair roots, immediately removes dandruff, and makes the hair wavy, lustrous and abundant.

Parisian Sage quickly stops itching head; cleanses the hair of dust and excessive oil; takes away the dryness and brittleness, makes it seem twice as abundant, and beautifies it until it is soft and lustrous.

You cannot be disappointed in Parisian Sage. Always sold by —a —on money back if not satisfied plan. Look for the trade mark "The Girl with the Auburn Hair." It's on every package—accept nothing else.

Naval Tug in Danger.

CURLING, Nfld., March 21.—The United States naval tug Potomac, which was boarded Thursday by a salvage crew of six men, after drifting derelict in the Gulf of St. Lawrence for six weeks, was swept by offshore winds yesterday into a position of danger for both vessel and crew.

The Potomac last night was twelve miles northwest of Keppel Island, off Ingornachoix Bay, still fast in the drift ice that packs the gulf.

MRS. ROLLIN'S REPORT TO WOMENS' COUNCIL ON CONGRESS AT OTTAWA

The Call to the Women of To-day to Help in the Problems for Which a Remedy is Needed

Mrs. (Rev.) Jas. Rollins, who was one of the local delegates to the Social Service Congress of Canada held in Ottawa recently, gave her report to the Women's Council yesterday afternoon. After thanking the Council for affording her the opportunity of being present at such a function, she stated that the congress was planned under the direction of The Social Service Council of Canada, in which the following bodies were federated: the Church of England of Canada, the Presbyterian Church of Canada, the Congregational Church of Canada, the Dominion Grange and Farmers' Association, the Methodist Church of Canada, the Baptist Church of Canada, the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, the Salvation Army, the Canadian Purity Education Association and the Evangelical Association of North America.

The object of the congress was to arouse interest and enlist all Canadians in behalf of social righteousness with the purpose of improving social, economic and ethical conditions in Canada.

Mrs. Rollins stated that the great amount of work covered by the Congress took considerable time and it would be impossible to go over it thoroughly at this meeting, but a short synopsis would appear in the local press at close intervals in the near future. She could only hope to relate the spirit of the Congress and how it relates to the spirit of the present time.

"The spirit of the time," stated Mrs. Rollins, "is the spirit of man struggling to get into touch with Reality. Often it is a movement of the sensibilities rather than the intelligence toward some new consciousness of God or man, and such Ages are epoch-making. Just now—as in the time of the Crusades, only in a deeper way—it is the wider heart and throb of humanity; man seeking his brother man. The call has come from that high place whence all such calls come, and we must answer. No time nor government can stand between us and it, nothing shall hinder us till we arrive because this is the new Reality; the truth to which we must eventually adjust ourselves. The mistake we make is to suppose that the truth comes to us in an orderly way from any one established source; and so we fail to look with discernment into all the forces at work in life, gain wisdom and grapple intelligently with the virtues and vices which are really moulding society. What is the Modern Spirit—the new Reality? It is this: that we must not claim for ourselves alone but for others equally the right of an opportunity to strive for liberty; happiness—for life in its broadest significance. That all men in the State exist for the good of all: that all men should share and share alike in the opportunity to make a worthy contribution to these ends of life—justice, truth, liberty, happiness, etc.

The rise of Democracy therefore is only an evidence of the presence of this new spirit. Men are no longer willing that conditions should be justified through a few being enabled to grasp the ends of life—they demand that all should have the right of an opportunity to do so. The power of Democracy is being manifested on a tremendous scale. When Mr. Gladstone passed his great Franchise Bill Democracy came really into power. Men saw that it had arrived and would be strong armor. Since then the people have been in power but they did not know it. Now they know it. Nor can there be any substitute for this root idea that the moral right lies with the people. Every other instrument of power has been exhausted and flung aside, and from the judgment of the people there is no earthly appeal. The People may prove selfish or warlike—may love money or ease—may make terrible mistakes as in the French Revolution—but the last experiment—there can be no other, and the aim of the people is perfectly clear. Popular power is being used for popular comfort. The people are resolved to have a fuller better, easier life, and a happier life—they are at present giving little attention to the mere party politician. They are moved to enthusiasm only by such things as will ameliorate and brighten and lighten existing social conditions. It is evident that the realization in any measure of the ideal that dominates the modern spirit cannot be achieved through political reforms alone. The storm-centre in the movement of the new Democracy is increasingly in the sphere of social relations and in the struggle toward greater industrial freedom. Left to themselves the People—the masses—the mob if we will so designate, can learn only by mistakes which may lead through unguessed depths of suffering and despair. But here we catch the real significance of this Social Service Congress. We turn our eyes and there, parallel with the movements of Democracy stands the Church of the Living God! With clear discernment she sees that this is the Day of Opportunity for the Christian Church. She is awake to the truth that the only hope for the masses is that they shall become Christian. The Church is not a mere social force held together by Christ's teaching as a moral philosopher. She is greater than Democracy or than any other force in the world to-day, because she is clothed with Supernatural Authority and Divine Grace.

The Church To-day.

We have heard not a little wailing about the Church losing her grip of human life and human affairs. This Congress dispelled my misgivings for I learned there that even the Church in Canada has for some years been sending forth her saints to work in lowly guise in obscure places, with no blare of trumpets; practical forerunners—heralds of the new ideal. This is the vitalizing quality seeking expression in the activities of the church to-day — a quickening spirit in the religious life of the world—we call it Social Service. The attitude of the Christian Church to-day toward the masses is "He that is greatest among you shall be servant of all."

The church to-day will be the servant of humanity because she is the greatest permanent force in the world. Greatest because she guides and controls the public conscience establishes the moral standards and fixes the ideals of the people who direct affairs, not merely in the council chamber and the senate, but in the factory and shop. She alone can link up the new democratic impulses with those spiritual forces which sustain, fortify and inspire human life. She can call attention and rouse the national conscience to a sense of its responsibility as well as insist upon each member realizing his own responsibility in the brotherhood of the race. The Church realizes that it is her business to teach every man that he has to sacrifice in order to help.

The Church to-day is no longer willing to deal with the by-products of crime, sin and vice, but asserts its right to deal directly with the conditions which produce maimed and broken humanity. The church to-day asserts that Christianity does belong to politics — has the same power to deal with the millions as with one; for is not each unit in the millions, man, potentially all that the rest has expressed?"

Looking to the Women.

Continuing, Mrs. Rollins stated that to-day is the day of the women. They must now play their part, and nothing of human interest should be alien to them; on the contrary they should look upon things of this nature, not with criticism, but rather with a kindly human interest. They should unite in crushing everything that tends to spoil human life. One instance of this is the lack of supervised playgrounds, upon which Mrs. Middleton spoke.

There is a great lack of seriousness in the average woman. Her nerves are not settled, so to speak, when she rushes around in an effort to find amusement, she turns from the pleasures of the soul to the pleasures of the world. Is it strange then that their children grow up with this same failing? It is the duty of associations similar to the Council of Women to look into such matters with human interest and bring forth the remedy.

With problems of the same nature as the above facing them, the church and the State are looking to the women for a solution. Mrs. Rollins was rather surprised to find the men who addressed the Congress were strongly in favor of that great national subject, "Women Suffrage." The great battles of the future will be battles against moral problems and in this the assistance of women is needed. The women of the future must work side by side with the men, if success in the great battles is to be attained.

The Franchise.

Women who have leisure, education and intelligence, should realize of what inestimable benefit the possession of franchise may be, not so much for themselves, as is only too often erroneously believed, but rather to the many thousands of women throughout the civilized world who are the defenceless, unprotected, victims of sweated labors, white slave traffic and other appalling varieties of a living death. One woman has stated publicly "In our streets in our great cities there are thousands of women walking nightly into a hell more lurid than our forefathers ever depicted." Opponents of women suffrage should think of this and women, in general should, for the sake of their defenceless sisters, have a vote.

Mrs. Rollins went on to state a few of the underlying principles of Dr. Robertson's address on Education. The boys and girls of the past generation were educated along certain lines at their home. The girls assisted in the kitchen, while the boys worked with the father in the shop. To-day the cook of the average family won't let the young girl into the kitchen, and there is no room for the boy in his father's office, therefore some other way must be had in which to each the children the arts everyone should know. It is for that reason that the vocational schools were founded. Have they been a success? Here is one instance: in Scotland ten years ago there was 900 pupils attending the vocational schools, in Scotland today there are 1,900.

Dr. Robertson urged the women of Ontario to assist in the forming of industrial classes. Do not have the child tied down to a desk which he or she soon learns to detest, on the contrary, have them in a vocational school, where they are interested in their work and are loath to sever their connections with it. He further urged the ladies to tutor the children into forming School Boy Clubs and School Girl Clubs, and thus keep the children interested in their work. The moving pictures are here to stay, then why not make them educative? Have them in the schools where great benefits could be derived from them.

The Foreigners.

There are many foreigners coming to Canada, and something should be done for them. The children should be educated and their parents educated also. The children of the foreigner, if they are young enough, start at once to our schools, and become educated while their parents still remain ignorant of Canadian ways and customs. What is the result? They soon start to spurn the old-fashioned parent and for that reason the parent, as well as the child, should be Canadianized.

In voicing the feeling of the congress as to the many immigrants coming to this country, Mrs. Rollins remarked that this country's great wealth and area had been left untouched for centuries. The time has now arrived when Divine Providence has seen fit to populate it and we should therefore consider them a God send. We shouldn't exclaim "What's it all going to end in." They are the Canadians of to-morrow, and should therefore be brought up along the lines that make the best Canadian citizens. Those men who are foreigners may have the ability of some of the great men of their race if it be brought out, and these potentialities can only be brought out in education and cultivation. If this is to be and the women are to be a great assist in this work, then truly the women of to-day have a great work ahead of them.

THE COMMITTEE ON SOCIAL SERVICE AND EVANGELISM

READ BEFORE PETERBORO PRESBYTERY

Following is, in part, the report of the Committee on Social Service and Evangelism, presented at the last meeting of the Presbytery of Peterborough by the convenor, Mr. R. Lees, and published by request of Presbytery.

Following a suggestion of the Board of Social Service and Evangelism, letters were written to a limited number of ministers in some of the important centres asking for opinions or information on matters that should be brought to the attention of Presbytery. To these a number of replies were received. The matters they deal with principally are the liquor traffic, the social evil, observance of the Lord's Day, and gambling. The presence of a considerable number of foreigners, where railway construction of public works are in progress seems to have greatly complicated matters. Among these people, drinking in their homes, especially on Sundays, with the accompanying desecration of the day prevails. In some cases it would seem that they have imported liquor into local option territory and in one case as many as 25 persons are reported to have been fined for being drunk on such territory.

A matter that receives attention in all the communications is the laxity of many parents in exercising a supervision over the conduct of their boys and girls. This results in street walking, with all the evils that attend or follow. Whatever the church can do to emphasize and magnify the duty and responsibility of parents should be done with tact, vigor and insistence. Reports all indicate the prevelance to a greater or less extent of the social evil.

In the city of Peterborough, if one were to judge from the revelations of the past few months, he would be led to conclude that things are rapidly going from bad to worse. This, however, is probably not the case, and the fact that some things have been dragged into the light, the existence of which was undreamed of by most of us, is probably a healthy sign. There is, on the whole, a more enlightened public opinion, and, we doubt not, a deeper sense of responsibility than has prevailed for some time.

The Board of Social Service and Evangelism.

It is fitting that there should be introduced here some reference to the work of the Department of Social Service and Evangelism of our Church.

The department includes:

1. Evangelism—All the evangelistic work of the church.

2. The suppression of the vices, drinking, gambling, social vice, political corruption, bad literature, unclean or suggestive amusements, etc.

3. The suppression of the White Slave traffic, and the exploiting of all human vices.

4. The promoting of the due observance of the Lord's Day.

5. The redemption and restoration of fallen girls.

6. The prevention by educational, legislative and other means of the downfall of girls—and boys, too.

7. Teaching English to non-Anglo-Saxons and of Canadian citizenship to all immigrants.

8. Reclaiming the slums of our great and growing cities by evangelical social settlement work, and the prevention of the development of slum conditions.

9. The reclaiming of human wrecks of both sexes and all ages in Evangelistic Missions.

10. The study and solution of the problems of country life, the result of the depletion of rural population.

The department of Social Service and Evangelism has been in existence for six years, and has a remarkable record of accomplishment to its credit. One of the greatest of these is the union for common effort of the social forces of the Dominion in The Social Service Council of Canada, which represents all the Protestant churches as well as the Evangelical Association, the Trades and Labor Congress, the Dominion Grange and Farmers' Association, the Salvation Army and the Canadian Purity Association.

Social Service Congress.

It was the privilege of the convenor of your committee to be present at the great congress in Ottawa which was planned and carried out by the Social Service Council, which believes

That Righteousness can be realized in the complex conditions of modern life only through the application to all human affairs of the principles of the Kingdom of God and Declares

For the application of Christian principles to the operations of industrial associations whether of labor or of capital.

For a more equitable distribution of wealth.

For the abolition of poverty.

For the protection of childhood.

For the safeguarding of the physical and moral health of women in industrial life.

For the adequate protection of working people in case of industrial accidents and occupational diseases.

For the Sunday rest of every worker.

For conciliation an arbitration in industrial disputes.

For proper housing.

For the adequate care of dependent and defective persons.

For the reclamation of criminals.

For wholesome recreation.

For the protection of society against contagious diseases.

For international peace.

The Congress lasted for three days, and was in many ways entirely unique. Never before did so many people of different creeds, diverse callings and varied social standing meet together for the avowed purpose of bringing nearer the establishment, in its fullness, of the Kingdom of God in our land. There appeared on the platform and took part in its deliberations, officials and dignitaries of all the Protestant churches, a bishop of the Roman Catholic church the Premier of the Dominion and four of his cabinet ministers, a cabinet minister of the province of Ontario, the leader of the Opposition in the Commons, representatives of organized labor, the president of the Federation of Farmers, and last, but not least, the royal representative of the Crown in Canada.

Not only was the Congress unique in the character of those who took part, but quite as much, if not more so was it in the character and variety

LEADERS ON BOTH SIDES ARE TRYING TO PACIFY OPPOSING FORCES IN ULSTER

LONDON, March 21. — "War in Ulster" is the startling headline which the sensational London newspapers are displaying in the blackest type.

The Government began yesterday to dispose of its regular troops in Ireland so that they may be in a position to deal with any situation that arises. The cooler men among the loyalists and the Ulster Unionists, however, believe that nothing resembling war is yet in sight.

It is said that as a result of instructions sent by the War Office to the Curragh camp yesterday that officers who objected to serving in Ulster must resign or be dismissed from the army, one hundred officers tendered their resignations.

The Army Council some time ago considered the possibilities of Home Rule strife and instructed Lieut.-Gen. Sir Arthur Henry Fitzroy Paget, who commands the Irish garrisons, to take all necessary precautions to maintain order and safeguard property. A general redistribution of the forces in Ireland therefore was begun yesterday.

Two regiments were sent from the south to reinforce the Ulster garrisons, while the troops in Ulster were moved to new stations in conformity with the custom that, in the event of hostilities or rioting, soldiers should not be compelled to encounter people with whom they had formed friendships. In pursuance with the same rule some Irish recruits were sent from the Armagh recruiting station to England.

The possibilities of a collision between the British soldiers and the Ulster volunteers, resulting from the super-heated political feeling, are recognized, but the leaders on both sides are trying to exert a pacific influence. John Redmond, the Nationalist leader in Parliament, yesterday telegraphed the Nationalists in Belfast an urgent appeal to abandon a parade arranged for Sunday in Londonderry, which it was thought would likely result in rioting. Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader, and the members of the Ulster Council invoked calmness on the part of the volunteers.

Four Cabinet Ministers spoke of the Ulster situation at different meetings last night. John Burns, President of the Local Government Board, in an address on the occasion of the unveiling of his portrait in the National Liberal Club, said:

"Home Rule is a question mainly for Ireland itself. Three-fourths of the people there have demanded it persistently for years and we have no right to listen to the demand for more concessions or yield to clamor. We have no more desire to yield to lawless lawyers than to lawless laborers."

Thomas McKinnon Wood, Secretary of State for Scotland, said:

"We will carry Home Rule by agreement if we possibly can, but without it if we must."

Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, in his speech, declared that the Government's proposals gave Ulster freedom from coercion for six years and that the scheme of Andrew Bonar Law, the leader of the Opposition in Parliament, meant immediate coercion if referendum went against Ulster.

Sir John Allsbrooke Simon, Attorney-General, said the Government proposed to go steadily on, adding "whatever happens we will see that law and order are unflinchingly observed in Ulster."

Armed With Carbines.

NEWBRIDGE, County Kildare, Ireland, March 21.—The Fourth Hussars and the Sixteenth Lancers at Curragh Camp are now armed with carbines instead of their usual lances and swords. Fifteen rounds of ammunition were issued to each man of the entire garrison Thursday night. Guards over the camp have been doubled and special patrols have been detailed at some distance outside the camp.

Ready For Active Service.

DUNDALK, Ireland, March 21.—Seven officers and 450 men of the Cornwall Regiment arrived here from Dublin last night and were quartered in the Royal Field Artillery barracks, there already was a force of eighteen officers and 500 men making preparations for active service.

Battalion Is Mobilized.

ARMAGH, Ireland, March 21.—A battalion of the Bedfordshire Regiment arrived here last night by special train from Mullingar. Armagh is the recruiting station for the Royal Irish Fusiliers, and a large batch of recruits who had not completed the usual course of training, were withdrawn from the station and sent to regimental headquarters at Folkstone, England.

Pickets are patrolling all roads, and only persons with passes are allowed inside the camp.

Revealed.

An insurance agent was trying to induce a hard man to deal with to take out a policy on his house. After listening to him for an hour while he painted in vivid colors the extreme danger of fire consuming the house, the hard man to deal with said:

"Do you really think it likely that my house will burn down within the time that the policy will run?"

"Certainly," replied the agent. "Have I not been trying all this time to convince you that I do?"

"Then," said the hard man to deal with, "why is your company so anxious to bet me money that it will not?"

The agent was silent and thoughtful for a moment; then he drew the other apart into an unfrequented place and whispered in his ear:

"My friend, I will impart to you a dark secret. Years ago the company disgraced me before my sweetheart. Under an assumed name I have wormed myself into its service for revenge, and as there is a heaven above us I will have its heart's blood!"

DOCTORS OVERLOOKED?

Toronto Medicoes Want Changes In Compensation Bill.

TORONTO, March 21.—At a largely-attended meeting of the Academy of Medicine of Ontario, called to consider a report of a sub-committee appointed to deal with the workmen's compensation bill in so far as it affects the interests of the medical profession. Dr. Bruce L. Riordan, read the report. It dealt exhaustively with the various phases of the act as applicable to doctors and pointed out how the existing rights of the profession to have their services treated as part of the damages recoverable have been taken away, while no fund is provided out of which those who care for the injured are to be paid. It also bars medical men from ranking on the sums awarded for compensation. Suggestions as to the proper remedy were made.

The recommendations made in the report were unanimously adopted, and a call sent out to the medical men of the province to appoint delegates to wait on the Government.

KING SELLS PATENT.

His Majesty Has Invented a Novel and Economical Fireplace.

LONDON, March 21. — King George's has just sold the patent for a movable fireplace. In a new workingmen's flat being erected in South London on the estate of the Duchy of Lancaster, which is the property of the Prince of Wales, this novel fireplace is being used. It is so constructed that when fixed in a wall dividing two rooms it can be moved backwards or forwards to make one fire serve the two rooms, thus economizing fuel. The fireplaces were the idea of the King, and a provisional patent was taken out. The King refused $15,000 for the patent two years ago. The contractor who is building the flats has now purchased the patent for $25,000, and the money has been settled on Prince John, the King's youngest child.

Climbing Out of a Hole.

Every one has heard authentic stories of the man who asked another "Who is that old frump over yonder?" and got the reply, "She is my wife." But the story doesn't go far enough.

Jones observed an old lady sitting across the room.

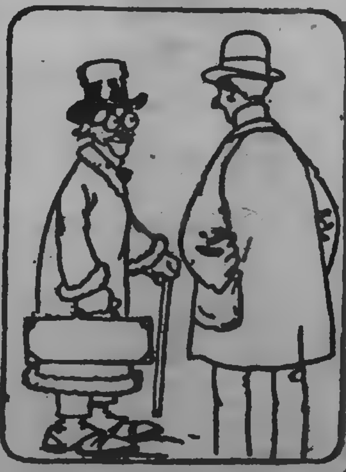
"For heaven's sake," he remarked to Robinson, "who is that extraordinarily ugly woman there?"

"That," answered Robinson, "is my wife."

Jones was taken aback, but moved up front again.

"Well," he said persuasively, "you just ought to see mine!"—Philadelphia Record.

Question.



"Yes," said the white haired, tottering doctor, "I guess I'm the oldest man in this town now."

"Never took any of your own medicine, eh?" replied the waggish stranger.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Minor Consideration.

The young man to whom this really happened was calling on a young woman one evening not so very long ago, and, as he was leaving, he said:

"I could get a car right here on the corner, but I have a very important letter to mail, so I must walk to the nearest drug store and buy a stamp."

"You shan't do anything of the sort," answered the young woman cordially. "I have a stamp right here in my desk which I will lend you. If you have any compunctions about it you can return it to me the next time you call, which I hope will be very soon."

The fatuous youth was so pleased that he smiled all over his face.

"But suppose I'd get run over by a street car before I returned it?" he burbled.

"Well, even then, it wouldn't be any great loss," said she.

She meant it well, but it was a sad blow to him when he came to think it over.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SOUTHPAW AND SPIT BALL FLINGER SIGN UP WITH BLOUNT'S SQUAD

The contracts of two new pitchers have reached baseball headquarters, with a letter from Charley Blount.

Edgar Moran hails from Youngstown and is a southpaw. Sidney Terrill comes from Rochester and is a spit ball artist. The first baseman who has been signed by Blount carries the name of Flanigan, as well as 180 pounds. He is 20 years of age.

Gilbert Forgue will likely be seen at short again this season for the Saints. He has entirely recovered from his illness which held him in St. Thomas all winter.

The Senators are hot after Billy Wright who is the property of the Erie Club.

Red Robertson has not signed an Ottawa contract and it is just doubtful where he will play this season. Ray Ryan wants him for his Richmond Virginia club.

According to reports the Federals offered Jack Schaeffer, the Canadian League's leading hitter, $2,500 to sign for a year. Schaeffer has signed with Erie. He turned down the Feds cold, and latest reports say that they are flat on their back as a result.

There is a remote chance of Joe McManus being back on the local lot. Mac is now the property of the Norfolk, Va., club who drafted him . . . Durham, N.C., where he wound up a god year. Anyone who can handle McManus, will always have a big league pitcher on his staff. He was the class of the Canadian circuit in 1912.—Ottawa Free Press.

It is understood that a meeting of the Western Ontario Semi-Professional League will be held either at Stratfird or Berlin next week. Guelph will be represented, and it is altogether likely that a team representing this city will be in the circuit.

It is quite a drop from Canadian League ball to that of semi-pro, but now that Guelph is down and out so far as the Canadian League is concerned, the fans are beginning to turn their eyes to Humber's semi-pro. organization —Guelph Mercury.

MODERN SUPERSTITION.

Owls and Skirts, Pigs, Dogs and Cats.

Pretty nearly everything under the sun seems to be connected with some superstition, from an owl to the hem of your skirt. Never hear of either? Well, if your skirt happens to be turned up a bit at the bottom, you can be sure someone is thinking of you. You can, however, make everyone think more, especially the men, if you wear a slit skirt. As for the owl, if it should come into the house, trouble is sure to follow. The best thing to do when you expect an owl is to put all the cut glass into the china closet and the china closet in the dining-room closet; and then lock that closet. For the owl you can then use anything; a broom is generally pretty handy.

The first time pigs cross your threshold, make them jump over your pants belt, or your wife's garter, or the maid's apron; then they will come home regularly. A plan now in use among up-to-date Canadian farmers is to keep the pigs in regular pens and feed them twice a day. It is regarded as a scheme more popular with the wife and the maid.

It is bad luck to hear a dog bark at night. This superstition has been found to depend on circumstances; it is a matter of whose dog. If it's the dog next dog, the best thing to use is a flatiron; but a good aim is even more valuable.

Women believe that, if they go somewhere on Monday, they will be on the go the rest of the week. That may be the explanation of the fact that women like to wash on Monday. Kill a cat, and you will have bad luck for seven years; there is, however, no special superstition as to kittens, so it is best to begin on your cats early.

The Germans believe that, if your right hand itches, you will get money; if your left hand itches, you will spend much. Canadians are the only people in the world who have both hands itching all the time.

SOME NOISES.

THE riveters ne'er bother—
We can work where hammers are—
But excuse me, please, from roofers
When they boil their pot of tar.
—Denver Republican.

We're used to many troubles,
But save us from the wight
Who likes to stand behind us
And watch us while we write.
—Youngstown Telegram.

We're used to many troubles,
But one that can't be beat
Is that blamed electric organ
In the "movie" 'cross the street.
—Los Angeles Express.

We can stand all kinds of rackets,
As sure as you are born,
But the cat that murders midnight
And the thing that crows at dawn.

Ford

On six continents — the Ford is the favorite car. And it's gaining constantly in world-wide popularity. It's the one car built for all countries —all climates—all conditions. And its light weight and unequalled strength make it most economical.

Six hundred dollars is the price of the Ford run-about; the touring car is six fifty;—f.o.b. Ford, Ont., complete with equipment. Get catalog and particulars from Duffus' Garage, 195 Simcoe St., Peterborough.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

PROMPTNESS very often insures great loss of time on the part of the prompt person.

Being able to borrow money is looked upon by certain individuals as being the ideal condition.

There is one good quality about hot weather philosophy, and that is that it is apt to be thin.

The people who are satisfied with one thing at a time are often pernicity about the one thing.

Sometimes a man becomes famous by finding a new way to be foolish.

Even a chilly proposition looks inviting in hot weather.

It is hard to tell what causes a difficulty, but what's the difference when knowing does no good?

Some women wear even the stigma of suffragette gracefully.

A high class liar is often a high salaried official.

Women don't care so much about bossing the job as they do about bossing the boss.

Passing.

Summer soon will ended be.
Then it will be fall,
And the chilly days will come
In no time at all.
Soon we'll have the mellow moon
And the morning frost,
And another year will be
In the discard tossed.

Southward every day the sun
Moves along the line.
Autumn leaves will soon be shown
In the fall design.
Yellow pumpkins soon will cause
Visions to arise
Of Thanksgiving drawing near,
With its toothsome pies.

Like a butterfly we dance
In the sunshine gay,
Thinking not that evil times
Now are on the way,
Thinking not of chilly morns
Slightly in advance,
When small comfort we could take
In our ice cream pants.

Summer comes and sticks around
Such a little while,
Warming us a few short weeks
With its cheery smile.
When at last its time has come,
Then it hunts its hole,
And we have to hustle out
For a load of coal.

The Real Soldiers.

"Why do you oppose woman suffrage?"

"Because women can't fight."

"Can't they?"

"I mean they can't take part in war."

"Now, that is interesting. It looks to me as though they were the most active participants in this much advertised war on flies."

Powerful.

"He has a strong imagination."

"Yes, I noticed that."

"I suppose he cultivates it."

"Oh, yes."

"I wonder what his methods are?"

"Quite simple, I assure you, and his chief source of supply is a bottle."

Lille and its Pictures.

Lille, according to a writer in the London Academy, is one of the few uninteresting towns of France. He went there "obstinate in the belief that no town in France with over 200,000 inhabitants could be entirely without interest," but finally "fled to the station, defeated, and took train for Laon." In justice, however, the critic makes the considerable admission that "Lille has perhaps the finest collection of pictures in France outside Paris."

Why She Held on to It.

Mrs. Willful—My husband told me if I didn't like the brooch you'd exchange it for me. Jeweler—Certainly, madam. I'll be only too glad, as four different ladies of your set want it.

SUPPLIMENTARY LIST PRESENTED IN HOUSE

Three Millions Required For Administration of Various Acts And For Other Items.

OTTAWA, March 21.—The House spent most of the day in committee of supply on estimates of the Public Works Department.

Supplementary estimates for the present fiscal year, which ends March 31, were tabled in the Commons yesterday. They total $3,194,464, and includes the following items: Loss by fire at Central Experimental Farms, $25,000; administering Meat and Canned Foods Act, $30,000; administering Destructive Insect and Pest Act, $18,000; immigration agencies, $200,000; seed grain to settlers on unpatented lands, $35,000; medals for militia, $6,000; expenses on cases before Railway Board, $35,000; Toronto Dominion buildings, $2,000; Rideau Hall improvements, $96,000; steam service by Atlantic to Australia, $6,666; naval patrol of northern waters, $135,000; fisheries patrol service, $17,500; expenses under Canada Temperance Act, $20,000; liquidation of Union Life Assurance Co., $20,000; relieving distress as result of great lakes storm, $25,000; telegraph lines, $96,000; rural mail delivery, $215,000; for railways on account of new rates, $135,000.

A rather long drawn out discussion arose in committee of supply over an item in the Public Works estimates for the new departmental buildings in Ottawa.

W. F. Maclean (South York) said that the Government, before embarking upon such a large expenditure of money, had first to consider the possibility that Parliament might, at some future date, decide to move the seat of government to some other place. Personally, Mr. Maclean favored some place on the Bay of Quinte. Ottawa was very hot in summer and cold in winter.

In his opinion it would be a good plan for the Government to acquire a large area of land, which could be converted into a national capital, such as Australia has created.

Hon. Mr. Rogers, in reply, said that the Government had appointed a committee some time ago to draw up a plan for making Ottawa into a Federal district. The people of Ottawa had already voted in favor of the project, but the Government could not act in the matter until they received the commission's report.

At the evening sitting, Mr. Pardee (W. Lambton) took occasion to read to the House an article which appeared in last evening's Montreal Star. The Star despatches quote The Yorkshire Post as saying that the Orangemen of Ulster have been assured by Col. Sam Hughes that no obstacles would be placed in the way of the thousand picked Canadians who are leaving in the spring to take part in the Ulster uprising. Mr. Pardee thought the Minister of Militia should be directed by the Government to refrain from giving such assurances.

Hon. Robert Rogers said in the absence of Col Hughes it was unfair to presume that he was correctly quoted by the British newspapers.

Mr. Kyte (Richmond, N.S.) insisted that no items in any way relating to the expenditures of the Militia Department should be considered until Col. Hughes said to the House whether or not he was correctly quoted.

Hon. Mr. Lemieux took occasion to remind the House of Mr. Cochrane's presence at the Carson banquet. Was it the intention of the present Government, he asked, to get behind the Ulster men?

Some estimates of the Public Works Department in which the Militia Department is interested will be held over until the colonel explains whether or not he was correctly quoted.

A deputation representing the Dominion Council of Agriculture, waited upon the Premier and Hon. W. T. White yesterday to protest against the reported proposal to give further assistance to the iron and steel manufacturers either by way of bounties or by imposing a duty on pig iron, iron rods, bars or other steel products.

The deputation was promised that its representations would be given full consideration before any tariff changes were announced.

AFRAID OF THE DENTIST?

Here Are Some Hints That May Help You Through Your Ordeal.

Everybody dreads the dentist. The bravest heart quails at the thought of the man with the forceps. One who has been through many trying experiences with the dentist and who has made a study of efficiency in all directions claims to have made some discoveries that ought to be helpful to all. Here are some of his suggestions Your siege in the dentist chair will be greatly lightened if you will remember a few things:

Keep the throat moist by gargling from time to time as you sit in the chair with water mixed with some antiseptic preparation of an ordinary character such as every dentist has at hand.

It is not a bad idea before you go to a dentist to take a bit of chewing gum in the mouth to promote a free flow of saliva. If the gum has a flavor, that will be helpful and will check the tendency to dryness of the throat and the tickling sensation that follows.

Carry a large handkerchief with perfume or cologne on it, which you can hold in your hand and inhale the cologne whenever you have a moment's rest. You will find it very refreshing. While the dentist is at work the handkerchief will give your fingers something to clasp. This may help to divert your attention from the work on your teeth.

Relieve the strain upon your throat at every opportunity while the dentist is changing his instruments by lifting your head from the chair—for even a single moment—and taking a deep breath. Shut your eyes and think of some problem, some particular friend or of some one in whom you are deeply interested. This will divert your thought from the dentist's work.

Remember that most of the pain we fear we can escape. In these days dentistry is less painful than ever before. It will probably never be entirely painless, yet much of the work of the dentist is now done without inflicting pain, though, of course, it is always unpleasant to have any one operating with steel instruments in your mouth.

If a painful moment comes while you are sitting in the chair you can relieve it instantly by taking a long breath. Try it and see.—Leslie's Weekly.

Indoor Sports.

"That is a peculiarly fiery sauce you use. Are you fond of it?"

"No," replied Miss Cumrox, "but we always have it put on the table. It is so amusing to see people take an overdose of it and pretend they like it."—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Hard to Find.

"Do you know of any college professor who has a million plunks?"

"Can't say I do. What do you want with him?"

"Oh, we need several to be ambassadors abroad."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Such Is Fame.

"This," said the guide, "is Terpsichore, the muse of dancing."

"Well," said the young woman, "she isn't much of a dancer for these days That pose doesn't look like any part of the tango."—Washington Star.

An Animal.

"That Vassar girl may have lots of money, but she never was at a really fashionable bathing resort before."

"What makes you think so?"

"Why, she's actually going in the water."—Pittsburgh Post.

EDWARD BECK'S NEW PAPER MAKES APPEARANCE IN MONTREAL

Jules Crepeau, Against Whom Acqusations Are Made Appears Before the City Council and Says He Will Bring Proof That He Has Been Falsely Charged by Beck.

MONTREAL, March 21. — Editor Edward Beck's eagerly awaited charges of graft in civic affairs began yesterday afternoon with the first appearance of his new paper "Beck's Weekly," containing the initial installment of what Mr. Beck declares will be a sensational exposure of corruption in Montreal municipal politics.

The first person accused by Mr. Beck in an article over the editor's own name is Jules Crepeau, secretary to the city clerk. The article accuses Crepeau of being the go-between in several "dummy" deals brought about by the agency of Burns' detectives and it alleges that "detectaphone" records can be produced to show that Crepeau accepted "retainers" to act as agent for the pretended privilege-buyers. The article proceeds to give details of the alleged acts of corruption.

The City Council happened to be in session yesterday afternoon when Mr. Beck's new paper appeared on the streets, and Mr. Crepeau at once addressed a letter to Mayor Lavallee asking the council to suspend judgment on the accusations made against him. He added that he would be able to vindicate his honor.

Ald. O'Connell moved that Mr. Crepeau be brought before the council forthwith to explain the matter.

Several members objected to this proposal, on the ground that the powers of the council in relation to such charges were indefinite.

Ald. O'Connell, however, persisted in his motion. "My name is mentioned in this report as having been repeated by Mr. Crepeau to these people," said Ald. O'Connell, "and I tell the council straight that unless Mr. Crepeau is brought right how I will to-morrow morning take out a warrant against him."

Mr. Crepeau was thereupon summoned and he repeated his declaration that he could vindicate his honor and disprove the charges.

Mr. Crepeau said he had already instructed his lawyer in the matter. The article, he said, was a tissue of malicious and criminal allegations made for the purpose of ruining his reputation and blasting his career."

Mr. Crepeau yesterday afternoon went to his lawyer, J. L. Perron, K C., and asked him to proceed to take out a warrant against Mr. Beck.

Honest About It.

Of all the girls I have met
In many climes and various nations
You, Phyllis, are the one best bet.
(With several mental reservations.)

None has in such degree the art
With witchery of charm to cozen
My poor and fondly foolish heart
As you, sweet (bar a baker's dozen).

In rosebud cheek, in wealth of hair,
In lambent eye, in voice canorous,
No maiden can with you compare,
Except perhaps the "Follies" chorus.

Eschewing sentimental glee
(For which I hope you won't abuse me)
Dear lady, will you marry me
If Kate and Bess and Dot refuse me?
—Baron Ireland in New York Mail.

The Risks He Ran.

"Are you aware that you are imperiling your immortal soul, sir?" admonished the theological seminary professor to the untruthful undergraduate. "And, what is worse, sir, you render yourself liable to a cash fine not exceeding $2 and not less than $1.55 for such offense."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Social and Personal

Mr. Stanley Spence has been visiting in Norwood with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Girven.

Miss Davidson has been visiting Mrs. McMurrich, Toronto.

Mrs. Bernard Morrow, Water st., and daughter, Eleanor, have gone to visit her daughter and sister, Mrs. J. C. Loughlin, Estevan, Sask., and other points in the west.

Mr. J. H. Walker, of Port Hope, was in the city yesterday on business.

Miss Dorothy Hall gave a delightful bridge party Friday evening. Mrs. Travers and Mr. Geo. Hatton carried off first prizes.

Mr. J. Orde, Ottawa, is spending the week-end in the city.

Mr. D. J. Lundy, who met with a mishap at Toronto, has returned to his home.

The North End Bridge Club is meeting at Mrs. Dunsford's, Water street, this evening.

Mrs. R. A. Dutton, Toronto, is spending the week-end with her daughter, Mrs. Harry Huffman, 297 Boswell Avenue. Mrs. Huffman and her mother will be at home Monday afternoon and evening.

At the open meeting of the Local Council of Women yesterday afternoon the address of Mrs. (Rev.) Rollins was one of the best ever listened to in our city. It was clear, comprehensive, inspiring to higher and nobler things; one of the most convincing as to women suffrage, a very Beacon light as to what a woman should and may be; enlightening as to mothers and teachers co-operating and touching along the same line as Miss C. Boulton in her late address to the D.O.E., as to our responsibility towards our foreign population.

Mrs. Middleton's paper on "The Supervision of Playgrounds," was interesting and suggestive of very great improvements which may be adopted in the near future. Peterborough is to be congratulated on having such cultured and admirable ladies as residents.

And this is Orange Day in California! The warm glow and the balmy breezes seem far, far away, with such a long drawnout spell of zero weather as we are enjoying.

Mr. D. J. Ball, sales manager of the Empire Separator Company, of Toronto, will be the speaker at the Boys' Department annual banquet next Friday evening at the Y.M.C.A. His subject will be Talents.

Mr. Sidney Dunsford, formerly of Peterborough, has been moved from Ottawa to the North Bay branch of the Bank of Ottawa.

NORMAL SCHOOL LITERARY SOCIETY

The Normal School Literary Society held their regular meeting yesterday afternoon.

The following programme was very interesting:

Chorus—Forms I. and II.
Mandolin Solo—Mr. Nicholl.
Reading—Miss E. Smith.
Vocal Solo—Mr. Mallory.
Speech—Irish Statesmen, Mr. Butler.
Chorus—Form IV.
God Save the King.

OBITUARY

WM. JOHN KILLORAN.

William John Killorna, agted 21 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Killoran, 569 Concession Street, passed away this morning in St. Joseph's Hospital.

The funeral will take place on Monday morning at nine o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral and Cemetery.

Way to Clean Windows.

A contributor to the exchange department of the Woman's Home Companion says concerning the cleaning of windows: "There are so many 'best' ways to clean windows that one hesitates to offer her method unless very sure it is the way. Three or four ounces of emery flour in a heavy canvas sack about six inches square will clean and polish windows with greater ease than anything else I know. Simply rub the bag over the window. It also removes streaks from any glass."

Sachet Powder.

Here is a recipe for a sachet powder which can be made at home: One pound of starch, one ounce of orris powder, ten drops of essence of ambergris, ten drops of oil of bergamot.

Mix these thoroughly and rub through a very fine gauze sieve. If you wish to use it as a body powder mix it with coarse cornmeal heated till fairly warm.

ROSS LEFT $46,692.

Late Liberal Leader's Estate Divided Amongst Family.

TORONTO, March 21.—The will of the late Sir George Ross disposes of an estate of $46,692, made up as follows: Real estate—Leasehold, 3 Elmsley place, $8,600; freehold, 169 Macpherson avenue, $3,500; 257 Davenport road, $3,000; a house on Richmond street, Strathroy, $1,000.

The balance of the estate is personal.

To Lady Ross, in view of her dower, is bequeathed an income of $1,000 a year and the use of 169 Macpherson avenue for life. Margaret Ross, a sister, is granted the use of the Strathroy house for life. The balance of the estate is divided in eight equal shares among his children, Jennie, Nellie, George W., Tait, Mabel, Florence, and Duncan, and the children of his deceased daughter Margaret.

To Postpone Toll Debate.

WASHINGTON, March 21. — Consideration of the bill to repeal the toll exemption provision of the Panama Canal Act will not be undertaken by the Senate committee on interoceanic canals until late next week, despite efforts of Democratic Senators who favor the repeal to hurry action. This decision was reached late yesterday.

The effect of this decision will be to postpone any consideration of the toll exemption repeal by the Senate committee until after the House has voted on the issue.

Sugar Sifter For the Kiddies.

Seventy-five cents is the price of a sugar sifter that would surely bring joy to the heart of any child. The sifter is no more than a porcelain or china dog, with holes in the top of his head, from which sugar sifts. The dog, an overgrown, sprawling puppy, from appearance, looks at the beholder with a ridiculous grin on his china features that brings a smile ever to a grownup. Children appreciate quaint things of this sort and when they are purchased for the nursery table the little ones try to take care of them. The ordinary nursery dishes are too often carelessly handled.

PROGRAMME FOR COMING WEEK AT THE GRAND

Next Monday evening "The Grand" will again commence its usual six-reel programme of Motion Pictures. For Monday and Tuesday an exceedingly fine feature has been secured, entitled. "Brother Officers." This is a four-reel subject, and deals with life in the British army. In addition, to this two other good reels will be shown, changing every day. The prices will be 10c. for adults and 5c. for children. The management wish to thank the public for the splendid patronage given the celebrated "Kleine" feature pictures and feel confident that the programme which has been arranged for the coming week will please their patrons. Next week the first performance will commence at 7.30 and the second at 9 o'clock p.m. Matinees will be held on Saturdays only at 2.30 and 4.00 p.m.

ALL DAY MEETING IN THE TABERNACLE

The four days' special meetings being held in Bethany Tabernacle, will close with an "All Day Meeting" tomorrow with services at 11 a.m., 3 p.m. and 7 p.m.

Rev. E. J. Richards, the New York evangelist, spoke last night on the subject of the "Complete Christian."

To-morrow afternoon Mrs. Ekvall will address the audience in the native costume of China.

The service to-night will begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

All are welcome.

Embassy Can Receive Arms.

MEXICO CITY, March 21. — Provisional President Huerta yesterday agreed to permit the American embassy here to receive arms and ammunition consigned to it by the United States Government for the protection of American citizens in the event of disturbances in the federal capital. The arms and ammunition, however, have not yet been received from the customs house. "Little by little" is the manner in which Gen. Huerta proposes to permit their delivery to the embassy.

TORREON ATTACK BEGINS.

A Week Will Be Sufficient To Capture City Says Villa.

REBEL FRONT, YERMO, Chihuahua, March 21.—The rebel army yesterday advanced to the outskirts of Torrean, and the big guns were placed in position, preparatory to an attack on the city.

Gen. Villa stated that he expected to capture the Federal stronghold within a week.

Villa's army, numbering 12,000 men, had more than forty field pieces and an immense supply of ammunition, probably two thousand rounds to the men. The Constitutionalists have been moving to their bases by train, disembarking at Bermajillo and Mapimi.

From these points and from Yermo the march over the desert was begun, the Federal advance guards retreating without opposition behind their fortifications at Torreon. They tore up the railroad and destroyed the bridges as they retired, and the rebels following over the long waste of desert, some riding horses and others plodding wearily through the sand.

ADVANCING ON TORREON.

IMPROVING THE DAIRY HERD

In connection with the grading up of a dairy herd a great deal has been accomplished by finding out through the cow-testing work just how much milk and how much fat each cow in the herd produces and then disposing of the lowest producers. But there is another factor in the improvement of the herd which many farmers do not give the attention to which they should, and it is in regard to the sire used.

Many farmers are using mongrels or scrub sires. Just so long as they continue to do this, very little improvement can be expected in the offspring, and we have today as a result of the continued use of underfed, under-developed, inferior sires, a class of cattle which are, on the whole, too small to consume a fair quantity of food and convert it into milk. Many people object to certain cows because they are heavy feeders, but if they are the right kind of animals they will produce a larger amount of milk and our experience goes to prove that the more milk a cow produces, other conditions being equal, the larger the profit will be for the food consumed.

But the small underfed sires are not all mongrels by any means. Unfortunately we often see pure bred animals which have not received the feed and attention which they should have and are small, undersized animals and this brings us to an important point and that is, that a sire should not be purchased just because he is a pure bred. We often see farmers who have made up their mind they are going to use a pure-bred sire, go out and buy some small, inferior animal just because it is registered, and come home rejoicing. In the course of time when the offspring do not come up to their expectations they get discouraged and say that grades are just as good as pure breds, as it is possible in a case like this for them to be.

How to Select.

In selecting a pure bred sire first be sure that he is a strong, well-developed animal, and then ask for his breeding or pedigree. If it is an Ayrshire or Jersey, find out whether its dam or grand dam is entered in the Record of Performance and if so what their record is and find out if the sires dam is entered, and what her productions. If it is a Holstein, find out about the same things as you did in the case of the Ayrshire and Jersey and in addition find out if the ancestors of the Holstein are also entered in the 7 day test, the 30 day test and the eight months after freshening test. Just as an instance of official backing, J. K. Moore & Son of the Central Smith Cow Testing Association sold last fall to Mr. Clayton Telford of the Ennismore Association, a sire, the dam of which, in a seven day test produced 417.8 pounds milk and 17.3 pounds butter. In the milking period of 10½ months she produced, when a 3-year old, 15,000 pounds of milk and 525 pounds of butter and in 1912 won first prize in the pure bred class in the Dairy Test at Peterboro Fair. This sire has excellent backing.

THE GOODS TRAFFIC WITH CANADA

Some days ago the Austrian Association of Manufacturers held a meeting, which was numerously attended by the manufacturers and exporters, who are accustomed to export their Austrian made goods through the Canadian Pacific Railway via Trieste to Canada. As a result of the hindrance to which the Canadian Pacific have, as is well known, been subjected in regard to their emigration traffic, they have decided to suspend their Trieste Service and have already, in fact, withdrawn their Feburary sailings. A deputation formed from the most powerful members of the Association headed by Deputy Friedmann, waited on the Minister of the Interior yesterday and called the latter's attention to the great damage which was accruing to the export of Austrian goods to Canada, by the suppression of the Canadian service. On the basis of a most interesting demonstration of figures, it was shown how favorable the export terms of the Canadian Pacific were on goods like glass, bent-wood furniture, washing, felt, matches, porcelain, jewels, articles of luxury, etc., etc. Stress was further laid on the strong influence possessed by the company in disposing of the goods of Austrian manufacture in Canada and the fact was especially made clear that owing to the favorable direct connection between Treiste and Canada, business traffic with the United States had been stimulated. The Minister showed great interest in the information he was receiving and expressed the hope that the traffic, such as it had originally been planned by the Minister of Commerce, would very soon now be re-established to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. The Minister of the Interior further declared that in regard to the transient Russian emigrants, the formerly existing obstacles had now been completely removed, so that no further hitch existed to hamper the Canadian Pacific in handling their business.

An Old Favorite in a New Way.

At the Grand Opera House next Thursday, Matinee and Evening, the beautiful and realistic picture which has made Kibble & Martin's production of Uncle Tom's Cabin world-famous, are the little cabin of Uncle Tom, an old Southern road, Skinner's tavern, the ice-gorged Ohio River by moonlight, the grand old home of Phineas Friend, the wild rocky pass in Southern Ohio, St. Claire's home showing a tropical garden with its fragrant magnolia and orange trees, among which nestles the typical Southern plantation residence, the home of Eva; Corridor at St. Claire's, the great New Orleans levee and slave mart, a moss-circled road near Legree's, a street in New Orleans, Legree's plantation on the Red River with the cotton in full bloom, and the transformation entitled "The Celestial City." Kibble and Martin's version involves thirty important characters and is told in four acts and twenty-eight scenes. Twenty negroes are carried to fill out the pictures and introduce their plantation pastime. The production is transported by special train.

How to Make a Valentine Told in Tuneful Rime.

Get a white card and a pot of glue,
From a candy box take the paper lace,
Hunt tissue paper of pink or blue
And paste all carefully into place.

Cut out some doves from an old scrap book
And other pictures of flowers or trees.
(You'll find all these if you care to look,
And any of them is sure to please.)

Keep all these pretty things neat and clean,
Trim all the edges around about,
Rub off the finger marks in between
And see that the flowers are peeping out.

Print some words at the mouth of the dove—
Such as "I'll be yours if you'll be mine!"
Do all of this with a great deal of love
And then you will make a valentine.

Lincoln and the Boy.

One morning two senators entered President Lincoln's private office. With them slipped in a lad who had been waiting a long time for admission to the presence of this great man.

The president briefly greeted the two senators; then, turning to the boy, said kindly, "And who is this little boy?"

The child answered: "My mother is poor, sir, and I'm looking for work. I thought you might let me be a page in the house."

"Very good, son," answered the president, "but you'll have to see the doorkeeper of the house at the capitol."

"But, sir," said the lad, "I am a good boy and have a letter from my mother and from my Sunday school superintendent and my teacher."

The president took the lad's papers, ran his eye over them and then wrote upon the back of one of them:

If Captain Goodnow can give a place to this good little boy I shall be gratified.
A. LINCOLN.

Do you think the boy got the job?

Lincoln's Kind Heart.

The following story shows what a kind and noble man President Lincoln was:

One cold winter day Lincoln met a poor man who had been hired to chop up an old hut into firewood. The poor fellow was barefoot, thinly clothed and shivering from the cold, and he was so weak that he could hardly raise the ax.

Lincoln stopped the man in his work and said, "How much are you getting for this job?"

"A dollar," said the woodchopper, "and with it I must buy myself a pair of shoes."

"You go inside and warm yourself for a few minutes," said Lincoln as he took the ax from the woodchopper.

Then he swung the ax mightily and soon had the old hut split up into kindlings. He had done it so quickly that the man could hardly believe his eyes. The poor woodchopper received his money and bought his shoes.

Boomerang Tactics.

"What! A verdict of $6,000? I thought you were sued for only $2,600."

"That was the amount," sighed the unhappy defendant of the breach of promise case, "but my fool lawyer painted me in such angelic colors that he convinced the judge that the plaintiff had lost more than she realized."

Not a Bit Conceited.

Wife—You are positively the most conceited man I ever met. Hub—I conceited! Woman, there's not a conceited bone in my body. Why, another man with the same abilities would be absolutely carried away with pride.—Exchange.

Made Quite a Difference.

Miss Watson—Did Mr. Sark say to you as I entered the drawing room last night, Clara, "Is that the beautiful Miss Watson?" Clara—Yes, dear, with the accent on the "that."—Exchange.

An Unreliable Doctor.

Mr. Seabury came from the office one night and told his wife he had been to see the doctor.

"He said I was all tired out," said Seabury, "and he thinks I ought to go away on a fishing trip."

"But, of course, you don't believe him," responded the wife.

"Why not?" queried Seabury in surprise.

"Well," said Mrs. Seabury, "you didn't have any confidence in him when he told me I ought to go to Europe."

The Retort Valiant.

A libel suit was recently tried in an Ontario court, where the defendant had called the plaintiff a "d—— b.l.," which the plaintiff claimed was calling him a "blackleg."

The judge decided, however, that the expression did not convey that meaning and dismissed the case.

"The 'd—— old b.l.' decided against me," whispered the lawyer for the plaintiff (now a prominent Ontario judge) to a brother lawyer.

"Be careful or I'll fine you for contempt of court," said the judge, who overheard the remark.

"But you've just decided that the expression meant nothing," was the retort.—Toronto Saturday Night.

Willing to Oblige.

The leader of the Opposition in the New Brunswick Legislature —representing the County of Westmoreland —was once delivering a vigorous address in the House against one measure of the Government, then led by the late Hon. Mr. Blair.

"Oh, that my constituents in Westmoreland could hear me now!" he exclaimed as he denounced in stentorian tones some particularly obnoxious feature of the measure under discussion.

Mr. Blair motioned to a page. "Open the windows," he said.

New Hatchery Needed.

Twenty years ago on the First of March next, a well-known resident of this city took out at age 28 a 10 pay 20 year endowment policy for $1,000, No. 43860, in the Sun Life of Canada.

The yearly premium he paid on the participating plan for 10 years only was.. .. .. $ 69.30
The yearly premium he would have paid on the non-participating plan for the 10 years is.. .. 62.25

Extra paid for profits yearly for ten years. $7.05

He received in cash at the end of 20 years, $1,279.25, that is, the $70.50 extra that he paid for profits yielded him $279.25, almost 400 per cent.

Would you not like something like that?

Or, he could draw out $736.45 in cash, which is $43.45 more than all he paid in, and receive a fully paid-up participating policy for life.

You can never obtain such results as these on the non-participating plan unless you die and die early, so that the price will not become too high.

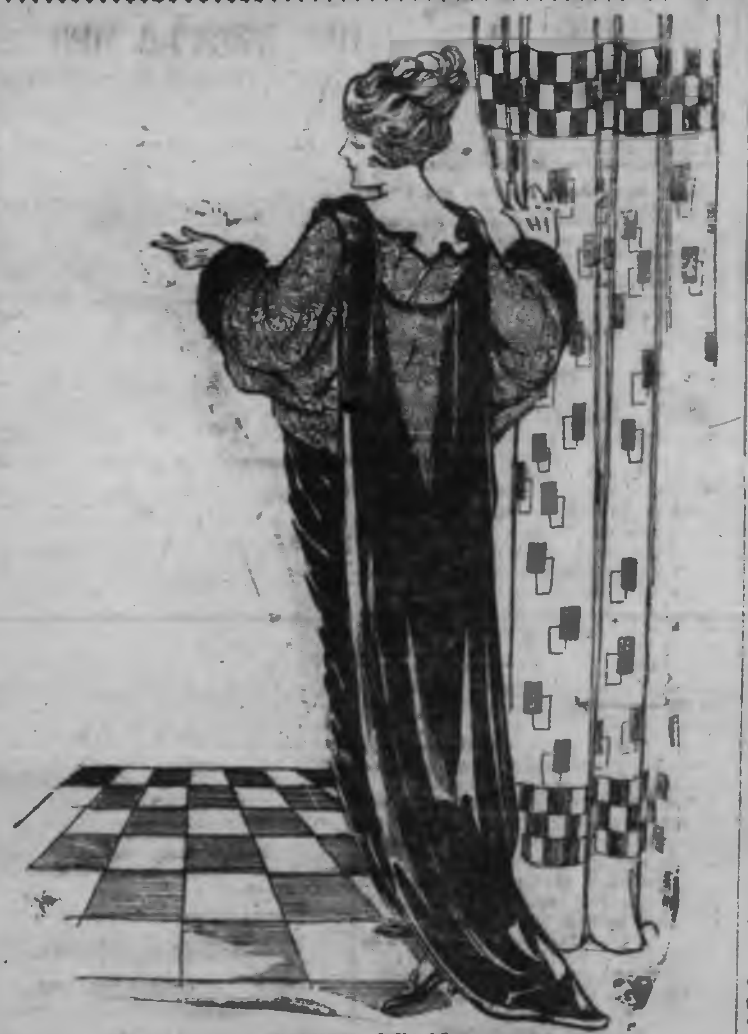
THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION



RICHLY REGAL.

This wonderfully rich evening wrap is done after the best manner of Poiret, the material that swathes the form, cut and seamed as little as possible, but draped to fall in rich folds. From the front the purple velvet runs up over the shoulders and down into a regal train. The only trimming is a bit of skunk on the sleeves, the loose front of the gold brocade body held as usual with snap fasteners.

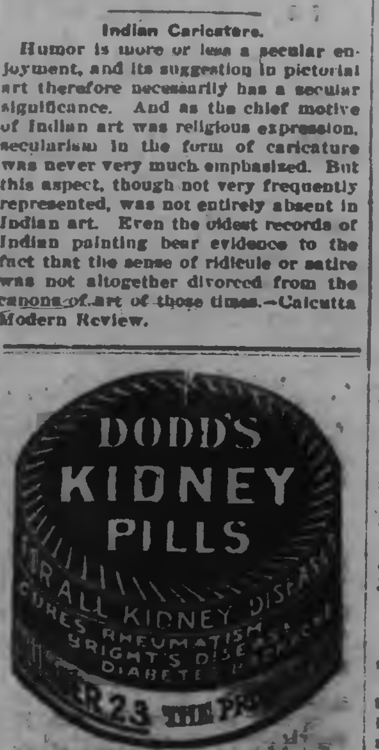
Muscular Christianity.

Muscular Christianity found an exponent in the curate of an English diocese of whom James Bryce tells in his "Studies In Contemporary Biography." He "had once, under the greatest provocation, knocked down a person who had insulted him, and the bishop wrote him a letter of reproof, pointing out among other things, that, exposed as the Church of England was to much criticism on all hands, her ministers ought to be very careful in their demeanor. The offender replied by saying, 'I must regret that, being grossly insulted and forgetting in the heat of the moment the critical position of the Church of England, I did knock the man down.'" The bishop—it was Fraser of Manchester—retaliated by asking the curate to dinner.

Indian Caricature.

Humor is more or less a secular enjoyment, and its suggestion in pictorial art therefore necessarily has a secular significance. And as the chief motive of Indian art was religious expression, secularism in the form of caricature was never very much emphasized. But this aspect, though not very frequently represented, was not entirely absent in Indian art. Even the oldest records of Indian painting bear evidence to the fact that the sense of ridicule or satire was not altogether divorced from the canons of art of those times.—Calcutta Modern Review.



DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Woman's World

The Fair Virginian Whom Kermit Roosevelt Is to Marry.

MISS BELLE WYATT WILLARD.

The entire country is interested in the girl whom Kermit Roosevelt is to marry. Kermit is the second son of ex-President Roosevelt, and while the Roosevelt family occupied the White House he was a great favorite with the public. He is now twenty-four years of age and engaged in business in Brazil. Recently came the announcement of his engagement to Miss Belle Wyatt Willard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Willard of Richmond, Va.

Miss Willard's father is at present ambassador at the court of Spain. Her mother was Miss Belle Layton Wyatt, a member of one of the oldest Baltimore families.

Miss Willard made her debut two years ago and is one of the most admired of the younger society set in Richmond. She is blond, rather small and with clear cut features. During the last two seasons she has been prominent in the social life of Richmond, Washington, Baltimore, New York and Hot Springs, Va., and it was while at the latter resort that she met Miss Ethel Roosevelt, now Mrs. Richard Derby, who was the guest of the Willards on a long motor ride through Virginia.

Miss Willard visited the Roosevelt home at Oyster Bay, and it was while there that she became acquainted with Kermit. She was a guest at the Derby-Roosevelt wedding in New York last winter, after which young Roosevelt sailed for Brazil, where he has been engaged in engineering.

The romance between the Virginia girl and the son of the ex-president was little talked about or suspected. She has been abroad since September with her mother and younger sister.

It is understood that following the wedding the young couple will take up their residence at Sao Paulo, Brazil, where Mr. Roosevelt is established in business.

Good Form

Neat Morning Attire.

There has been so much said and written against wearing in the morning old, worn-out silk gowns with soiled or tattered lace and keeping the front hair in curling papers that it is to be hoped that no woman with any self respect appears at the breakfast table in such attire.

It is really a disguise, for she would hardly be recognized an hour or two later when, neatly gowned, she may start out on a shopping expedition.

As far as possible washable morning dresses should be worn. A dress made opening down the front, in one piece, is quickly donned, and the many pretty sailor collars that are worn now are easily adjusted. It takes but a few minutes to put on such a collar and a little bow, and the whole effect is pleasing.

No woman would wish to sit at the breakfast table opposite a man who wore soiled clothing and presented an unkempt appearance. A man's eyes are quite as keen, even if he says little and kindly makes excuses in his heart.

Possibly if he said more his wife would be more careful, but she may have the idea that he does not notice what she wears, and so the careless habits are acquired. If that is the case, let her try appearing in a prettily made but simple morning dress some day, with her hair as neatly arranged as if it were for dinner instead of breakfast, and see if her looks do not call forth some pleasant comment from the man usually silent.

The highest compliment one woman ever had paid her, she says, was when her husband remarked, after many years of married life, that in all that time he never had seen a day when she was not tidily dressed for breakfast.

Greeting One's Hostess.

At a reception attended by men as well as women they enter the room together, stand first before the first hostess of the occasion, as there is always a head for such affairs, and greet her. She in turn presents them to any of the others in the receiving line that they are not acquainted with.

At a private house it is the lady of the house who greets them. If they do not know her they can easily introduce themselves, when the man says, "This is Mrs. Blank, is it not?" She replies that it is.

He may then say, "I am Mr. B. and wish to introduce my wife" (or whoever the lady is that is with him). Mrs. Blank should say she is pleased to see him, and in turn she presents him and the lady to the others in the receiving line.

At a very large, semipublic affair there is usually a master of ceremonies. He is supposed to make all introductions. If he is not personally acquainted with those invited he takes their cards and introduces them by name to all in the receiving line.

Acknowledge Gifts Promptly.

Prompt acknowledgment should always be made of a gift or a favor, yet it is surprising how many people are remiss in this respect. Many grown people have difficulty in framing a letter of acknowledgment, either in business or in social lines, and some speculation arises as to whether this branch is neglected in the average education or whether the perpetrators of some of such letters sent out have never been accustomed to writing a cordial note.

Oral thanks are all very well, but unless in exceptional cases a written letter should always follow within a reasonable time.

Little courtesies count for much in our relations to other people, and between the telephone and the hurry of modern life the youngsters are prone to think that correspondence is unnecessary and a nuisance, but as yet social usage has by no means done away with formal acknowledgments, and a gift is at least worth the cost of five minutes and a postage stamp.

When Making a Visit.

In accepting an invitation for a visit it is often a problem to know just what garments to take with one and how to pack them. For the short week end a small trunk especially made for the purpose can be had and is really far better than the ordinary suit case, which is a burden for a woman or even for a man, being ungainly to carry. Such a trunk should be taken at once to the rooms provided for its owner.

For long visits some sort of wardrobe is essential to the comfort of a woman guest. Her pretty evening gowns are creased in the packing and by hanging will be in much better condition. Where pressing of any sort is required a guest should not undertake it herself, but have a maid attend to the matter, paying a small sum for the attention.

After Theater Suppers.

Usually for an after the theater supper a menu has already been prepared and ordered served at such an hour. If left to guests each should express some preference, never anything the most extravagant, but the preference, say, for tea or coffee or whatever is really wished. If wine is to be taken the men of the party do the ordering; but, as a rule, the affair is thought out and proposed by some especial member.

PARKER'S TWO SERMONS.

And How He Got the Morning Congregation Back at Night.

A characteristic story of Dr. Parker was told me the other day, writes "A Man of Kent" in the British Weekly, by a minister who had it from an old minister who was much interested in Joseph Parker's early work as a local preacher. One Saturday he met Parker and asked him whether he had an engagement for Sunday. "Yes," was the reply.

"Are your sermons ready, Joseph?" asked the minister.

"I have the morning sermon," was the reply, "but I am not sure about the evening."

"Well, Joseph, what is your text for the morning and how do you treat it?"

Parker went over his text and the outline of his sermon.

"But, Joseph," said the minister, "that is very clever, but it is not the real meaning of the text. If you will look at the commentaries you will see that you are wrong."

Parker thanked him and went his way. On the Monday the minister again met his friend.

"Well, Joseph, how did you get on yesterday?"

"Very well," was the reply.

"How did you manage?"

"Well," he said, "in the morning I preached my sermon and explained the text in my way, and at the close I said: 'This is how I understand it. But learned men understand it differently, and I will tell you in the evening how the learned men understand it.'"

They all came back in the evening, and Joseph had a happy day.

CONVERTING GWENDOLYN

It Wasn't Hard After Jack Broke Into the Game.

By MARTHA OCBB SANFORD

At twenty Gwendolyn Rand was undeniably a personality to be reckoned with.

"I don't see where you get such ways, Gwendolyn," complained her mother. "Why, at your age I"—

"Yes, indeed," corroborated Mr. Rand, "at your age, Gwendolyn, your mother had settled down—she wasn't running around after all the young men in the neighborhood."

"Oh, daddy!" remonstrated Gwendolyn. "I think you might be a little more gallant."

"Well, well, the young men weren't all running after her, then," amended Mr. Rand, softening at the hurt look in Gwendolyn's big brown eyes. "But it doesn't look well either way. I can't understand where"—

"Mother was brought up in a convent, you remember. I'm the product of coeducation," ventured Gwendolyn.

"H'm!" reflected Mr. Rand. "That may be the reason, but the remedy is your Aunt Abiatha."

Gwendolyn gave a little gasp of apprehension.

"Yes, my dear," continued Mr. Rand, "your mother and I have decided to send you down to Florida to spend the winter with your Aunt Abiatha."

"She will teach you the things a girl of your age ought to know, daughter," added Gwendolyn's mother dolefully, "things which I have somehow failed to make you take an interest in."

"In other words, I'm to be sent to a convent!" exclaimed Gwendolyn as she swished out of the room, her head high in air, but her eyes glistening with unshed tears.

Aunt Abiatha's spacious, old fashioned house merited kinder verdict than Gwendolyn bestowed upon it at first glance. Once up in her cosy bedroom, however, with its chintz covered four poster and French windows opening out on to a little rose covered porch, the girl's heart melted in spite of herself, and she threw both arms around Aunt Abiatha, completely submissive—for the time being.

But after the novelty of dusting, sewing and cooking began to resolve itself into routine Gwendolyn suddenly balked.

"Now I know how to do all these prosaic things, Aunt Abiatha," she argued, "what's the use of doing them day after day? There are so many real live things to do in the world. Let's give a garden party or something, Aunt Abiatha. Are there any male inhabitants in Centerville that we could hire to come, do you think?"

"Gwendolyn, my dear, how you talk! Of course there are," Aunt Abiatha was startled into admitting. "There's young Jack Heyward for one."

"What's he like?"

"Very thoughtful and polite," replied Aunt Abiatha loyally. "He comes of one of our best families."

"Poor thing!" muttered Gwendolyn.

"What did you say, dear?"

"I asked what he does for a living?" prevaricated Gwendolyn unblushingly.

"Why, he manages his father's estate, of course. He's a country gentleman."

"Oh," commented Gwendolyn indifferently, "he must be a very provincial kind of person. I don't think I should like him."

"Well, of all things, Gwendolyn!" bristled Aunt Abiatha. "Of course you'd like him. Every one does. I'll ask him to call."

An afternoon or two later as Gwendolyn was reclining in the hammock on her little porch engrossed in a novel she became suddenly conscious that the front doorbell had been ringing for some time. On the veranda below she could hear Aunt Abiatha rocking to and fro.

"The front doorbell's ringing, Aunt Abiatha!" she called, jumping up. "If it's that 'polite and thoughtful young country gentleman' please don't disturb me. I'm in the midst of an awfully exciting love story."

A hearty masculine laugh followed Gwendolyn's declaration.

It aroused her curiosity, but also her indignation, and she re-established herself in the hammock, determined not to display the slightest interest, whatever happened.

But the next thing she heard startled her into a sitting posture.

"Now, Aunt Abiatha, will you introduce us?"

Gwendolyn, walking to the rail of the porch, could hardly believe her eyes. There on the roof of the veranda, not ten feet away from her, sat an extremely good looking young man. And there on the lawn stood Aunt Abiatha, the picture of dismay and disapproval.

"Gwendolyn," she called up, "this is Mr. Heyward. Jack, my niece, Miss Rand. I never saw such goings on in my life. Go right into your room, Gwendolyn!"

Gwendolyn did not budge. She only laughed and laughed until Aunt Abiatha finally joined in.

But such a triangular situation was not over encouraging, especially since Aunt Abiatha refused to leave her angle of observation, so eventually they all adjourned to the downstairs veranda for afternoon tea.

"So you're a climber, Mr. Heyward?" Gwendolyn observed archly, taking advantage of Aunt Abiatha's absence in the kitchen

"Given sufficient incentive—yes," Jack answered lightly. "I couldn't stand down there below, you know, and let a fellow in a book get ahead of me."

"Get ahead of you?"

"Well, absorb your interest to the exclusion of a real human being," explained Jack.

"You took an awful risk," laughed Gwendolyn.

"Oh, that was nothing!" Jack boasted. "I'm used to all sorts of athletic stunts, you know."

"That isn't the kind of risk I meant exactly," Gwendolyn enlightened him.

"Well, how did you like him?" beamed Aunt Abiatha after the caller's departure.

"Not very well," said Gwendolyn, shaking her head dubiously. "He's so bold and conceited."

"But, my dear," hastily interposed Aunt Abiatha, "you mustn't judge him from first appearances. Jack was a little queer today. I don't know what was the matter with him. But we'll have him in often, and you must be polite to him, Gwendolyn."

And that was how a most audacious courtship came to be carried on right under Aunt Abiatha's eyes.

"Gwendolyn," asked Jack dreamily one sunny morning as they sat together in the fragrant rose garden, "how did you ever happen to come down to this quiet little spot anyhow? I should imagine you'd love all the gay things of life—dances, theaters, dinners and all that, you know. Don't you?"

"No, you're all wrong," answered Gwendolyn slowly, hiding her face in the flowers she had gathered. "I love something quite different."

For a few minutes the birds in the garden had it all to themselves, so suddenly still were the two people who sat there.

"Gwendolyn," Jack finally found himself asking in a husky voice quite unlike his own, "do you really love it down here—the quiet, lazy life we lead?"

Gwendolyn nodded, but did not lift her face.

"Love it enough to stay with me, dearest?"

Gwendolyn nodded again.

"Look up at me, you fraud," Jack commanded, taking her joyfully into his arms.

"I can't," Gwendolyn protested, blinking. "There's something in my eye."

"Oh, let me get it out, sweetheart," implored Jack sympathetically. "What is it, darling?"

"A tear, I think," confessed the mischievous Gwendolyn.

Half an hour later Jack sat talking with Aunt Abiatha on the porch. Gwendolyn was scribbling her daily line to her mother.

"Read that, Aunt Abiatha," the girl called suddenly, holding out a sheet of note paper. "It has something about you in it."

And this is what the astonished Aunt Abiatha read:

> Dearest Mother and Dad—I want you to come down here just as quick as you can. I am to be married at Aunt Abiatha's two weeks from today. The wedding will be very quiet. Aunt Abiatha fully approves of my engagement—in fact, she has done everything in her power to bring it about. Please bring my trousseau along with you. Your loving GWENDOLYN.

Weighing Transfers.

The flimsy transfer slips taken in on street railroads by the tens and hundreds of thousands each day are now counted in many company offices instantaneously by scales, thus saving a great amount of clerical labor. All the transfers that are to be counted are dumped on the main pan of the scales. Then a few transfers of the same kind—about twenty-five, for instance—are placed in a small pan up among the balances of the machine, and the operator slides a weight along a bar until the scales balance. Figures on the bar then show that if there are twenty-five transfers in the small pan there are, say, 462 2-5 that number of transfers in the main pan, or 11,560 transfers, and the machine even does the figuring.—Exchange.

MEASURING A RIVER.

How Napoleon's Engineer Found Its Width Without Instruments.

An engineer found himself summoned one day into the presence of his commander. Napoleon stood on the bank of a wide river gazing across to where the enemy had planted batteries, which he desired to attack with artillery.

"How wide is that river?" was the question put to the engineer.

"Let me get my instruments," was the reply as he turned to go for them.

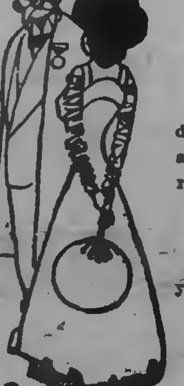
"I must know at once," the emperor insisted.

The engineer went down to the level bank of the river and, standing erect, gradually bent his head forward till the edge of his hat brim just touched the line from his eyes to the water line at the opposite bank of the river. Then, keeping his head bent as it was, he wheeled a quarter turn till his eyes looked along the hat brim and met the land at a point on the same side of the river on which he stood. Here he noted a rock or tree near the point at which his eyes met the ground and, calling a soldier, directed that a stake be driven near that point as he should direct. Then, by motioning just where to drive the stake, he fixed the point at which the line from hat brim and eye reached the bank. Turning to the emperor, he said, "Your majesty, the distance from where I stand to the stake is the width of the river."

And so it was, as you can readily see. If the emperor did not promote that officer—why, then the story does not end as it should.—St. Nicholas.

Mount Vernon.

Mount Vernon passed into the hands of the Mount Vernon association just prior to the war between the states. It was purchased from the Washington heirs for $200,000. Of the purchase money about half was raised by Edward Everett through his lectures and the balance by the ladies of the association. Each state represented in the association has a special room in the mansion. The place is kept in faultless repair and vandalism is made well nigh impossible by the careful watching. During the war Mount Vernon was, by mutual consent, neutral ground, and the wearers of the blue and the wearers of the gray often met before the tomb of the great American, who was loved equally by north and south.



✱ ✱

Daring.

"Uncle George, did you ever do anything real heroic?"

"Oh, yes."

"What was it?"

"I married your aunt."

✱ ✱

It Was Up to Him.

"Why is he asking for a divorce?"

"Well, you see, his wife wears such wonderful be-buttoned gowns."

"I see, and sends him the bills."

"Yes, but that's not the reason."

"What is, then?"

"She doesn't keep a maid."

Heavy Task.

"He gives his wife half of all he makes."

"But he isn't working now."

"No."

"Does she have to get some one to help her spend it?"

Lesson XII.—First Quarter, For March 22, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xiii, 18-35. Memory Verses, 18, 19—Golden Text, Matt. vii, 21—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The topic of this study is entitled "Lessons by the Way," and in the verses for today we have lessons for all the way, always centering upon Him who is "the way," hated by His adversaries, rejoiced in by His people (verse 17). There is much in the lesson concerning the kingdom, for which He taught us to pray to our Father in Heaven, saying "Thy kingdom come." We must distinguish between the present age, during which the kingdom is postponed and which our Lord spoke of as "the mystery of the kingdom of God" (Mark iv, 11), and the kingdom itself to be set up on this earth at His second coming in glory.

The two parables of our lesson must be studied in the light of their setting not only here, but as first recorded in Matt. xiii. The closing verses of our lesson chapter tell of the desolation of Jerusalem until He shall come again. But when the kingdom comes Jerusalem shall be the throne of the Lord, a city of truth and a praise in the earth (Jer. iii, 17; Zech. viii, 3; Isa. lxii, 67). In Ps. cii, 16, it is written that the Lord will build up Zion when He shall appear in His glory. The kingdom was at hand when our Lord was here in humiliation, as was preached by our Lord Himself, and by His apostles, as well as by John the Baptist, but because they rejected Him and killed Him He plainly told them that the kingdom would not come till His return from the far country (Luke xix, 11, 12). He did not begin to speak in parables until they determined to kill Him (Matt. xii, 14). Then follows in Matt. xiii the seven parables describing this age of the mystery of the kingdom. The parables of the mustard seed and of the leaven in this lesson are repetitions of two of those, the former speaking of a great tree with birds in the branches and the latter of leaven in the food.

In explaining the parable of the sower our Lord said that the birds represented the wicked one (Matt. xiii, 4, 19), and a symbol once explained stands. We have seen in a recent lesson that leaven is always a symbol of evil. The teaching therefore is that in this age of the mystery of the kingdom or the time between the rejection and the coming of the kingdom, many followers of the wicked one will profess to be interested, but the teaching will become thoroughly corrupt, and tares, the work of the devil (Matt. xiii, 38, 39), will be found with the wheat till the end of this age. To all these deceived and deceiving ones He will have to say, "I know you not whence ye are; depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity" (verses 26, 27). Many shall come from all parts of the earth to share and enjoy the kingdom, while many who thought themselves deserving of it shall find their place where there is weeping and gnashing of teeth (verses 28, 29).

We must ponder well and lay to heart the words of our Lord to one of the best and most religious men of his day, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God" (John iii, 5).

Judging from the denial in our own times of the fundamental truths of the gospel, it is to be feared that many church members and many ministers and missionaries have never been born again. It is not for us to talk about few or many being saved, but it is essential that each one should know for himself that he is saved by receiving the Lord Jesus Christ as his personal Saviour, and that appropriating the great truth "The Son of God loved me and gave Himself for me," "His own self bare my sins in His own body" (Gal. ii, 20; I Pet. ii, 24). He is able to say, "I know that my Redeemer liveth." "I know whom I have believed" and, "having come to Him, I am not cast out" (Job xix, 25; II Tim. i, 12; John vi, 37). It is still the accepted time, and the day of salvation for all who will come, but when once the door is shut it will be too late. There will come a time when the despisers and haters of truth shall call and get no answer, shall seek and shall not find (Prov. i, 24-31). Our Lord said that unbelievers shall die in their sins, and thus dying, cannot come where He is (John viii, 21, 24). As in the days of Noah, it will be shut in or shut out.

In this age of the mystery or the postponement of the kingdom, the Spirit is, like the servant of Abraham, telling of the riches of the Father and the Son and seeking a bride for the Son, or, in other words, gathering from all nations by the preaching of the gospel of the risen Christ the church or body of Christ, but we must never confound the church with the kingdom. The church will reign with Christ in the kingdom, but the kingdom will include all nations, as it is said in Dan. vii, 27, "The kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven." There may be some great surprises awaiting us when we shall see Abraham, and Isaac and Jacob and all the prophets in the kingdom of God, and the twelve apostles on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel (verse 28 and chapter xxii, 30).

His reference to the two days and the third day (32) may point to the 2,000 years of this age, and the next thousand, which will be His reign of righteousness and peace.

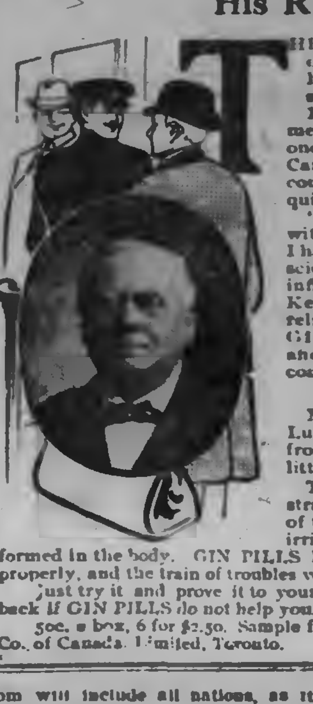
CHANGE OF CLIMATE DID NOT HELP

But GIN PILLS Conquered His Rheumatism



THE fact that men of standing and responsibility do not hesitate to come out and state frankly how much good GIN PILLS have done them, speaks volumes for this good old remedy.

Mr. W. G. Reid, of Hamilton, whose statement we publish below, with his permission, is one of the best known commercial men in Canada. His many friends throughout the country will be delighted to learn that he is quite himself again. He says:

"I have been for the last two years a cripple with Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I have tried almost everything known to medical science to relieve me of the intense pain and inflammation. I sought change of climate in Kentucky and other Southern points without relief. Your manager in this city recommended GIN PILLS and I have since taken eight boxes and am now cured. I consider GIN PILLS the conqueror of Rheumatism and Kidney Disease".

(Signed) W. G. REID.

Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica and all other troubles arising from weak, inactive or diseased kidneys, have little chance against GIN PILLS.

The curative properties in these pills go straight to the root of the trouble—the failure of the kidneys to keep the blood free from the irritating Uric Acid which is continually being formed in the body. GIN PILLS help the Kidneys to perform this function properly, and the train of troubles vanish.

Just try it and prove it to your own satisfaction. There is no risk—money back if GIN PILLS do not help you.

SLEPT 32 YEARS.

Swedish Woman In Trance From Fourteenth Year Until Forty-Sixth.

There are many cases on record of people remaining in a sleeplike trance for several years, these trances being often caused from injuries to the head, but no one has had so long a sleep as a woman named Caroline Allison, who lives in the little island of Okuo, off the coast of Sweden.

The sleeper of Okuo was born in 1861; she was a perfectly normal child, and for the first fourteen years of her life she was strong and healthy. She did not go to work till just before her 14th birthday. One day she came home complaining of toothache, and went to bed. Soon afterwards she fell into a deep trance, which lasted from 1875 until 1907, a period of 32 years.

While in this state she did not seem to see or hear, nor did she show any trace of feeling, for though her arms were pricked with pins, needles, and other sharp instruments she was not once observed to wince. Only once or twice did she seem to wake from her lethargy. On one occasion, in response to a cry from her mother she moved her lips as if to try and speak. When her mother died Caroline must have been conscious of the fact, for she burst into tears, though there was no other change in her condition. Two years later, when her brother was drowned, she also had a fit of weeping. For thirty years and more her only nourishment consisted of two cupfuls of milk a day.

After the death of her brother she was left to the care of a housekeeper, and then gradual signs of awakening intelligence began to dawn. Once she was left alone for several hours with food near her, and the food was seen to have gradually disappeared. There was no doubt that her trance had been broken. A few months later she regained consciousness, asking for her mother. She did not recognise her brothers at all, for she only remembered them as tiny boys. Gradually she regained possession of her faculties, until, at the age of 46, she had completely recovered from her trance, being in perfect health and well and hearty in every way.

She only remembers her early life, but nothing that happened during her long illness.

Brussels Sprouts.

Wash the sprouts carefully, removing any discolored leaves. Put in boiling salted water, cook for twenty minutes, drain and place on a hot serving dish. Meanwhile mix four tablespoonfuls of butter with two tablespoonfuls of flour, add a little broth or water and stir well until it comes to the boiling point. Season with salt, pepper and the juice of two lemons, blend thoroughly, pour all over the sprouts and serve quickly.

Overtime.

"Look here," said the office boy, "I think the boss ought to gimme a bit extra this week, but I guess he won't."

"What for?" asked the bookkeeper.

"For overtime. I wuz dreamin' about me work all las' night."—London Mail.

Onions.

Garlic, onions, shalots and leeks have long been cultivated in almost all countries, and their origin is very uncertain. That of the scallion is better known. It grows spontaneously in Siberia.

The Dignity of the Hammer.

"By hammer and hand all arts do stand," was the ancient motto of mechanics' guilds or associations.

In the hammer lies the wealth of a nation. Its merry clink points out the abode of industry and labor. By it are alike forged the glittering sword of contention and the dusty plowshare of agriculture; the ponderous engines that almost shake the world and the tiny needle which unites alike the costly silks and satins of a queen and the rough homespun of the laborer.

Not a house is built, not a ship floats, not a carriage rolls, not a wheel spins, not an engine thunders, not a press speaks, not a bugle peals, not a spade delves, nor a banner floats without having endured the blows of the hammer. The hammer teaches us that great ends and large results can be accomplished only by good, hard, vigorous blows; that, if we would attain usefulness and reach the full perfection of what we are capable of becoming, we must not shrink from the hardships, buffetings and hard knocks of life, but early learn to cultivate the power of patient endurance.

Duty Performed.

"I'm glad to see you home so early," said the lady of the house. "Now, you remember I told you to be sure and stop in and inquire how poor Mrs. Brown was getting along. How is she?"

"Why, really, my dear, I"—

"Aha! So you didn't stop to see? I never saw such an absentminded"—

"You wrong me. I did stop and inquire. But for the life of me I can't remember what they said about her. I'm forgetful, as you say, and"—

"Oh, never mind about that, darling. What do I care about what they said? Just so you stopped and asked, that's all that makes any difference."

WEEK-END OVER WITHOUT DISTURBANCE IN ULSTER

FIRST CRISIS IS PASSED

Premier Asquith Spends Day In Conference With His Colleagues, and Daily Chronicle Says He Will Offer An Election In July—King George Is Using Every Means To Maintain the Peace.

London, March 23.—Premier Asquith's statement that the movement of troops in Ulster is only a precautionary measure, is taken to mean that the Government's intentions in respect to army officers who did not desire to serve against the Orangemen have been misinterpreted, and an easier feeling has been created throughout the United Kingdom.

The public are calmly waiting an explanation of the Cabinet in the House of Commons.

LONDON, March 23.—The dreaded Sunday passed without the slightest disturbance of order in Belfast or in Ulster. But the gravity of the crisis is fully indicated by the fact that the King cancelled his intended weed-end visit to the Earl and Countess of Derby at Liverpool.

Their Majesties will carry out their projected visit to Chester on Wednesday, but will return to London on the first train Thursday morning. They will remain in town during the rest of the week.

The Daily Chronicle, the Government organ, says it learns that Premier Asquith will make another important statement within a fortnight on the Irish question, in which he will offer an early general election, probably in July, on condition that the Unionists will co-operate in passing the plural voting, Home Rule and Welsh disestablishment bills at this session of Parliament.

The King has thrown his influence earnestly on the side of conciliation, and seems to have made a personal appeal to the officers, who had resolved to resign rather than face the possibility of being called upon to fight in Ulster, and it may be taken for granted that the King is equally exerting his influence with his Ministers in the same conciliatory direction.

Proofs are not wanting of the desire on both sides that everything possible should be done to avoid any chance of conflicts. The Nationalists have abandoned their proposed parade at Londonderry, and Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Unionist leader, continues to voice his desire to do his utmost to avoid provocative acts.

An official report issued last night says that all the proposed movements of troops in Ulster have now been carried out.

"These movements," the report continues, "were of a purely precautionary kind, with the object of giving adequate protection to the depots of arms, ammunition, and stores, and other Government property, against possible risks. There has not been and there is not now any intention to move troops into Ulster except for these and like purposes."

The conferences between King George, Premier Asquith, and the other Ministers with reference to the Ulster situation continued all yesterday. Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, twice visited the Prime Minister during the morning, and Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, likewise conferred with Mr. Asquith.

In a general way the situation yesterday seemed somewhat easier, the public being inclined to wait with patience the expected statement in the House of Commons to-day regarding the movement of troops in Ulster and the resignation of officers.

The military service in the parish church at Omagh, County Tyrone, for the regulars station there was also attended by three hundred Ulster volunteers. At the close of the service all joined heartily in singing the National Anthem. Afterward, the volunteers were drawn up outside the church and saluted the regulars, who returned the salute as they marched back to barracks.

Ammunition Spirited Away.

DUBLIN, March 23.—Stock-taking at Curragh magazine Staurday disclosed that thousands of rounds of ammunition were missing. The stock is being replenished from the Newbridge and Kildare stores.

Quota Going From London, Ont.

LONDON, Ont., March 23.—Thirty Londoners and possibly more are preparing to go to Ulster to fight for the Carson forces should the threatened civil war break out. Secretary Harry Bennett of the Ulster Defence Fund says that definite action will be taken following a meeting called for to-night.

CHURCH PARADE FOR Y.M.C.A. BOYS

A Special Sermon at George Street Methodist Church

Next Sunday will see the inauguration of the annual church parade of the Y. M. C. A. Boys' department. The members will parade in a body to George Street Church, where a special sermon will be delivered by Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D.

The various medals, shields, and trophies won by the members of the Boys' Department of the "Y" will be presented at their annual banquet, on Friday evening.

ANOTHER WEEK OF SERVICES

Evangelist Pugsley to Remain at Park Street Church

The accommodation at Park Street Baptist Church was taxed to its utmost capacity on Sunday for the morning and evening service and special address to women in the afternoon.

Evangelist Pugsley spoke on Scars at the morning service and on Hell, at the evening service.

The large chorus choir gave splendid assistance at the morning and evening service. At the after meeting, four people took a stand for Christ. This makes 132 converts. The meetings will be continued this week.

Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Pugsley gave an address to young girls. The subject was White Slaves and the speaker held the close attention of her large audience as she pointed out the pitfalls and gave advice.

SPOKE AT THE T.A.S. MEETING

Rev. L. Minehan, who spoke on Temperance at the Church of the Sacred Heart yesterday, attended the meeting of St. Peter's T.A.S. held yesterday afternoon in St. Alphonsus Lyceum. Mr. V. Corkery, the president, occupied the chair. Father Minehan, when called upon, spoke very highly of the good work of the society and remarked how badly Toronto needed a society of the same description. He gave some very helpful advice to the officers which would tend to make their society even more noted, and as Father Minehan has had great experience his advice was gratefully accepted. Very Rev. Dean McColl and Rev. J. J. O'Brien as well as several of the members made a few remarks.

HARVEY PEOPLE ARE UP IN ARMS

The bridge at Gannon's Narrows is in bad shape and Mr. Scollard, the courier, refuses to carry the mail to Lakehurst. The ice is full of airholes in the Narrows and dangerous no matter how thick, he says. It will be a bad thing for Harvey when the tourist season arrives if it cannot let people across the bridge. But most of all do the farmers along the road suffer. Prompt measures ought to be taken to put this bridge in good shape.

No. 4 Company.

All members of No. 4 company are requested to be present at the Armouries to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock. Bring a friend.

TRAMPS' RE-UNION.

Arrangements for the great "Tramps Re-union" are well under way, and judging from the way the boys are taking hold, bespeaks an even larger attendance than the Hayseed Carnival. April 2nd and 3rd are Tramps' Days.

WHAT INDUCED HER TO MURDER

Mme. Caillaux Says Publication Of Letters Preyed on Her Mind

PARIS, March 23.—Mme. Caillaux, in her preliminary examination before Magistrate Henri Bouard, on Saturday afternoon, recounted the motives which induced her to kill Gaston Calmette, editor of Figaro.

Mme. Caillaux declared that since her girlhood she had been a reader of The Figaro. When it joined the enemies of Mr. Caillaux in the campaign against him, her indignation was intense.

"On Friday, March 13," she said. "The Figaro published a fragment of a letter signed 'Thy Joe.' That letter, I knew, was in the possession of a woman, as well as two other private letters written to me by M. Caillaux before our marriage. I sought counsel for the purpose of having the publication of these letters legally prevented, but in vain. All these things preyed on my mind and I determined to put a stop to the calumnies."

The investigation will be taken up again this week.

MAGISTRATE SENDS TWO STRANGERS BACK TO JAIL

One Prisoner Refuses to Answer Question Put by Police Chief --- Application For Bail is Refused

George Brickley and James Maloney were again remanded for one week by Magistrate Dumble this morning. They are held on suspicion.

Detective Newhall described how he and Detective Meagher had the prisoners under surveillance for some time. Maloney had met Brickley when he arrived on the C. P. R. train on March 9th. Maloney was accompanied by another man. Their actions aroused his suspicions and he followed them.

The three men then went to the Dominion Cafe. Witness asked them several questions. The answers were unsatisfactory, and they were all taken to the Police Station. Brickley refused to give any account of himself whatever. He claimed his name was Geo. Francis, and he was from Toronto.

Various articles were found, such as skeleton keys, and razors.

Brickley had $10 when searched.

"Where did the other man go?" asked Mr. 'Connell.

"Oh, he gave us the slip," answered witness.

Detective Meagher corroborated the evidence.

The evidence of Chief Thompson in regard to a certificate of the prisoners' serving of sentence at Kenora was strenuously objected to. Mr. O'Connell made an appeal for justice.

Chief Thompson: "Were you convicted at Kenora on August 15th, 1911?"

"I refuse to answer," said Brickley.

The certificate in question was an identification certificate from Col. Sherwood at Ottawa.

Mr. O'Connell asked for bail at $100. Magistrate Dumble, however, claimed it was unwise.

"Well, it is rather high-handed manner in which to deal with men's liberty," was the answer of Mr. O'Connell.

"This business needs getting to the bottom of," said his Worship.

ACCUSED OF BLASPHEMY

MAXIM GORKY IS IN PERIL OF GOING TO SIBERIA

ST. PETERSBURG, March 23.—Court proceedings are to be brought immediately against Maxim Gorky, the Russian novelist, on the charge of blasphemy, according to an order issued Saturday by the public prosecutor of the district court of St. Petersburg. Gorky, who is suffering from tuberculosis, declared by his friends to have been contracted during his incarceration in the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul, recently returned to Russia from the Island of Capri after an exile lasting eight years.

The charge of blasphemy was preferred against Gorky in 1908 in connection with his novel, entitled "Mother," in which he is alleged to have insulted the national faith. If found guilty the novelist's sentence, according to the Russian law, will be exile to Siberia, which, in his present state of health, his friends believe would be equivalent to a sentence of death.

MR. D. LA PLANTE FOUND THE WATCH

After the Loser and Her Husband Had Given Up The Search

Mr. Diono Laplante, 257 Romaine Street, was the recipient of many verbal thanks and promises of something better, Saturday evening, when he espied a ladies' gold watch and returned the timepiece to the owner, who was apparently on the verge of distraction owing to her loss.

The incident happened at the C. P. R. Station, in the early evening. The lady, who was accompanied by her husband, both of whom were evidently from the country, lost her watch in the snow at the station. They had given up the search and were about to leave when Mr. Laplante happened along. His eagle eye detected the missing watch half covered in the snow, and when he called to the unsuccessful searchers and returned the property, their joy knew no bounds.

"What's your name, and where do you live?" Mr. Laplante was asked. This information being forthcoming, the overjoyed couple drove off with many promises that they would not forget.

NORMALITES ADVISED TO TEACH AGRICULTURE

Prof McCready Gave Lecture at the Normal School

Professor McCready, the nature study expert, of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, gave very interesting and instructive lecture i nthe Normal School Friday afternoon. He was lecturing in the interests of the Department of Education advising the students to teach agriculture in the schools. He dealt first with the problem of rural depopulation; second, the measures taken by the government to solve the problem; third, how teachers could aid in solving the problem and what some teachers were doing.

"The returns of the census of 1911 are alarming," said the professor, "The rural portions of Eastern Canada are being depopulated. Ontario has lost over 100,000 people from her rural districts since 1871 in spite of the fact that there is much more land under cultivation than there was then. The Maritime Provinces have lost even more in proportion. Quebec is the only province that shows an increase and that is only 4 per cent., while the cities of Quebec have gained 34 per cent. since 1901.

The difference between the census of 1901 and 1911 shows that Ontario has lost 52,000 of her farming population. Then when we consider that New Ontario has gained a population of 45,000 since 1901 we see that Eastern Ontario has lost 97,000 of her rural population in the last ten years. Besides that we have lost our natural increase of the births over deaths of 1 per cent. or 120,000 people; also the immigration department stated in their reports that about 120,000 immigrants entered Ontario's country districts since 1901 and we have lost that together with several other smaller numbers making altogether a total loss of about 400,000 from the country districts of Eastern Ontario. Is not that alarming? When we consider that our cities are increasing their population by hundreds of thousands of people yearly, do you wonder that the cost of living has gone up?

I have heard it said it would be a good thing if meat went up to a dollar a pound as it would force the people from the cities back to the country. Rather hard measures to have to starve men back to the farm.

There are from 10 to 25 per cent. of all the country houses in Ontario vacant. There should be at least one family on every hundred acres of farm land in Ontario and one family to every fifty would not be too many.

Larger Rural Population.

If the cost of living is to decrease we must have a larger rural population. How are we to get a larger rural population? This is the problem and the Department of Education says it can be solved by education and it is right.

The education for the last half century has been educating the country boy and girl away from the farm. The subjects studied in a country school lead to High School work; High School work leads to a business life or a University course.

The Department of Education in 1871 tried to establish the study of agriculture in rural schools but were unsuccessful as the people did not want it. Again in 1898 they authorized a text book and said agriculture must be taught in rural schools but the people did not want it so the text book was withdrawn.

The farmers want their children to have as good an education as the city children and will not have the course of study changed to teach agriculture. "I can teach my children all the farming they want at home. I want them to go to school and learn something," said an old farmer, to whom I was talking. He was right, the only way to learn farming in on the farm and working on the farm; but agriculture is not farming. The study of agriculture arouse the childrens' interest in farming and tends to keep them on the farm.

The Department of Education has recognized that agriculture cannot be taught by the text book method and has introduced the plan of school gardens and home gardens for the study of agriculture.

It has established a summer course for teachers at the O.A.C. It pays the railroad fare, board and tuition fees of the teachers who attend and gives a grant of $30 a year to a teacher who takes two summer courses and teaches agriculture in the rural schools. To encourage the trustees to have a teacher teach agriculture

INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS WHICH WILL BE ATTENDED BY PETERBORO TEMPLE BAND

One of the most interesting features of the International Congress Campaign in London, June 11th to 26th inclusive, will be the presence of native delegates from South Africa.

In addition to a company of European Officers, there will be a party of Zulus and Kaffirs, composed of six adults and six children. Among these there will be Zulu comrades who will represent respectively a warrior, a witch doctor, a rickshaw boy, and a heathen woman. Others will be two "red-blanket" Kaffirs, a man and woman, and six children of a heathen Xosa tribe, which has come under the influence of The Salvation Army.

The whole party will illustrate what The Salvation Army is doing for the native people of Kaffraria, the Transkei, Natal, Zululand, the Orange River Colony, Mashonaland, Matabeleland, and in the compounds of the gold and diamond mines; and it is safe to assert that this part in the "great International demonstration, which is to be held during the Congress, will consitute one of the most picturesque and instructive spectacles.

The following scenes—to give but an item or two from the monster programme in course of preparation—will be depicted:

Kraal life. A dance. An incident in which a child is bitten by a snake; the consternation occasioned by the discovery; the bringing of a witch doctor, who goes through incantations; the doctor's failure, and the success which follows the application of a practical remedy by a Salvation Army Officer.

The children will give an exhibition of native child life, and will sing a number of Kaffir songs, as well as perform drills and dances.

What The Salvation Army is doing to disperse the darkness which still envelopes the natives of the vast continent of Africa will be described, and native Salvationists, won from heathenism, will tell the story of their conversion.

It is considered that the above will constitute the most effective presentation of life and customs in Africa which has ever been seen in connection with a Salvation Army Congress.

Of all the stirring spectacles witnessed on the famous Thomas Embankment in London, nothing has ever been seen that will compare with the wonderful Grouping of International Representatives, an event fixed for Saturday, June 13th. Think of nearly two thousand men and women in national dress, from fifty-eight countries and colonies! There will be Chinese, Koreans, Japanese, Maoris, West Indians, Lapps, Afrikanders, Australians, Hindus, Norweginas, Dutch, French, Canadians, Americans, Javanese, Italians, Swiss, Belgians, Zulus, etc.

This unique company will march to Hyde Park for a monster open-air demonstration that afternoon.

Almost every day some new feature of interest in connection with the I.C.C. is dealt with at International Headquarters. It is a stupendous undertaking indeed.

In addition to a special structure—"The Great Salvation Hall"—to be erected on a central site in London, other spacious halls have been secured for great meetings each night from June 15th to June 19th.

Then the C. P.! All day Tuesday, June 23rd, at the Crystal Palace. What a day that will be! Upwards of thirty engagements will be crowded into the twelve hours.

All the halls needed for the Provincial tours of the foreign representatives have been secured. The General and Mrs. Booth will personally conduct sections of these campaigns. They include Bristol, Cardiff, Birmingham, Sheffield, Liverpool, Manchester, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Sunderland and Nottingham.—War Cry.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE MR. LIBBY

Many Friends Attend Service And Follow Remains to The Cemetery

The funeral of the late Walter Libby, who met such an untimely death in the Detroit fire on Thursday afternoon, took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence on Parnell Street to the Little Lake Cemetery. Large numbers of friends and acquaintances were present as a silent yet faithful reminder of the high esteem in which the deceased was held and the sympathy which the citizens in general have for the sorrowing family in this, their hour of great affliction. Floral tributes were sent from the following: Wilson and Short Co., of Detroit, in whose employ he met his death; Mrs. and Mildred Dorothy, St. Catharines; Kate and Violet, of Windsor; the employes of Wm. Hamilton Co.; the Fleming family; Miss Lillie Buck; Mr. and Mrs. Emery; Miss S. Richardson; Mrs. and Jennie Gibson; Mr. B. Garside; Mr. J. Meharry; Mr. R. Cook; Mr. E. Hubel; Mr. Warmington and the Libby family. Among the out of town mourners were: Messrs. Herbert, Arthur and Gordon Libby; Mr. and Mrs. Martin Libby and Mr. E. Linington, all of Toronto.

Rev. H. J. Keith of Knox Church officiated both at the residence and at the grave. The following were the pall-bearers: Messrs. F. Reid, E. Gibson, A. Fry, M. Libby, G. Libby and A. Libby.

In stating how Mr. Libby went so heroically to his death the Windsor Record had the following:

"Unlike fifteen fellow workmen, he did not make a dash for safety when smoke started pouring through cracks in the floor of the machine shop. Instead, he thought of the employers and their property. He started out with the men when the shout of warning came but turned back immediately afterward and grabbing the receiver off the telephone frantically signalled to get central. Other employes shouted to him but he stuck to his post, yelling into the telephone mouth-piece in a vain endeavor to get a reply and notify the fire department."

SERMON ON TEMPERANCE BY REV. FATHER MINEHAN

Noted Toronto Priest Heard by Large Congregations at Sacred Heart Church

At both masses and vespers, at the Church of the Sacred Heart, on Sunday, very large congregations gathered to hear Rev. Father L. Minehan, of Toronto, who spoke on Temperance. He gave a forcible address.
